Modjeska's account of how she jearned inglish is a lesson to those who would riumph in their undertakings. Located a San Francisco, with her husband and oy lying sick in the mountains of south alifornia, the plucky Polish woman started in with a viss to conquer our langange, so that she might speak it upon the stage. Her first teacher was a German, and several weeks were wasted in learning English which was flavored with such a strong German accent that it all had to be unlearned. The next teacher was a young Polish woman who spoke excellent English, and who taught Mme. Modjeska each day from 8 in the morning until 8 o'clock at night. Her first appearance was such a decided sucross that Modjeska telegraphed just one word to herhusband, and that word was, "Victory," In Modjeska's own words, a new career in a new country was open
