THE Nousekeeper.

Currant Wine .- A palatable and whole some wine-or at least useful "as a medicine," in many cases-may be made from the currant. We have, says the Albauy Cultivator, in former years, made wine from the red currant by the following recipe, which was of so fine a quality as to be ordered by the physicians for their patients, in preference to the impor-ted kinds. Its cost was not over fifty eents per gallon. To each gallon of clear juice was added two gallons of water, and to each gallon pounds of brown sugar. After the sugar was dissolved, the liquor was put into good barrels, placed in the cellar, and when the fermentation had subsided, it was bunged tightly. In February, one gallon of the best fourth-proof brandy was added to the barrel. In May following, it was bottled. Like other wines, it improves with age.

White wine may be made with white currants, using the same proportion of white sugar as is named of brown, for the above,-the liquor to be treated in the same way, except that no brandy is added.

Black Currant Wine - This wine has Cassin Cossi Coss always been regarded as highly useful in "summer complaint," a most distressing and too frequently fatal disease. Some of it should always be kept on hand. To every three quarts of juice, put the same quantity of water, unboiled; and to every three quarts of the liquor, add three pounds of very pure moist sugar. Put it into a cask reserving a little for folling up to the same and as many new ones as may choose to call, can secure articles for dress that will vastly add to their personal appearance when made up. Call and examine the stock, which will be found to be all that is represented, if not a little more. ap16 of it should always be kept on hand. To nto a cask, reserving a little for filling up. Put the cask into a warm, dry room, and the liquor will ferment of itself. Skim off the refuse, when the fermentation shall be over, and fill up with the reserved liquor. When it has ceased working, pour three quarts of brandy to forty quarts of wine. Bung it close for nine months, then bottle it, and drain the thick part through a jelly hag, until it be clear, and Lottle that. Has come and is ready for a full display of its Keep it ten or twelve months.

Raspberry Syrup .- To every quart of fruit add a pound of sugar, and let it stand over night In the morning, boil and skim it for half an hour; then strain it through a flannel bag, and pour it into bottles, which must be carefully corked and sealed. To each bottle add, if you please, a little brandy, if the weather is so warm as to endan- CRAPE DE SPANG, SWISS AND CAMBRICS, ger its keeping.

Ruspberry Jom .- Take one pound of loaf sugar, to every pound of fruit; bruise them together in your preserving pan with a silver spoon, and let them simmer gently for an hour. When cold, put them into glass jars, and lay over them a piece of paper saturated with brandy; then tie them up so as carefully to exclude the air.

PUMPKIN PIES .- "A pumpkin-pie-eater," who is not satisfied with the recipe for cooking this article, gives the following as superior: "Put in as much water as will cook the pumpkins tender, and no more. When nearly dry, mash and stew them. Then make it into pies, seasoning to your taste; and, if properly baked, it will be one of the best pies, retaining all the natural sweetness and nutritious prop-
