The whigs of this county have a good ticket, composed of honest and capable men, who are bound to no cliques, no factions, and no particular men, but nominated solely with reference to their integrity and worth, and as such are eminently worthy the support of the people. To work, then, one and all. There is every incentive before us to do so, and if such an effort is made as duty calls for, the Cameronian ticket will not succeed in this county, even if the whole power of the Middletown Bank be brought to its aid.

The Democrat is "trumping" up Mr. Parker a good deal above his calibre, and would no doubt wish to mislead many into a belief that he would be a great man in Congress! This is all fudge. Parker is nothing more than a second rate lawver, who bullyrags witnesses, as many a man! in this county will remind him at the election, and when driven to the wall in law points, consumes the time of the court and the patience and money of the people by making a sort of political harangue to the gate election that he was "a Gibboney judges and jury. This he has done here, man first and last!" Fraud, Trickery, &c.

The Democrat talks around, about, above and below the charges made against its leaders of having tricked and cheated Gibboney, Rittenhouse, and others, and sets all down as imaginary, " and origi-"nated merely to attempt to excite dis-" trust in the minds of the democratic mas-"ses!" of the matter. That paper winds up its article by say-

"As the allegations have been made, how ever, we put ourselves on the country, and sub-mit the indictment to the adjudication of a jury of the people, at the ballot boxes in October.

This appeal would be very well had the Democrat ever informed its readers what those allegations were, so that they might be enabled to make up their minds on the question at issue. This it has never done, and probably never will do. The editor knows full well that in politics as in private life, there is a common courtesy due to public servants which cannot consistently be departed from unless sufficient cause exists. By the usages of the party Mr. Gibboney, as our neighbor we presume will not deny, was entitled to a renomination, and the question then arises why was he set aside! There must have been some cause, some motive, for doing so, or every honorable man will acknowledge that it was an act of gross injustice. and insulting as it was mean. Had the party come to Mr. Gibbonev and said . Sir. 'you have not carried out the views of " the democracy of Mifflin county, and we "cannot re-nominate you," that gentleman, or any other man, would have understood his position-but there was nothing of the kind said; no intimation given of dissatisfaction, but on the contrary one of the now firm of Ross, Dull & Co., openly proclaimed on the day of the deledreams, for in twenty-four hours afterwards a Sunday delegation of ministers plenipotentiary left with railroad speed for word of explanation, John Ross was proclaimed the nominee for Assembly! That is a statement of the facts; and now will the Democrat make it, and then go before the Jury of voters and leave them to decide. It surely does not expect a Jury to make up its verdiet without hearing both sides, for such a verdict would be in lawvers' phrase ex parte, and of course un-

Be it so-the allegations have been made, and are, among others, that Mr. Gibboney was defrauded out of a nomination to which he was entitled, and on this, according to the Democrat, the people will decide at the ensuing election. If a majority vote in favor of John Ross, it is a condemnation of Mr. Gibboney and his course; if, on adelphia some time since,

The Democrat's Answer to the Charges of the contrary, a majority decide against LETTERS FROM THE HILLS. Ross, the verdict will be THAT MR. GIB-BONEY OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN RE-NOMINA-TED. We hope now that all will understand the matter properly, and the position they occupy as respects the next election.

A correspondent of the Juniata Sentinel charges Parker, the locofoco candidate for ing else. We knew full well the Democrat Congress, with having declared in effect would not give an unequivocal denial to at a meeting in Mifflintown a few years the charges that have been made, unless it ago, "that the Whigs of the present day were within a week or so of the election, were the anti-war party, because they were because there was too much evidence of opposed to the Mexican war; that they the fact in existence, and if the defeated were, therefore, the lovers of the federal and cheated can only persuade themselves anti-war party of 1812, that the federal that the whole thing is imaginary, why anti-war party of 1812, was the lovers of no one will have much reason to com- the anti-war party of 1776; that the antiplain! But to the gist jority of the locofoco county convention " natur," as Sam Slick would say.

Trouble in Locofocodom. In more than one half of the counties in this State there seems to be a boiling cauldron of political hate among our locofoco brethren, which ever and anon breaks out into open and furious dissensions. Both these factions profess to dislike the whigs, yet it is unquestionably true that they hate each other much more cordially than they do their opponents. The Democratic Union and a few other papers of that stamp, have at different times suggested that it would be better to heal these breaches, as the votes of both classes might be wanted in the ensuing campaign. but thus far the advice is entirely disregarded, and the battle daily waxes warmer. The truth is, the whole matter is a FIGHT to break down the little employment yet FOR PLUNDER. It is well known that the left to the poor man. They come and Cameronians have not only been driven from all the principal offices along the American-cloth at 50 cents or a dollar the present regime of the canal board and but they don't tell him where he is to get contract of any kind. Do you not see that the adfice-holders and office-seekers, the con- vantage to them is nothing at all, while to tractors and would-be-contractors, that has the Andy Parkers it is everything? And had no parallel in the history of politics: they denounce each other as political seoundrels, and resort to all sorts of trick- up the forges and furnaces now lying idle, ery, bribery, and corruption to have men and get rich, as they allege the iron masnominated for office who will carry out ters can? Let them face the same music their political and other views. If beaten in convention, the other faction, whether Cameronian or anti, gets up another can- dad, that I'm still an all-fired tariff man, didate, both being apparently determined as your particular friends in town think, either to rule or ruin. In confirmation of and to tell you the truth I wouldn't touch this, we could fill column upon column of extracts similar to the following:

The Pennsylvanian in speaking of the difficulin the Democratic ranks of this Senatorial district, says that the hand of Simon Cameron is at the bottom of the whole dispute, and warns the Democrats of the district to "be on the alert if they would defeat his intrigues. Our friend Forncy is right—Gen. Cameron has caused the whole difficulty, and he has used the name of Mr. Anderson to enable him to carry out his base purposes. Will the Democracy of this Senatorial district suffer themselves to be led by Simon Cameron, or will they, like freemen, resist his impudent dictation .- Carlisle

The western papers bring us a long letter from Alexander McKinney, a locofoco candidate for But there is a point in the above to Congress in Westmoreland, who was set aside by the Locofoco conference in that district, and John Snodgrass nominated, in which he openly tioning their names and the sums given—$500 in one case and $1,000 in another. He declares, therefore, that notwithstanding the nomination of Mr. Snodgrass, he shall continue a candidate, and a portion of the papers of his party in the as they resolutely refuse to support the nominee of the conference.

Well, the old man made his promised visit to town, but not a word did he say on returning about the money he was to have got. At last I jogged his memory about it. · Dad,' says I one day, 'I shall soon need that money you promised to get for me, and, if convenient, the sooner the bet-

. Why Sam,' says he, ' the fact is I don't know exactly whether I can get it for you. I mentioned the matter when I got to town, but they said you was such an all-fired tariff man that it was no use to lend you any money, for it would do no good. And besides, Sam, von know the democrats have turned their coats on that question, and Andy Parker now says we must go in for free trade, because we can buy iron and other things cheaper in England than we can make them.

'So, then,' says I, 'you and Andy all turned Britishers. To my mind that's a new idea in Jeffersonian democracy, and I suppose if you'll go on in your progress, it won't be long before Jefferson will be voted a fool, Simon Snyder a goose, Madison a jackass, Monroe an ignoramus, and Jackson a mule-for it is as plain as a, b, c, that you don't stick to any one thing for more than six months at a time nowadays, and as you have discovered that all the professions heretofore made of sustaining our own industry, so as not 'o be dependent on British lords and ladies, in case of wars, was all gammon, it will not be long before you'll find out that it's more democratic to make kings rich than to give employment to your neighbors.'

But Sam, don't you see that we were all wrong before. I'm sure we were, for I can buy iron cheaper now than I did un-now resounds with the woodehoppers' axe Where are the miners, the coalmen, and hundreds of others who in by-gone years found ready and profitable employment? You have driven them away, many from pelled them to wander here and there in will have a hand in the matter. It's their search of employment, when nature has furnished material enough under our feet to give steady and "living" labor to hundreds. But for the woodchopper's axe, how would you ever have earned more than a precarious existence? Yet without a dollar in your pocket at the outset, as you have yourself often boasted, in less than ten years you became the owner of more than a hundred acres, much of which is good land, and although my chance was not so good as yours, yet I also by dint of industry at the axe, got together enough to give myself a homestead. We were then protected from heavy foreign importations ov a proper tariff, and had it been let alone, competition would have brought down the price as low as it ought to be brought. But the tune changed-such wiseacres like Andy Parker and others who make their money by $50s and $100s, by giving advice on laws they themselves don't understand, got it into their heads that we must buy cheap, and so they are now at work tell him that he can get British cotton goods at two or three cents less a yard than engineers, that faction cannot secure a the money. What matters it, I should like to know, to the poor man how cheap things are if he has not the means to purbesides, if iron can be manufactured profitably at the prevailing prices, why don't some of these lot speculating nabobs buy they want the laboring men to face, and I'll give them more credit for honesty and sincerity than I now can. So you see, their money with a ten-foot pole, if thereby I should trammel myself into voting for any of their clan. They are out on a fox hunt of some kind you may rely upon it, or Ross wouldn't have been put up for Assembly, and Stroup for Commissioner, and if it wasn't to gloss the thing over, M'Coy might have whistled Yankee Doodle to Mexican gals for two or three campaigns more before he'd got the nomination for Prothonotary. Take my word for it dad, there is something wrong: they gave you a small loan of money for the purpose of asking you a greater favo: between this and the election, and if they don't do it, there are no musketers in the 'Well,' says I, 'I don't. If you'd wanted the money, it would have been another thing, but to tell you the plain truth, my opinion is that, having heard you were not satisfied altogether with the ticket the leaders had hatched out, they've loaned you the money for the purpose of setting you straight.'

"Settin' me straight, Sam-what do you mean by that?' 'Why that between this and the election one of your good friends will give you a call, and after a sermon on the weather and things in general, he'll hand you a half dozen tickets of the settled stamp, you'll have to fork over the money again n less than no time.

. Well, Sam, you're sometimes right, and sometimes wrong, but to prevent mistakes I'll not spend any of this money until I see the bargain in black and white, and then I can choose for myself. And though I won't say I'll vote for the ticket or agin it at this time, may I be dot rotted if I'll ever be bought or sold like a sheep

The Telegraph is in working order to Huntingdon, and we are now enabled to talk with our neighbors up there almost as easily as if they resided within a stone's throw.

As indubitable evidence of a good ticket, we may state that every man upon our county ticket was a paying subscriber to the Gazette, long previous to his nomination-five of them since we have had the paper in our hands, and the others for two or three years.

The folks up the river have it that Roback, the celebrated Astrologer and Conjurer, has predicted a BIG BREAK in the canal between this and the election, for the accommodation of Ross, Dull & Co.

A member of the Town Council in forms us that that body has already contributed a considerable sum ($100) towards enclosing the old Grave Yard-a fact we were not previously aware ofand anxious as they are to see that venerated spot redeemed from being the haunt of swine and cattle, they do not feel at liberty at this time to appropriate more of the borough funds to that purpose. As individuals however they are willing to unite in any measures that will accomplish the desired end.

HOPPER, we perceive, has turned his attention for the present to a new inprovement that promises to be of much benefit to the public, as we hope it will be to himself. He is putting up a substantial dam across the Kishacoquillas just above the new mill, and intends to convert the old stone mill into a general machine shop, in which he will have a plaster mill, saw mill, turning lath, and half a dozen other notions. This will give employment to a considerable number of hands, and we heartily wish him success.
