Is there a heart that never sighed? Is there a tongue that never lied? Is there an eye that never blink'd? Is there a man that never drink'd? If so, head and tongue and eye Must tell a most confounded lie.

John Banyan's Gold Mine. In these days of rushing after gold as a seasonable warning, we copy for a perusal the following passage from Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress:

At the farthest side of the plain called Ease, was a little hill called Lucre, and in that hill a silver mine which some of them had for formerly gone that way, because of its rarity, had turned aside to see; but going too near the brim of the pit, the ground being deceitful under them, broke, and they were slain.

Then I saw in my dream, that a little off the road, over against the silver mine stood Demas, to call passengers to come and see; who said to Christian and his fellows—'Ho! turn aside hitherto, and I will show you a thing.'

Then Christian called to Demas saying—'Is not the place dangerous?' 'Not very dangerous except to those that are careless.' But withal he blushed as he spoke.

Then, said Christian to Hopeful, let us not stir a step, but still keep on our way. 'I will warrant you, when Byends comes up, if he has the same invitation as we, he will turn in hither to see.'

Then, said Christian to Hopeful, let us not stir a step, but still keep on our way. 'I will warrant you, when Byends comes up, if he has the same invitation as we, he will turn in hither to see.'
