War or Peace in Europe.

Each-successive dispatch from Italy tends to impress the thoughtful mind with the conviction that a general war in Europe is far from improbable. Let us briefly state how affairs in Italy, and out of it, are complicated now.

Garibaldi has all but completed the entire conquest of what we can searcely continue to call " The Kingdom of the Two Sicilies." Almost-not entirely, he has done this. It was believed that Francis II., ex-King of Naples, who had fled to the port of Gaeta, had thence betaken himself to Spain. But he has turned on Capun, between Naples and Gaeta, one of the best fortified places in Southern Italy. Garitable is besieging him there, and no one can expect other than one result-that this last of the Bourbon Kings will be defeated. The siege, however, will retard the movemente of Garibaldi, which were to be either into Rome or against Nanica.

Garibaldi has taken a dislike to Count Cavour, the able Sardinian Prime Minister, and, somewhat brusquely demands that Vietor Emmanuel shall dismiss him. The motives of Garibaldi's objection are said to be hatred to Diplomacy, of which he considers Cayour to be the consummate embodiment, and a certain feeling of local anger, because, Nice, where Garibaldi was born, was, sold or betrayed to Napoleon. This demand of Garibaldi's must inconvenience as, well as annoy Victor Emmanuel, for he AS well as annoy Victor Emmanuel, for he cannot but feel that Cavour, the ablest politician in Europe, with the exception of Napolean, is his right hand. In 1844, it was Cavour who laid the foundation of the present greatness of the Sardinian sovereignty, by insinuating Victor Emmanuel as one of the quapartite alliance (with France, England, and Austria) against Russia. Victor Emmanuel is said to contemplate an immediate visit to Garibaldi, to talk him over, but his chance of doing so is small indeed.

Next, it was believed, expected, hoped that the Pope would fly from Rome, to Spain or Austria. Had he done so, there was an end of the Papacy in Italy. Pius 1X. might transfer the seat of the Holy See to any other country, if he pleasedhe might even erect the throne of St. Peter in Mr. Bennett's little villa at Washington Heights-but he might never hope to return to Italy. The arrival, however, of Gen. Goyon, in command of the French troops at Rome, has determined the Pope to remain. This is his wisest policy, for, m while he continues in Rome, the Pope may pretty surely calculate on being protected there by French bayonets. Trat is a Napoleonic pledge so strongly and publicly m.de that no casuality can be anticipated for breaking it.

But, Garabaldi says, " I will enter Rome

State of Pennsylvania. In the Governor's apartment were assembled the other heads of depatments, Thos. E. Cochran, Auditor General; Eli Slifer, State Treasurer, and W. H. Keim Surveyor General. After the Governor was personally introduced to the Prince, he turned around and introduced all the other members of the adminstration. The Prince and suit with the Governor, then visited the Capitol Building, the Library, Supreme Court room, Educational Department, &c., and the dome. Il the party expressed themselves exceedingly gratified with the view from the dome of the surrounding county. The royal party then left the capitol, and started in the train for Washington.
