Poetry.

National Hymn. My country, 't is of thee, Sweet land of liberty ! Of thee I sing! Land where my fathers died, Land of the pilgrim's pride, From every mountain side, Let freedom ring.

My noble country, thee-Land of the noble, free-Thy name I love! I love thy rocks and rills. Thy woods and templed hills; heart with rapture thrills, Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze, And ring from all the trees Sweet Freedom's song; Let mortal tongues awake: Let all that breathe partake; Let rocks their silence break; The sound prolong.

Our father's God, to Thee, Author of liberty ! To Thee we sing! Long may our land be bright, With Freedom's holy light! Protect us by Thy might, Great God, our King

The traveler assented to the trial. The horse was hitched to the post as proposed-stood a few minutes-the bridle was then taken off-he raised his head-pricked up his cap and slippers, and just ready to resign ears-looked up the street, then down the street several times-then deliberately and slowly walked past the house and over the bars, and to the stable door as described, and with his teeth and lip drew out the pin, and opened the door, and entered into his old stall. We hardly need add he was recognized by the neighbors, who fully attested to the ters, for some time gave a zest and an interest facts stated by the claimant, and that the to the conversation, until Dr. Dwight chanced to mention Dennie. Dennie, the editor of Newspaper.

Bisset the Animal Teacher.

Few individuals have presented so striking an instance of patience and eccentricity as Bisset, the extraordinary teacher of animals. He was a native of Perth, and an industrious shoemaker, until the notion of teaching animals attracted his attention, in the year 1759. Reading an account of a remarkable horse shown at St. Germain, curiosity led him to experiment upon a horse and a dog, which he bought in London, and he succeeded in training them beyond all expectation. Two monkeys were the next pupils he took in hand, one of which he taught to dance and tumble on the rope, whilst the other held a candle in one paw for companion, and with the other played the barrel-organ. These animals he also in-structed to play some fanciful tricks; such as drinking to the company, riding and tumbling on a horse's back, and going through several regular dances with a dog.

All this, it may be said, was very ridiculous. No doubt it was; at the same time, the results showed the power of culture in subduing natural propensities. Bisset's teaching of cats was a signal instance of this power. Having procured three kittens, he began their education with his usual patience. He at length taught these miniature tigers to strike their paws in such directions on the dulcimer as to produce several regular tanes, having music books before them, equalling at the same time in different keys or tones. first, second, and third, by way of concert. He afterwards was induced to make a public exhibition of his animals, and the well known Cat's Opera, in which they performed, was advertised in the Hay-market Theatre The horse, the dog, the monkeys, and the cats, went through their several parts with uncommon applause to crowded houses ; and in a few days Bisset found himself possessed

He trained six turkey-cocks to go through a regular contra-dance. He also taught a turtle to fetch and carry like a dog.

Dwight and Dennie.

The following old anecdote is worth repeat-Some years since, as Dr. Dwight was ing. traveling through New Jersey, he chanced to stop at the stage hotel in one of its popular towns for the night. At a late hour of the same, arrived also at the inn, Mr. Dennie, who had the misfortune to learn from the landlord that his beds were all paired with exclaimed Dennie, although I am a stranger for my lodgings. The landlord accordingly waited on Mr. Dennie to the doctor's room.

and there left him to introduce himself. The doctor, although in his night-gown, himself to the refreshing arms of somnus, po litely requested the strange intruder to be seated. Struck with the physiognomy of his companion, he then unbent his austere brow and commenced a literary conversation. The names of Washington, Franklin, Rittenhouse and a host of distinguished literary charac to mention Dennie. 'Dennie, the editor of the Port-Folio,' says the doctor in a rhapsody, 'is the Addison of the United States father of American belles-lettres. But, sir,' continued he, 'is it not astonishing that a man of such genius, fancy and feeling, should abandon himself to the inchriating bowl?"

Sir,' said Dennie, ' you are mistaken. have been intimately acquainted with Dennie for several years, and I never knew or saw him intoxicated.' 'Sir, says the doctor, 'you him intoxicated.' 'Sir, says the doctor, 'you err. I have the information from a particular friend ; I am confident that I am right and you are wrong.' Dennie now ingeniously changed the conversation to the clergy, remarking that Abercrombie and Mason were among the most distinguished divines ; never-theless, he considered Mr. Dwight, President of Yale College, the most learned theologian, the first logician, and the greatest poet that America had produced. 'But, sir,' continued Dennie, ' there are traits in his character undeserving so wise and great a man, of the most detestable description: he is the great-est bigot and dogmatist of the age !' I am Dr. Dwight, of whom you speak And I, too,' exclaimed Dennie, ' am Mr Dennie of whom you spoke !'

The astonishment of Dr. Dwight may be better conceived than told. Suffice it to say, they mutually shock hands, and were extremely happy in each other's acquaintance.

at night. Great search and inquiry were made for him, but no tidings of him could be heard and no trace of him could ever be discovered.

Almost six full years had now elapsed, and the recollection even of the lost animal, had nearly faded from the mind. At this period a gentleman from the east, in the course of business, was traveling on horseback on this road, on his way to Philadelphia. When within four or five miles of a village on the road, the traveler was overtaken by a respectable looking gentlemen on horseback, a resident of the village, returning home from a short business ride. Riding along side by side, they soon engaged in pleasant desultory conversation. The gentleman was soon struck with the appearance of the traveler's horse. glance of the eye cast towards And every him, seemed to excite an interest and curiosity to look at him again, and to revive a recollection of something he had seen before, and soon established in his mind the impression, that for all the world he looked like the horse he had lost some six years ago. This soon became so irresistibly fixed in his mind, that he remarked to the traveler,

You have a fine horse, sir.'

'Yes,' he replied, 'an exceedingly valuable and excellent animal.

What is his age, sir ?'

'Well, I suppose him to be about ten or eleven years old.'

You did not raise him then ?'

'No, I purchased him of a stranger, a traveler, nearly six years since.

Do you reside in this part of the country?' 'No, I reside in the Bay State, and am on my way to Philadelphia, on business. How far is it to New York ?"

' Well, sir, I really regret to interrupt you, or put you to inconvenience-but I am constrained to say, I believe you have in possession a horse that I must claim.'

The traveler looked with surprise and amazement, and replied,

"What do you mean, sir ?"

'I believe the horse you are on, in truth, belongs to me. Five years ago, the past autunn, a valuable young horse was stolen from my stable. Great search was made for him, but no tidings of him ever came to hand. In color, appearance, and movements, it seems to me he was the exact counterpart of the horse you are on. It would be hardly possible, I think, for two to be so near alike. But my horse was an uncommonly intelligent, sagacious animal. And I will make a proposition to you, that will place the matter in suck a position, that the result will be conclusive and satisfactory, I think, to both of us. We are now within a mile of my residence, lage before us. When we arrive at the house probably, is already as mad as she can be !

.... How a Mohammedan Duns.

In civilized countries, the collection of "had debts" is attended with much difficulty. The Mohammedans, however, have a method of managing a reluctant debtor, which is at once simple and efficacious. It is thus described by a recent traveller :

"Meeting a person in any spot, to whom "Meeting a person in any spot, to whom you wish to apply the khatt, you exclaim, "The Sultan detains you here." He instant-ly stands still; and, without bond or guard, remains there until delivered. The khatt is prescribed for light faults and for debt.— When a creditor has several times met his debtor and asked for his due, and the debtor while recognizing the debt, puts off payment, the creditor can, at discretion, stop his man, make him sit down, and then, with the point of his lance, he traces on the ground a circular line, saying, "In the name of Allah and in the Prophet! in the name of Sultan and the mother of Sultan; in the name of the tena (a particular office,) supporters of the State, thou shalt not leave this circle until thou hast paid thy debt." The debtor is obliged to re-main enclosed and sitting in his khatt until some one intercedes with the creditor, and he consents to release the prisoner. If the creditor remain inflexible and inexorable, the prisoner remains in his khatt until he pays his debt. If breaking the bounds he cross the line, and the creditor complains to the Sultan, the fugitive is pursued, taken whereever he is found, and severely punished.

An aged preacher once preaching from Revelations about the "beast with seven heads and ten horns," seemed to get into the brush. But he was a veteran and not easily surprised. Seeing that he had ventured into deep waters, he said to his congregation, 'Brethren, you may think that I am in a difculty to-day and can't get out of it, but I will show you better than that. Let us look to the Lord and be dismissed.'

'Ma,' said a little girl to her mother, 'do men want to get married as much as the women do ?'

'Pshaw, what are you talking about?'

'Why, ma, the women who come here are always talking about getting married, the men don't do so 40000
