THE BOY BOATMAN.

A large pair of heavily hiden coal boats, or "browllarrs" as they were termed, sweet out of the Ohio and, catching the current of the mighty Mississippi, began the second stage of the journey to New triems.

The lambaring, cambrons crafts had come all the way from Pittsburg under the command of Joe Irick, a most skill-ful pilot. These coal boats were peculiarly constructed vessels, but they are now things of the past, their places being supplied by large bardes, which must towed back and forth by stomars.

They were built of I unit place bards, carefully selected, and say places of lumber containing but a single knot was rejected. No nails were need in putting the timbers together, but wooden pins were called for.

In reply to an inquiry he was told that Wordsworth was at home: so he wrote on a slip of paper. "Thomas Cooper.

me twice yourself to New Orleans."

"That's a fact, Jim. But you see I'm.

how many times I've been down stream."
"That's not to be wendered at," returned the boy, respectfully, "for you were a pilot long before I was born.
But, look, yonder comes a high pressure hoat up stream," and Jimmy pointed to a dense cloud of black smoke which was pouring out of the double stacks of a large steamer that was approaching.
"Let her come, my lad, let her come.
She's not to becare out of our way. Now.

"That's it," returned the plot grimly.

"If willhums hadrib been a-cutting my his capers and kept his vessel where it telonged, you wouldn't have but to reach clear over the sale in order to save a couple of heaps of well and a number of regged boatmen going by you. "That's what the people at the plantation call him. But at New Orleans or Cairo he is known as Mr. Carroll,"

"Then, boy," exclaimed the idulf old phot, shapping Jimmy on the shoulder, "you've done a big stroke of work for yourself this day, and we'll see you a linear that he is an intent observer of everything that he is an intent observer. "Then, hor, exclasined the bluir old pilot, slapping Jimmy on the shoulder, "you've done a big stroke of work for yourself this day, and we'll see you a "Branch pilot" within a twelvementh. I hope you'll try to teach that Wil-liams some sense. It's just this way, miss," continued Joe, turning to the wirl, "my netshow has worted for some wirl, "my netshow has worted for some miss," continued Joe, turning to the girl, "my nephove has wanted for some time to go starshoothing, but I've never been able to get him a chance, as if you'd just as hef ask your father to let him have a berth aboard the River Queen when we meet her at Orleans 'twould be doing him a great kindness."
