MARY MOORE.

A PLEASANT LOVE STORY.

CHAPTER 1. All my life long had I known Mary Moore-all my life long I had loved her.

Our mothers were old playmates and first cousins. My first recollection is of a boy in a red frock and Morocco shoes, rocking a cradle, in which reposed a sunny haired, blue-eyed baby, not quite a year old. That boy was myself-Harry Church ; that blueeved baby was Mary Moore.

Later still I see myself at the little school house, drawing my little chaise up to the door, that Mary might ride home. Many a beating have I gained on such occasions, for other boys besides me liked her, and she, I fear, was something of a flirt, even in her pinafores. How elegantly she came tripping down the steps when I called her name. How sweetly her blue eyes side the girl, had succeeded at last, and even in her pinafores. How elegantly she laughed at me! How gaily rang out her had won her away from me. This was his merry laugh! That fairy laugh! No one child and Mary's! but Mary could ever bring her heart so I sank, body and soul, beneath this blow, soon to her lips! I followed it through the and hiding my face in my hands, I leaned heated noon of manhood-and now when against the door, while my heart wept tears the frosts of age are silvering my hair and of blood. The little one gazed at me griemany children climb on my knee and many | ved and amazed, and put up her pretty lip call me father, I find that memories of youth are strong, and that even in grey hairs, I am following its music still.

When I was fifteen, the first great sorrow of my life came upon me. I was sent to school and obliged to part with Mary. We were not to see each other for three long years. This to me was like a sentence of death, for Mary was like life itself to me.

But hearts are tough things after all. I left college in all the flush and vigor of my nineteenth year. I was no longer awkward and embarrassed. I had grown into a tall, slender stripling, with a very good opinion of myself, both in general and particular. If I thought of Mary Moore it was to imagine how I should dazzle and bewilder her still more. I was a coxcomb, but as youth and good looks have fled, I trust I may be delivered when I say that self conceit has left me also.

An advantageous proposal was made to me at this time, and accepting it, I gave up all idea of a profession, and I prepared to go to the Indies. In my hurried visit home I saw nothing of Mary Moore. She had gone to a boarding school at some distance, and was not expected home till the following May. I uttered one sigh to the memory of my little blue-eyed playmate, and then called myself 'a man again.

'In a year,' I thought, as the vehicle whirled away from the door, 'in a year, or three years, at the very most, I will return and if Mary is as pretty as she used to be,

why then perhaps, I may marry her.'
And thus I settled the future of a young lady whom I had not seen for four years. I never thought of the possibility of her refusing me, never dreamed that she would not condescend to accept my offer.

But now I know that had Mary met me then, she would have despised me. Perhaps in the scented and affected student, she might have found plenty of sport; but as to loving me or feeling the slightest interest in me, I should have perhaps found I was mistaken.

India was my salvation, not merely because of my success, but because my laborious industry had counteracted the evil in my nature, and made me a better man .-When at the end of three years I prepared to return, I said nothing of the reformation in myself which I knew had taken place.

'They loved me as I was,' I murmured to myself, 'and they shall find out for themselves whether I am better worth lov-blessed relief to have wept, upon her boing than formerly.'

New Series---Vol. 11, No. 47.

I packed up many tokens from that land kept down the beating of my heart and the of romance and gold, for the friends I hop-ed to meet. The gift of Mary Moore I tremor of my lip, and answered quietly, as I looked in his full, handsome face: selected with a beating heart; it was a ring 'You have changed too, Frank, but I

'Very much,' I faltered. 'Halloo!' cried Frank, with a suddenness that made me start violently, 'I have forgotten to introduce you to my wife; I believe you and she used to be playmates in your young days—ah, Harry?" and he slapped me on the back, 'For the sake of times, and because you were not here at the wedding, I'll give you leave to kiss her once—but mind old fellow you are never to repeat that ceremony. Come, here she is, and I for once want to see how you

A gleam of light and ope, almost too dazzling to bear, came over to heed the long absent one when he asked me and I cried out before I thought: for admittance. A bitter thought like this

I kissed the fair cheek of the young wife, and hurried to the silent figure looking out from the window.

'Mary-Mary Moore,' said I, in a low eager voice, 'have you no welcome to give the wanderer.'

She turned and laid her hand on mine, and murmured hurriedly:

brightened my boyhood, that I started back with a sudden feeling of pain. 'What is your name my little one?' I asked, while 'I am glad to see you here, Harry. Simple words—and yet how blest they made me! I would not have yielded up that moment for an Emperor's crown! She lifted up her head as if to shade For there was the happy group, and the dear home fireside, and their sweet Mary her eyes, (I had seen that very attitude in another, in my boyhood, many and many a time,) and answered in a sweet bird-like Moore! The eyes I had dreamed of by day and night were fallen before the ardent 'And what else?' I said quickly.
'Mary Moore Chester,' lisped the child.
My heart sank down like lead. Here gaze of mine; and the sweet face I had so long prayed to see. I never knew the meaning of happiness till that moment came! was an end to all the bright dreams and Many years have passed since that haphopes of my youth and manhood. Frank py night, and the hair that was dark and glossy then is fast turning gray. I am growing to be an old man, and can look back to a long and happy, and I hope a well spent life, -and yet, sweet as it has been, I would not recall a single day, for the love that made my manhood so bright, shines also upon my white hairs.

An old man! Can this be so? At heart I am as young as ever. And Mary, with bright hair parting smoothly from a as if about to cry, while the perplexed serbrow that has a slight furrow upon it, is vant stepped to the parlor door and called my sister out, to see who it could be that still the Mary of my early days. To me she can never grow old or change. The I heard a slight step and a pleasant voice heart that held her in her infancy, and sheltered her in the flush and beauty of womanhood, can never cast her out till life shall cease to warm it. Nor even thenfor love still lives above. faced maiden of twenty, not much changed from the dear little sister I had loved so

A Warning-Cows Poisoned by Wild Cherry.-The Ohio Farmer reports that a man having occasion to cut down a small wild cherry tree, threw the branches over the fence into the road or common, and that two cows, after eating the leaves, died within twenty minutes, and within fifty feet of the place. That Prussic acid is contained in the leaves, &c. of this tree, we were aware, but did not suppose it exme, and welcomed me home with heartfelt isted in sufficient quantity to produce such tears! Oh, strange and passing sweet is offects.

Look for the Bee Moth .- Those having bees and wishing to keep them and have "luck," must almost daily visit their hives, (early in the morning is the best time,) and tip them up on one side and destroy the worms which secrete themselves under the edges of the hive. Unless this is carefully attended to, don't expect to be successful in keeping bees-for they are the great enemy of the bee.

Hints fer the Season .- The weed well known as the "water pepper" or "smart weed," (polygonum hydropiper,) which may now be found in abundance along ditches, roads, lanes and barnyards, is an effectual and certain destroyer of the bedbug. A strong decoction is made of the herb, and the places infested with the insect well washed with it.
