also expected to be adepts, when the art is easy. The surest method is said by those who know to be the following: Look at the color; if it is white, with a slightly yellowish tint, it is good; and if it is very white, with a blueish cast, or with black specks in it, condemn it. Examine its adhesiveness; wet and knead a little of it between your fingers; if it works soft and sticky it is poor. Throw a lump of dry flour against a smooth perpendicular surface; if it falls like powder, it is bad. Squeeze some of the flour in your hand, and if it retains the shape given by the pressure, it is a good sign. Flour that will stand all these tests is safe to buy.

Funcy Froth for Blanc Mange or for Creams .- Beat the whites of four eggs to a froth, then stir in half a pound of preserved raspberries, cranberries, or strawberries. Beat the whole well together, and hen pour it over the top of your creams or blanc mange.

Cream Custard .- Mix a pint of cream with one of milk, five beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of flour, and three of sugar; add utmeg to the taste, and bake the custards cups or pie-pans in a quick oven.

Lemon Jelly .- Put on a slow fire an ounce of isinglass pulled into small pieces and rinsed, a pint of water with the rind of six lemons. Stir it constantly until dissolved. Then add a pint of lemon juice, and sweeten it to the taste with nice white sugar. Boil the whole for four or five minutes, color it with the tincture of saffron, and let it pass through a flannel bag without squeezing it. Fill your jelly glasses with it when partly cool.

The Ghost of a Priest Interrupts the Mass & Addresses the Congregation. A remarkable story is current in Pittsargh and other parts of Western Pennvania. It possesses the elements of the wildest romance, but is religiously believed many persons. We give it as it was told to us, without, of course, endorsing the occurrence as actual facts. About two weeks ago, in the village of Latrobe, in western Pennsylvania, a solemn mass was performed in the Roman Catholie Church, for the repose of the soul of a deceased priest. A number of worshipers were in the Church at the time. Just as the officiating priest was about to perform the most solemn part of the rites, his purpose was checked by a most astonishing appearance. The form of the deceased priest himself appeared in front of the altar, with hand uplifted in a warning manner. The officiating clergyman stepped back, when the ghostly priest, or priestly ghost, addressed his brother in the flesh and the congregation. He said they were taking unnecessary trouble to get him out of Purgatory. The priest might save his prayer and the penitents their pennies. They could not get him out of Purgatory, be cause he never was in it. Furthermore, there was no chance for him to get there, as there never was such a place as Purgatory. It was all a mistake. He should feel much obliged if they could get him out of the spot where he was, but that was impossible. There was but two places of future existence, one of perpetual bliss and the other of perpetual punishment. Only two priests ever went to heaven, and he was not one of them. He therefore warned them that their masses for the repose of his, or any other defunct parson's soul, were nseless

With that admonition this remarkable ghost disappeared, and the congregation dispersed

On what foundation the story rests, is more than we can tell, but there must have been some event to give rise to such an extraordinary report .- Cleveland Herald, February 25.

From the Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Strange Story—The Ghost of a Benedictine Monk Appears to a Novice-Ti-dings from Purgatory.-We alluded recently in a paragraph to a current report that the apparition of a Priest had appeared to the living at Latrobe; and we pres below a detailed account of this supernatural phenomenon, in which the exaggerations of the current rumors are corrected, and the reality of the appearance affirmed. After all, there is nothing more marvelous in this than in the stories related in Mrs. Crowe's "Night Side of Nature," and Owens's "Footfalls on the Boudaries of Another World," while it is better authenticated than half of the narratives admitted into these volumes of the supermundane. Those, therefore, who are ready to subscribe to the truth of the narrations given by Owens-who, himself, has come to believe in an intermediate state of progression, will be sadly puzzled upon what grounds to discard the Benedictine Monk of St. Vincent's Abbey, as an illusion. The following is the communication of the worthy

Abbot: EDITORS DISPATCH-Dear Sirs : A friend of mine handed me a copy of the Dispatch of the 20th instant, drawing my attention to a Queer Story," telling that recently, while 'Mass' was being celebrated in Latrobe, the spirit of some priest or saint appeared and communicated the information to the assemthat it was all a misapprehension about "Purgatory," no such place of intermediate state of probation existing; and worse than all, that but two priests had as yet found their

The truth is, that at St. Vincent's Abbey, near Latrobe, a Novice saw, from the 18th Sept.until the 19 Nov., 1859, every day, from eleven to twelve o'clock, A. M., or from twelve to two o'clock in the night, the apparition of a Benedictine Monk in his full festival dress .- After all, he asked him, in the presence of another member of the order. what he wanted. The spirit then answered that he had been suffering seventy-seven years already, because he had not said seven Masses of obligation; that he had appeared to seven other Benedictines, at different times, and had not been heard; and that he would have to appear after eleven years again, if h would not help him. He wanted then seven "Masses" said for him; besides this the Novice should, for seven days, observe the strictest silence and retreat; and more, he should say for thirty-three days, each day three times, the "Fiftieth Psalm," barefooted and his arms stretched out.

This was done from the 21st November till the 25th December, when the last Mass was celebrated, and the Ghost disappeared. During this time he had appeared several times again, exhorted the Novice most impressively, to pray for the Souls in Purgatory, since they suffer very hard, and consequently are very thankful to those who concur to their redemp tion; and, sad enough, said that of the five Priests who had already died at the abbey, no one was yet in heaven, but suffering in Purgatory.

This is in substance the facts that gave origin to your strange report; we give it as much credit as it deserves; but this report is cor-
