A Value Grand in the Wilderness. At a point on Mud Run, or Mud Run Creek, and where Panther Creek joins its head waters, with the first mentioned stream, stands an elegant new home of the dimensions of a good-sized country hotel. It was erected during the past year by M. S. Kemmerer, the well known coal operator and capitalist of Mauch Chunk. The place is called Hawkens, says the first name of the Record, and is so remote from all other human associations or lines of travel that no one, not even a book agent, could find an excuse of visiting it. It is in this isolated and romantic spot that Mr. Kemmerer desires to entertain his friends until a new club, which is now under way, is ready to assume full control of the building and its wild acres under the title of the Road and Golf Club. The greatest charm of the place is the beautiful view of the front stream, and the view of the mountains which may be judged of when it is stated on the authority of a gentleman who was present that in three days of last week a party consisting of Mr. Kemmerer and a few friends caught 28 trout.
