"BLOVESLY AMPRICANS."

A Womms's Detra, of the Habits of Foreign Husbands. The wish of Robert Burns—that some power would "the giftle gin us to eps oursels as libers see us"—has often oursels as there are us in the bulk on served as a text on which to build up well meaning homilies, and yst, in spite of it, the best of us are too apt to criticise not ourselves, but the other fellow, In a recent number of the Cosmopolifan a writer who elects to be known as "Julien Gordon" (and a woman, by the way) thinks, with Burns, that if the lens of criticism should be inversed, the focus shortened and turned upon ourselves, instead of upon foreigners, our know edge of self might be very considerably improved. Her contention is that the male American islamentably untidy when compared with the average Englishman; that spotted clothes, unbrushed shoulders, froway hair, and frayed shirt cuffs are not uncommon on many of the trains and ferries that carry American crowds to the cities of a morning, and that the condition of things is worse when these "herds" (to use her own simile) return at 5 o'clock, after the struggle of the day. The general principle which she lays down, that taste in dress and the art of melecting the right thing for the right occasion lead us one step higher, may be admitted; but the sweeping and the gaunt chief executive said: dice that lessens the value of many of her criticisms. There is no man more careful of the proprieties than an American gentleman; and that type of man-hood is to be found in all classes. The hood is to be found in all classes. And sight of "a depressed collar and a sollod cravat" in the late afternoon is in the cravat" in the late afternoon is in the dozen times, but I never could find it towed sion of an immacuate shirt front or a have made it possible for the busy one. American to carry a bathtub and a change of linen in a handbag it is to be feared that Julien Gordon will continue to be shocked by the somewhat forlorn appearance of many of her countrymea. In referring to the tirades against the American woman's predilection for foreign lovers and humbands, our critic always allured by externals. The male not." And then she lauoches forth in praise of the dude. She asserts that he ans helped to encourage outdoor life among us, and that, over and beyond his, he keeps himself clean; that for this women like him. And so they should, and so they will continue to do. There is, of course, no accounting for tastes, as the Irishman said when his wife kissed the cow; but the assertion may be ventured that neither the Euglish lord whose trousers bag at the knees, nor the male caryatid whose ideas of outdoor life are confined to posing on the steps of a club house or opposite the entrance to a theater, will ever to the mind of a true American woman displace the manly worker, oven though he wear a "depressed collar and a solled cravat. Lord Tennyson's New Poem

No poet ever lived whose verse was so highly prized by purchasers of such commodities as is the verse of Lord Tennyson in these days of his ripe fame. He has just written a little poem, which has brought him an enormous price from a London publishing house, which in turn sold the right of production in various English citus, in Australia, and the United States. they are regarded as birds of ill ome and carrion feeders. But quite the re-verse is thought of the bird in southeastern Alaska, where the natives re-gard it as a very unfortunate even should one be killed.

One of the officers of the United States revenue cutter service, who has paid neveral visits to the southeastern and other portions of the Territory of Alaska, mentioned to a Chronicle re-porter the following facts about the raven of our Artic province:

"My first experience with ravens in Alaska was at Conalaska. There the birds fly around the beach and village in large numbers. On the hilltops surrounding the harbor they breed unmo-lested, and were it not for their scavenger work the fish offal that lays around the shore and houses would soon engender disease. The Alaska raven is a fine looking bird, as large as a turkey, and upon closer acquaintance a real handsome fellow. His coat is indeed black, but of a black glossier and more rich than allk and soiter than velvet, while in a semi shade the feathers are tinged with that peculiar color so often seen on well preserved blue black bronze.

is very funny to see these birds holding, as it were, a couclave. Ten or a dozen alight on the ground and walk to the meeting place with a stately, crect step, their every movement coul and ca-sured. Then an old (ird steps gravely into the mid ile, and the meeting begins with a series of guitaral and harsh croak, which godinally swell in voi-ume until the course lat of bords have joined in the debate. Along comes a dog, and for him they scatter, resuming their positions, when he passes, until the meeting again terminates and they fly off to the beach and bills. These birds are very seldom killed unlam it be by some sailor in pure wantonness. If you examine the bills of these ravens the peculiar construction is remarkable. They are a combination of a chisel, sciesors, dagger, and gimlet. The bill forms an important factor in the rayan's existence, for he has to dig on the beach for clams, bore the hard shell by repeated chipping, and again in pure mischief he will tear and break anything that his bright and uncerring eye lights upon.

"Just as soon as the bright sunlight appears the raven's leave their roosting place on the hilitops for the beach line. and over the village and shores of the bay they fly and wander until sundown invites them to rest. The raven is a fine flyer. On the Wind his movements are ell under command. Withstrong, decided bents he winnows the air fast or slow, never seeming in a hurry. But if occasion requires the raven can travel at express speed, and when it sees an-other bird feasting on some delicate manuel of offal down he comes from midair with his discordant caw, ready to share or steal the prize.

"The same characteristics are visible all along the southern coast of Alaska to Bitka. The natives from Yakutat Bay through the network of islands as far as British Columbia have an auclean ogend that the raven was the bird that brought light from darkness when the world was created. On this account they venerate it and the toten or raven is regarded as denoting the most illustri-ous descended family.

"The residents all over that purchase to migrate, All the residents all over that purchase of the birds are found state that they remain throughout the wine tax."-Her Pransiers Commission

Its annual retail trade is estimated at $3,000,000, and its wholesale trade, including iron ore, pig iron, lumber, and coal, at about $25,-000,000.

According to Mr. Nursey's carefully written report, ca able of the fullest verification, Escan ba is the greatest from port of the world. He tells us that during the navigation season of 1893 it shipped 3,700,000 tons of iron ore, or nearly double dust of all the ore ports of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota combined. Its inother output amounted to about 120,000,000 fost, white the freight capacity of the vessels entering and clearing from its port exceeded 8,000,000 tons. This compares with the bounges of the greatest separts of the world, which are: (1) London, 19,000,000;
