of a Theater-His Deales. As the public time know, every well ordered theater has commered with it a body of officials who are never seen on the stage except by accident. This mechanical staff differs in size and ability, but a fair number for a good force well comprise a stage carrenter and his as sistant, a property man, a flavman, two firemen and a gasman. We still cal him a "gasman," though the closet ful of knobs and leveranet letitors munt late electricity instead of gas in mos-modern houses. The new mode or lighting is more expensive then gas, los

it is easier to manage and there is much loss danger of fire from it. By the way, speaking of fires, the awakening of the authorities to more awakening of the amburities in most cities to a consciousness of the damper from fires in theaters makes no end of trouble for the stage carpenter, as well as vast introds on the peckets of the manager. In addition to the electric lights, Mr. Albaugh has lately added to his theafer a new nebstris curtain and a great pips for water, which rous along in the files and can be made to drench instantly every part of the stage should a fire break out among the inflammable mass of scenary and respective which must be always at hand.

Even in these days, when flamy combinations travel with caricade of special scenery, the theater must have a fair stock of its own. Drawing room scenes, wood scenes, cottages, hitchens and even barna most be in stock. These can be changed indefinitely by a few small set pieces to be used in front, thus affording

On the other hand, it is less troublesome than yen would suppose to fit age that scenery, when it is used, to the requirements of different houses. The only difficulty arises in the case of a vary small theater, when the cross constitues has to be cut and lapped.

There is a great deal of differences in the case with which scenery may be handled. Take, for instance, the storm scene in "Chepatra." The one used by Mme. Bernhardt was made in France, and was so heavy and moseive that it
