

Gen. Scott and the People.
Gen. Scott's reception by the people along the route of travel pursued by him, shows that he holds a place in their affections far beyond that accorded to any man now living. At Hollidaysburg he remained several hours, and during that time he was visited by an immense number of yeomanry, who looked in vain to discern a trace of that haughty arrogance in his manly face that locofoco demagogues and scribblers ascribe to him. At Pittsburg, on Saturday, he was addressed by Captain Naylor in the presence of a tremendous outpouring of the bone and sinew, to which the General responded by thanking his fellow countrymen for the high honor they paid to him by this public demonstration, which, however unworthy of it he might feel, was exceedingly grateful to his feelings.

He disclaimed all right of appropriating to himself one-tenth of the glowing eulogy of his old intimate and eloquent friend, Captain Naylor, but it was a proud recollection to him that he had, under the Providence of God, been able to do anything in the service of his country to merit the approbation of his fellow-citizens. He said that, in early life, it had been his secret and cherished desire to do something for his country which would prove of advantage to it, and would call forth the approbation of his countrymen, and to do it in such a way as to make it harmonize with the well being of the whole family of man. Under the blessing of Heaven, (for which he had devoutly prayed,) and the favor of his fellow-citizens, he had been in some measure successful, but not to the extent of his youthful aspiration, or to that of the flattering tribune of his valued friend and gallant companion in arms, who just welcomed him to this city. He then spoke of Pennsylvania, and expressed his grateful emotions for the signal manner in which she had always manifested her friendship for the humble soldier who had been citizen so frequently honored in leading her gallant citizens to battle. He reverted to the gallant soldiers of Pennsylvania, both regulars and volunteers, who had stood by him with unflinching fidelity and bravery on the fields of Canada, and the heights of Mexico, and pointed the assembled throng to some of those who stood around him, who had shared with him in the fatigues and perils of campaigns of former years. This glorious old Commonwealth was the Keystone of the Federal Arch, and she had always been true to the Union, and while she remained so, and he felt assured she always would, the Union was safe in the midst of all the shocks which might ever be treacherously hurled against it. He loved Pennsylvania for this, as well as her many other great virtues, for he was himself a Union man; not a pulsation of his heart but beat for the Union, the whole Union, the great and glorious nation, which ought and ever would remain one and indivisible. His obligations were also great to Pennsylvania, for the unsolicited grant a portion of her people had conferred upon him by so unfeignedly and heartily promoting his nomination to the suffrages of his fellow citizens for the august office for which he was now a candidate, and if he ever reached that exalted position, it must be by the vote of this gallant State.

In conclusion, he announced his intention of remaining until Monday, and expressed his thankfulness that the discharge of his official duties had given him the pleasure of meeting his true-hearted countrymen of Pittsburg on this occasion. If his official duty had not required it, he should not have taken a journey during the Presidential contest; he regretted that he was obliged to make such a journey; but it had been made, as it was his duty to make it, and the spontaneous action of the people here was a source of unalloyed gratification, and would forever be cherished amongst his dearest recollections. He invoked the blessings of Heaven upon the people, and took his leave of them amidst their loud and enthusiastic huzzas.

The enthusiasm manifested in this State seems to be eclipsed in the west, as the following despatch, which we cut from the Ledger, will show:

CLEVELAND, Sept. 21.—General Scott's reception at this city yesterday, was the most grand, imposing and enthusiastic demonstration ever beheld. The banks of the Lake, for miles, were lined with people, notwithstanding a drenching fall of rain, waiting the arrival of the Old Hero; and when the steamer from the "Ohio City," and from Cleveland announced his approach, cheer after cheer resounded from every quarter, and were kept up until he was escorted to his quarters at the American Hotel by the military and the immense mass of citizens.

After he had retired for a few minutes, he appeared on the balcony, in answer to the prolonged cheers of the populace, and made a brief address, expressing the pleasure he experienced in visiting once more, after a lapse of eight years, the beautiful city of Cleveland, and thanking the citizens for their kind and cordial reception. After he had closed his address, he retired to the hall within, which was crowded by persons eager to pay their individual respects to their distinguished guest.

At midnight a grand serenade was given, and the General again appeared and acknowledged the compliment. This morning hundreds called upon him, at an early hour. About 11 o'clock he left for Columbus, amid prolonged cheers and firing of guns.

ROBBERY.—The dwelling of Abraham Blymyer, Esq., was entered on Friday night or Saturday morning by a gang of burglars, who got in at an opening above the door, and decamped with some fine silver spoons, &c., worth about $60 dollars. The same party, it is supposed, entered the counting house of the Lewistown Mills, where they got some $15 or $16, and also broke into the Railroad Company's Warehouse at the Depot, but found nothing there to pay them for their trouble. The shop of Charles Little, at the canal, was also entered on the same night, and a pair of calfskin boots taken therefrom. Jewellers and others would do well by keeping a watch for silver spoons or melted metal of that description.

DEDICATION.
THE ODD FELLOWS of Lewistown intended to dedicate their New Hall on Thursday, September 30th, 1852, on which occasion there will be a grand procession of the Order in full regalia, and an Oration delivered by a distinguished member of the Order. Invitations have been extended to a number of Lodges in the State, and many members from a distance are expected to be present.

By order of Committee of Arrangements.
Lewistown, September 17, 1852.

The Franklin Repository and Whig is now owned and conducted by Col. A. K. McClure, formerly of the Juniata Sentinel. His paper looks prosperous, and we hope his energy and perseverance will be amply rewarded, both politically and pecuniarily.

For the Gazette.
To the Sober Thinking Men of Millin county. The approaching elections in October and November warn us as we value our rights and privileges, to be active in our canvass with ourselves to ascertain for whom we should vote, to secure for ourselves and posterity the future and permanent enjoyment of those rights and privileges.

The formation of parties, while it subjects us to many evils, yet is productive of good. It marks the main points in which the people differ as to the general policy of the country, and by so doing, attracts the particular attention of the people to such leading questions. From the nature of the case, we cannot all expect to approve every act, or every principle set forth by each party; but it becomes us, after a fair and candid examination of the platform of each party, and after a study of their past history, to form our conclusion, and in accordance therewith, to cast our vote. If every one pursued this course, one of the greatest evils following the formation of parties, would be avoided. The fancied moral bond which makes a man either whig or democrat once, always so; which implies some kind of moral inpropriety, some kind of traitorism, a want of stability or firmness to him, who, convinced of error, chooses to change his vote from the candidate of one party for that of the other, ought to be discarded by every good citizen. The oft repeated reference to the democracy of our progenitors as a proof of our own legitimacy, is the course of a demagogue who wishes to deceive you, or the brag of one who has thought little of his words or the meaning thereof. Think for a moment of the egregious folly. Worse than this, of the actual wrong you do the country. When you say you are a whig or a democrat, and permit such a remark to bind you to the wheels of party, no matter what their course of policy, do you not see how you abandon every prerogative of the freeman? How you give up your best and richest privilege, the right of thought, and to whom? To a set of venturers, who make an easy living of such lifeless carcasses, and who will eventually destroy the existence of our government. And for what do you thus degrade yourselves from the high position of freemen to that of slaves? For the valuable and distinguished honor of crying I am a whig and have always been one; I am a democrat and my fathers were before me. This may be said with truth and honor. But how few cases are there where it is said from a pure approval of the doctrine of each party? How many where the pride of party begets the statement? It is with such feelings that I would draw your attention to the coming elections, and would ask of you to throw aside the shackles of party; lay down the chains which mark your slavery, and put on the robe of freedom. Allow me, if you will, for a few numbers, in which I will endeavor plainly and fairly to state my reasons for voting this fall the Whig State Ticket and for the Scott and Graham Electoral Ticket. If the arguments convince you of their truth, vote with me. If you think the welfare of the country demands a different vote, so deposit it. Each having done his duty, our rest will be sweet, and we may safely trust our country to the care of Him who rules over all. KISHACOQUILLAS.

For the Lewistown Gazette.
Mr. Editor:—Should Mr. Morrison be elected Director of the Poor, and for illustration let us suppose that the Poor House had a canal with a bridge over it—which bridge should some day break down with a team and wagon, laden with wheat, standing on it, wetting the wheat some, and scratching the horses somewhat; now how much would Mr. M. in such a case agree to allow for damages? Tremendous Outpouring of New Styles and Great Destruction of High Prices.

As, however, others prefer to dress in plain but strong clothing, they have also provided a bountiful supply of coarser material than Silks or Satins—all which they will sell, WHOLESALE or RETAIL, at prices that defy Tom, Dick, or Harry, Jew or Gentle, Mahometan or Mormon, Bhuddist, or follower of Confucius to beat.
