-The many subscribers to this paper will read with pleasure the letter ap-pearing in this issue from their old favorite "Broadbrim." The Apvocate appricates the courtesy and lopes for him many more years of usefulness.

ONE FROM BROADBRIM.

The Sixth avenue and lath street is one of the busiest centres of New York. On one corner stands the Grand Basar of R. H. Macy & Co., and in the immediate vicinity are some of the heaviest dry goods firms in the city, other busy marts there are, none more popular than this. Here aristocratic purchasers from Fifth avenue and Murry Hill, touch albows with sans culotize from Grand street and the Bowery; for here they cater to wants of the highest and the lowest, and here Dives and Lazarus meet. Street railroads centre here, over which thousands of people travel at all hours of the night and day. The elevated railroad rears its unsightly head over all, and the harsh rumble of its care offend the ear every hour of the twenty-four. A few yards from the corner of firth avenue on 14th street stands a quiet, respectable, alsepy old church, at the door of which you may see a placard, with the legend "Gospel services every evening at half past seven evolock. Come in!" You pass out of the roar of the streat and once within its portals all is changed. As a usual thing quiet reigns supreme. The prayers and exhortation are all subfact was never more evident than in the Assembly for the trial of Prof. Briggs. We have had within the past few months, Episcopal, Baptist and Methodist coventions, but the men at the Old Scotch Church were as dis-

Methodist coventions, but the men at the Old Scotch Church were as distinct from them as a Russian is from a Frenchman; not that they were all alike, for they were not, except in that indefinable something which every man feels and nobody can describe. One characteristic ran through the entire Assembly; they were fighters from the word go; worthy successors of the grim heroes who stormed the bloody heights of Dunbar under Comwell, or turned the columns of the flery Rupert on the field of Nasby.

Presiding over the august assembly was Prof. Hastings of the Union Theological Seminary, gaunt and wiry, with his long hair thrown back of his ears, the grimmest type of the old fashioned Puritan. Doctor Birch, well fed and round and solid as a rock, was there looking as if good rare roast beef, with green peas and asparagus, was intimately mixed up with his faith in the Westminster Confession. Marked men in the assembly were the Revs. Lampe, Malivaln; Booth, Hastings, Paxon, Hastings, Van Dyke, Shedd and Robinson. Prof. Briggs himself looked like a sick man, but it is certain as light that if he dies he will die fighting. 'Try me for heresy he cried in an excited voice; try me for heresy, and try me quick." Prof. Briggs was not without friends in that assembly, but his snemies were intensely aggressive and when he felt the hunt was on he stood like a lion at bay.

Though on a smaller scale one could like a lion at bay.

Though on a smaller scale one could not help thinking of Martin Luther before the Diet Worms. But friend and fos alike served notice to all outsiders to keep their hands off. The council at Chester Pennsylvania which de at Chester, Pennsylvania, which denounced Prof. Briggs as a heretic, is sharply told to mind its own business, and the whole of the Presbyterian world is given notice that this is a New York fight and that New York is shundantly able to take care of itself send her own

and her own.

The battle now on is not merely a revision of the Westminster Confession, but if the faith of the old Presbyterian Church is to be shaken in the most yital traditions of the Bible Union vital traditions of the Bible Union Saminary stands by Prof. Briggs, whom she has recently advanced to her most important Theological chair. She will not allow the stamp of heresy to be placed upon her distinguished son, till his case has been passed on by the General Synod. Whoever saw the ecclesiastical gladistors in council this week must feel assured that the fight will be the most bitter that the fig the question of the hour—who can fell?

But church matters have not solely occupied our attention; ah no, old Adam is strong within us and I fear we are prone to evil as the sparks ily upward. The week has been decidedly horsey. About all the hotels and public places, the interest of the hour was divided between the diamond and the race course. The horse interest loomed up quite early in the week and culminated in the sale of the late Senator Hearst's cracks, at Sheephead Bay, on Thursday. It was the day before the great Brooklyn Handicap which is called the American Derby, and the town was full of horsemen who had come to see the race. It is hardly necessary to say that the entire string of the dead Senator's stable was closely allied to the royal family and as heard from, no drop of plebelan blood had tainted the current for generations. The assemblage that gathered to hid on the stock was a sharederistic one, and was well worth seeing. Browned to this on the stock was a sharederistic one, and was well worth seeing. Browned to the interest there who had done time in the service.

But church matters have not solely feminance u. S. Booth for the feminance of the should feminate for the content for generations. The assemblage that gathered to hid on the stock was a sharederistic one, and was well worth seeing. Browned to him on the stock was a sharederistic one, and was well worth seeing. Browned to him in the service.

But the places and takes paid 10.5 feminance and takes paid 10.5 feminance on the stock was a sharederistic one, and was well worth as the feminance of the showe name of hand, do schemally over that the above same this true to the best of my knowledge and belief. Mott street, and there were many line gentlemen there who never reached State's prison, but who ought to have been there long ago. Real sporting gentlemen were there also, who like the turf and spend their loose ducats on it; prominent among them were Freddy Gebhart, Lilly Langtry's friend, and Foxhall Keene, the son of Jim Keene, the California plunger, and one of the best gentleman riders in the country.

Report has had it that Jim Keene was flat broke after the great wheat deal of three years ago, but it did not look that way on Thursday when his son Foxhall, bid thirty-three thousand five hundred dollars for Tournament. Phewl wasn't it warm, when Freddy Gebhard and Foxhall Keene were pitted against each other. The bidding on Tournament was started at fifteen thousand dollars, it jumped by 500 and 1,000 at a lick, till thirty-two thousand dollars was reached. Fred Gebhard raised himself to his full six feet and said in a knock out tone, "Thirty-THIRE THOUSAND." Little Foxhall on the other side looking as unconcerned as if he was buying a pack of cigarettes, said softo voce, and "live hundred. Freddy gave a quick switch of his cane, and the son of the California plunger carried off the prize.

Friday may not be the Inckiest day the prize.

Friday may not be the luckiest day Friday may not be the Inckiest day in the calendar, but it was chosen for the great Brooklyn Mandicap with a $20,000 stake and second only to the Suburban, the great race of the year. A field of twenty, and such a twenty; a man might live a life time and never see such a field again. I am in no sense a racing man; gambling I despise but when the flag is dropped I can feel my blood rush with a quicker current, and as they turn the curve and come thundering down the home stretch—gee whillkens! I feel as if I could bet my hat and my boots if I only knew the winning horse. I feel a good deal like the Rev. Ira Parsons, of old North Yarmouth did, when he was going to meetin' one Sunday and heard Deacon Johnson's old gray mare come pacing down the road, "Let her out, Sam, let her out," the dominic cried, as the gray mare almost reached his tailboard, "Give her the gad, Sam, give her the gad. For the Lord's sake and for my sake don't let that cussed oid plug beat you." That's just how I felt. The road to the races was a sight. Everything from a donkey cart to a six-horse tally-ho.

Our sisters who go to the races were out in full feather, and grugged by the o'clock. Uome in!!" You pass out of the roar of the streat and once within its portais all is changed. As a usual thing quiet reigns supreme. The prayers and exhortation are all subdued and low, and it seems as if the

great body of the congregation indulged in the luxury of silent prayer.
Everything about you speaks of substantial comfort and emiment respectshifty. There is no attempt at modern ecolesiastical foppery; no stunning plush pows, or brillantly ornamentod stained glass windows; no crosses or crochers, nor anything to distract the attention of the devout worshipper; but at I remarked all is solid comfort and respectable Christian grace. John finor, or John Calvin would have felt parfectly at home here; for here the law laid down in the Westminater Confession, has been preached in its purity for more than two generations. This is the old Scotch Presbyterian Church the great body of whose congregation still delight in oatmeal porridge, and who if no better provided, would go be milles through a snowbank to get an add Scotch huggis and a dish of hail, But the swest peace that has reigned there for nearly half a century was wildly disturbed this week when the Presbyterian Council met for the trial of Professor George Augustus Briggs, for hereay. The shock of this trial will be foit from Andover to Geneva, and from Geneva to the Cross of Edinburgh.

Three hundred and fifty years ago, Michael Servitus perished at the stake in the market place of Geneva, for less contumnsey than that of which Profeasor Briggs stands charged to-day, and the grim John Calvin looked on with saintly glee as the spirit of his surdered friend went up in the black smoke of the sacrifice. It was a strange scene that greeted the sye of the visitor to the Old Sectch Church on Monday. The assembly was Presbyterian to the core. Brains and scholarship were there in abundance, and there was an antire absence of commouplice met. I clou't know betwee
