There always comes a period in the history of a progressive community when a desire to keep down noise begins to show itself. In the primitive stages of culture—the saving, the barbarian and the suffarbarbarian—the passion for noise is always strong. All savages and bar-barians love to make all the row they can. Their joy and anrow both express thamselves in yells, walls and shorts and the beating and blowing of load re-sconding instruments, more especially the drain and the horn. The noise of primitive asrage warfare atmost equal that of the guapowder engagements of modern arms, although it was, as we reatricted the advice of their physicians, that wine or stimulants of some kind are necessary for them to take. The advice in itself is justifiable, but the lack of re-striction is culpable.
