LOVE'S ATTRIBUTES.

Prue love, it is sunshine, And love it is gold-It makes the world Joyous And fair to behold:

It is good for the young

It is good for the old. Love lightens the burdens, It softens the care:

It nerveth the strong hand To do and to dare-And love, like a blessing, Oft comes unaware.

We know not the minute, We know not the hour, When love may be changing The bud to a flower,

The child to a woman Or man, by its power Sweet love is so gentle It dries up the tear-

True love is so tender

It kisses the sad face, Grown pallid with fear, It draws hearts together And makes each more dear

It shrinks from a blow, Coming in like a friend It expecteth no foe, Love, love should be cherished

By mortals below. Grand Iove will work wonders By sea and by land, The great storms of sorrow Are quelled by its hand,

Fond hearts in one band. True love it is sunshine, And love it is gold-It makes the world joyous

As it bindeth together

And fair to behold: It is good for the young It is good for the old.

GERDA.

BY MATTERMAY

It was a holiday in the little German Duchy of Sciatenburg, because it was the lady, kindly. the birthday of the duke's only daughter, Princess Olca.

The schools were all closed, and no work was going forward among the oung people in the fields and factories. It was especially their holiday, beause the princess was only a girl like themselves, except for her royal blood. At the west side of the eastle ran a
