Poetry.

The Last Rose of Summer. 'Tis the last rose of Summer, Left blooming alone; All her lovely companions Are faded and gone, No flower of her kindred, No rose-bud is nigh, To reflect back her blushes, Or give sigh for sigh. I'll not leave thee, thou lone one! To pine on the stem; Since the lovely are sleeping, Go sleep thou with them; Thus kindly I scatter Thy leaves o'er the bed, Where thy mates of the garden Lie scentless and dead. So, soon may I follow, When friendships decay, And from love's shining circle The gems drop away! When true hearts lie withered, And fond ones have flown; Oh who could inhabit This bleak world alone?

Miscellaneous.

CON. HULL—GEN. TAYLOR. In an article on the subject of 'Manners and Speech-making,' the Washington Republic relates the incident quoted below: Some of the Opposition journals find it rare sport to criticize Gen. Taylor's speeches and ridicule his manners. They say that he is awkward before strangers, and does not make a favorable impression. On this point there may well be a difference of opinion. Surely enough, he has not the manners of a dancing master, but it has been well said that he gave a reception to twenty thousand strangers at Buena Vista in a style that few dancing-masters could have equalled.

As to his speech-making, the people knew very well what kind of speeches General Taylor made before they elected him President. Heaven has bestowed divers gifts on divers persons. It was not necessary for General Taylor to make long speeches, in order to gain the popular confidence; and that confidence will not be withdrawn because he fails to make long speeches.

When the chivalrous Hull broke the spell of England's supremacy on the ocean, by the capture of the Guerriere, on his return to port he was complimented by the citizens of Boston with a public dinner. The cloth being removed, after a few preliminary toasts came that to the honor of the captain: 'Our gallant guest, who has secured for himself a name and a praise among his countrymen, and added terror to the courtesy of his country's flag. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and then all was quiet.

A friend, sitting next to the gallant captain, said, 'Sir, we are waiting for your speech.' 'A speech!' said the chivalrous but modest Hull, 'I can't make one—I don't know how.' A gentleman on the opposite side of the table exclaimed, audibly, 'Sir, you are in for a speech. Don't you see that the president is waiting for your response to the toast?' The noble Tar rose up and said, 'Mr. President, the gentlemen round me say that you and the other gentlemen are waiting for me to make a speech. Sir, I never made one in my life. I can't do it sir. I don't know how, sir. By thunder I'd rather fight the battle over again than try it.'

The rafters of Faneuil Hall were a little displaced by the truthful delicacy of the gallant captain; but we never heard that the newspapers of that day thought it a proper subject of ridicule, or that it impaired the well-earned honors of the chivalrous sailor.

DEATH AMONG THE FISH.—Yesterday, in Charles River, near the Western Bridge of the Worcester Railroad, it was discovered that the fish were dying by hundreds. By noon their dead bodies were seen floating down the river in swarms. They consisted principally of shiners, but there were many larger fish, even to perch of two pounds. The opinions as to this mortality were various; some think that the cholera had got amongst them, while others were of opinion that they had been poisoned by refuse matter thrown into the river from the paper mills above.—Boston Traveller.

'Well, Patrick,' asked the Doctor, 'how do you do to-day?' 'Oh, dear Doctor, I enjoy very bad health entirely. This rheumatism is very distressing indeed. When I got to sleep I lay awake all night, and my toe is swelled as big as a goose's hen's egg, so when I stand up I fall down directly!'

SELF GOVERNMENT.—Let not any one say he cannot govern his passions, nor hinder them from breaking out and carrying him into action; for what he can do before a prince or a present man, he can do alone, or in the presence of God if he will.—Locke.

He who betrays another's secrets because he has quarrelled with him, was never worthy of the sacred name of friend; a breach of kindness on one side will not justify a breach of trust on the other.
