A SACRED MELODY.

If you bright stars which gem the night, Be each a blissful dwelling sphere, Where kindred spirits re-unite Whom death has torn asunder here, How sweet it were at once to die, And leave this blighted orb afar-Mix soul with soul, to cleave the sky,

And soar away from star to star.

But, oh! how dark, how drear, how lone Would seem the brightest world of bliss, If wandering through each radiant one, We fail to find the loved of this! If there no more the ties should twine, Which death's cold hand alone can sever,

Ah! then these stars in mockery shine, More hateful as they shine forever. It cannot be !-each hope and fear That brights the eye or clouds the brow, Proclaims there is a happier sphere

Than this bleak world that holds us now There is a voice which sorrow hears, When heaviest wears life's galling chain:
'Tis Heaven that whispers "dry the tears—
The pure in heart shall meet again!"

The President replied briefly to M. sale by Kossuth's address, in substance as follows: Lewistown, Nov. 21, 1851.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

"I am happy, Governor Kossuth, to welcome you to this land of freedom; and it gives me pleasure to congratulate you upon your release from a long confinement in Turkey, and your safe arrival here. As an individual, I sympathised deeply with you in your brave struggle for the independence and freedom of your native land. The American people can never be indifferent to such a contest, but our policy as a nation in this respect has been uniform from the commencement of our Government, and my own views, as the Chief Executive Magistrate of this nation, are fully and freely expressed in my recent message to Congress, to which you have been pleased to allude. They are the same, whether speaking to Congress here, or to the nations of Europe. "Should your country be restored to independence and freedom, I should then wish you, as the greatest blessing you could enjoy, a restoration to your native land; but, should that never happen, I can only repeat my welcome to you and your companions here, and pray that God's blessing may rest upon you wherever your lot may be cast."
