Lady Emily, his sister, was only 18—pretty, amilable and inexporienced—and should have been under the care of a very different person from her brother, wh for weeks gave little heed to snything except his own follies, leaving her much of the time alone or to such company as itted the cunning fellow to worm himself into his good graces—to play, drink and carouse with him—and occa-sionally go home and spend the night with him at his hotel.

In this way monsion the captain first got a glimpse of Lady Emily, and shortly after, at his request, an introduction to her by the careless brother. This was exactly wint the gamester wanted, and he at once set all his wits to work to win the unoccupied heart of the lady, and if possible make his for-tune out of the affair. The captain was reality a married man.

He did not go too far at once, for the without shot. Speedily gathering to-gether a handful of cherry stones, he loaded his gun with them and fired at the deer, hitting him squarely between the eyes, not killing him, however. The gamester, as all professional gamesters are, was an adopt in human nature. For the first he sought only to excite a cer-tain degree of interest, then sympathy tain degree of interest, then sympathy and then compassion, well knowing that if he could succeed to this extent the inexperienced girl would soon be in his power, like clay in the hands of the potentiar, to be molded to whatever evil purpose he might desire.

He took her hand with trembest worth having are those whose opinion is the fact. bling caperoise, pressed it, kissed it, "nobody" who is unpretentious, modest, rose grainally from his kin-s, glided his and who does his best to be agreeable, and who does his best to be agreeable, arm sround her slender waist, drew her need never four to meet. The valle Law of succession.

M. Violist has written an essay upon the causes which led to females being excluded from succession to the throne of Fraure. According to him, the principle was elaborated in the period of ciple was elaborated in the period of about 130 years comprised between the death of Louis X and the final triumph of Charles VII and became a fundamental law of the monarchy when the daughter of Louis X, the daughter of Philippe le Long and the daughters of Charles le Bel were deprived of their father's succession. These precedents established the law on the subject, but it is not generally known that the history of the disputed successions to the French throne commenced by the indirect recognition of female rights.—London Times. nition of female rights. - London Times.

Making a Poor Impression. Sometimes we meet one whom we would gladly please and proceed at once to put our worst foot forward—even that upon which we most hopelessly do limp. We contrive, by saturnalian aid, limp. We contrive, by saturnalian aid, to say precisely that which we would wish unsaid, and to expose our weakest side, even to weaken a side that is normally all right, during a 5 or 10 minutes' interview on some occasion when our good genius has "gone out to see a man." Afterward we think over what we said, and our screenic 'hind thought' brings up brilliant or at least sensible things that we might have said better than not if they had come to us.—Boston Com-
