

SANDER'S HORROR. Fearful Explosion of Dynamite Followed by Many Fires. FULLY FIVE HUNDRED KILLED. Mangled Bodies and Burning Timber Bed Sprung Through the Atlantic.

MADRID, Nov. 4.—The terrible disaster which has wrecked the port of Santander and destroyed hundreds of lives has sent a chill of horror throughout Spain. The story of this great disaster, in brief, is as follows: The Cabo Machichaco, Spanish steamer belonging to Bilbao, caught fire while the steamer was at the anchorage in the bay. The fire was discovered in the coal bunkers and it is believed to have been due either to spontaneous combustion or to carelessness on the part of the engineers. In any case flames broke out from the bunkers and soon raged furiously, so to speak, beyond the control of the ship's crew, though the latter promptly took steps to smother the fire. Finally, seeing that the fire was spreading in the bunkers and that the steamer was sinking, the captain ordered the crew to be landed on the shore. The remaining steamer of dynamite was destroyed.

The steamer was first discovered in the coal bunkers and it is believed to have been due either to spontaneous combustion or to carelessness on the part of the engineers. In any case flames broke out from the bunkers and soon raged furiously, so to speak, beyond the control of the ship's crew, though the latter promptly took steps to smother the fire. Finally, seeing that the fire was spreading in the bunkers and that the steamer was sinking, the captain ordered the crew to be landed on the shore. The remaining steamer of dynamite was destroyed.

Another remarkable effect of the explosion is that the unfortunate steamer sailed seaward, was blown in the air by force of the dynamite, causing the anchor to fall in a street 600 yards away from where the explosion took place. In falling the anchor struck a stone balcony in place and sank deep into the stone pavement below.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—The steamer John P. Frasier, which was wrecked at the Cape Machichaco, was the property of the Frasier Steamship Co., of Philadelphia. The vessel was on her way from Philadelphia to Havana, with a crew of 100 men, when she was wrecked on the coast of Cuba. The vessel was carrying a cargo of 2000 tons of sugar and 500 tons of other goods. The vessel was carrying 100 passengers, of whom 20 were killed and 80 were injured.
