LOCAL AFFAIRS.

A meeting of the Apprentices Literary Society will be held at their hall on next Saturday night at 7 o'clock. A good attendance of the members is requested.

A meeting of the Slemmer Guards will be held in the Town Hall on Friday evening next, for the purpose of electing new officers. A full attendance is requested.

VEGETABLES, &c.—E. D. Auner sent us a large slice of a very fine California pumpkin.

Wm. Lind, who in addition to fashionable tailoring sometimes deals in "cabbage," &c., favored us with what is called the apple pumpkin, an excellent article for pies, custards, &c.

Mr. Lind also sends us a red beet weighing 10 1/2 pounds.

Mrs. Jos. E. Major raised a red beat in her garden which weighed nine pounds. It can be seen at our office.

A freight train ran off the track a few miles below town on Friday night, which killed two oxen, injured several others, and smashed up some cars.

The Milflin County Bank, based on real estate, which has been fluctuating between wind and water for upwards of a year, went into operation the other day, with E. L. Benedict, Esq., as President, and R. C. Williams, of Philadelphia, as Cashier. Its capital is $100,000, for which, so far as we know, good real estate is pledged, and if well conducted may prove of considerable benefit to the community.

The following letter from Gen. Hale will be gratifying to the ladies of this place:

HARRISBURG, October 21, 1861.

GEO. W. ELDER,
Attorney at Law,
Lewistown, Pa.

We still need blankets very much and if you have any blanket factories in your country, I hope they will be set to work. We will take all they can make at the highest contract price. Col. T. F. McCoy went specially to Lewistown the week before your August Court, to endeavor to get Messrs. Thompson & Gibboney to manufacture blankets, but thus far we have received none from Milflin county. If any have or can be made, let them be sent forward as soon as possible.

George R. White, a leading and patriotic merchant of Pittsburgh, volunteered his services, and went to New York to endeavor to procure blankets for Pennsylvania soldiers, but was unable, even with his extensive acquaintance with manufacturers and merchants, to find any army blankets. The great demand from the United States and all the patriotic States had swept the market. The United States Government, waiting in vain for the manufacturers to bring forward their supplies, have been compelled to send to Europe for blankets and clothing for the soldiers of our great Union Army.

R. C. HALE,
Quartermaster General P. M.
Blankets we understand cannot be manufactured at the prices then offered without loss, which was the reason our factories did not engage in the business. The price now paid is something more than offered at the time Captain McCoy was here on a visit.

From Knipe's Fort Sixth Regiment.
We have letters similar to the following, which we copy from the Harrisburg Telegraph. The Logan Guards, in this march, dropt some of their best men from fatigue.

Maryland Shore of Potomac,
CAMP WILLIAMS, Oct. 21, 1861.

On Monday at five o'clock just as we were forming for evening parade, the 46th regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, Col. Joseph F. Knipe, received orders to march, and our boys as well as our worthy staff and company officers, were almost frantic with joy at the prospect of a brush with the enemy, or something at least to relieve the monotony of the quietude of camp life. Soon all was bustle and confusion, knapsacks were packed, tents were "struck," rows of large kettles filled with bacon were strung along the camp fires to cook a few days rations for our journey, and nearly all on the "sick soldiers" list immediately recovered, the news proving a better panacea than our Surgeon's prescription. By ten o'clock P. M. we were ready to bid adieu to Camp Lewis, and started—our departure from a pleasant home, which had its romantic incidents, and fond associations being heightened by the glare of enormous bonfires which had been kindled with straw, superior barrels, boxes, &c., which had accumulated during our encampproceeded on our way about a mile from our orders were countermanded and our column halted and counter-marched, making a forced march in the direction of Poolesville, a distance of thirteen miles from Camp Lewis, which we reached about three o'clock in the morning, when we were informed of the terrible slaughter of a portion of our troops who had crossed the river at Edward's Ferry, and of the perilous position in which the remainder were placed. It had just begun to rain; many of our men, owing to steady and rapid marching had given out, and many of those left were greatly exhausted with fatigue, but all cheerfully moved forward; those who had given out, on hearing the news seemed infused with renewed vigor and caught up on double quick, and notwithstanding the inclement weather we were all again on the march. As we proceeded, ambulance wagons, in fact almost every kind of conveyances passed us containing such of the dead and wounded as could be secured, to a general hospital which had been established at Poolesville; stragglers from the battle covered with blood and dirt, and in search of their regiments and companies, were stopped and their ears caught up each story which they related. The road was full of officers, surgeons and assistants, and messengers flying to and fro in the fulfillment of their various duties, and every movement seemed but to add to the excitement. By daylight we reached the banks of the Potomac, but owing to a want of facilities to cross the river, there being only but a few old scows or flatboats, we halted in the woods, and wrapped our weary bodies in our blankets, laid down to rest in the mud, the rain still continuing to pour much faster than was pleasant to poor mortals like ourselves without shelter. Many slept sound, but others of a more curious nature were constantly on the alert for news.

Yesterday I witnessed a short engagement of a few hours duration from the shore of the Potomac. They were about a mile distant, and I could distinctly see the movements of all the regiments. It was truly a glorious sight, and the boom of cannon, rattle of musketry and whizzing of shell and bullets through the air, would have been better enjoyed could we have had a hand in it. We may cross to-day, and if we do, or at any time get into a skirmish or battle, you will hear a good account of the 46th.

Mrs. Wertz, at her Grocery and Fancy store, East Market street, has opened an oyster saloon, where that luxury is served up with her usual taste.

PICTURES.—J. Smith & Son are again open at their old stand, one door south of the Town Hall, and with their fine light, are prepared to furnish ambrotype and photographic pictures, and guarantee satisfaction.

TWO TO ONE.

The art and science of meeting your enemy always with two men to his one seems to the general public much better understood by the Insurgents than by the Government troops. We have already lost some valuable officers and much prestige by the manner in which the Rebels have overreached our commanders; and the death of Colonel Baker, yesterday, must, we suppose, be counted another of these cases.

There is a disposition with the public to blame our officers for this, and it is commonly said that the Rebels constantly out-general us. But the public is itself to blame for almost every disaster of this kind which has happened to our forces. It is but right that we should be impatient of the progress of the rebellion; the presence of an insurgent in any part of the Union is an insult to our national dignity. But this impatience leads us into many errors of judgment. What would the North say, for instance, of a general who should, having like the Rebel Price, advanced as far as Lexington, on the Missouri River, immediately abandon his prize and retreat the whole length of the State without once offering battle to his pursuers?

The luckless commander who should make such a retreat would receive even more persistent abuse than General Fremont; and, unless he deliberately shut his eyes and ears against the newspapers and pursued his own plans in silence, he would inevitably be forced into a battle at the wrong moment—as we hope Fremont will not be. And yet, the retreat of Price is a masterly movement. Every mile brings him nearer to his reinforcements, and takes Fremont farther from his base.

So in Kentucky, Zollicoffer, having gained stores of salt and beef cattle by a raid into Clay and Laurel counties, at once retires southward to the Cumberland Gap, though he has a very respectable force with which to face our troops. He prefers to retreat to day in order to deal a strong blow to-morrow. He and Price are both preparing to play the usual game of two to one.

But, suppose Fremont should not follow Price? Suppose Sherman should retreat through Kentucky before Zollicoffer or Lee? Suppose General Polk were to advance into Eastern Missouri, and our troops there should retreat before him? We should hear a storm of indignation at once, "imbecile!" would be the mildest word, and the loudest voices in the crowd would demand the removal of a commander who dared to have an opinion of his own, and who cared to meet the enemy, not where the enemy and the public desired, but on the ground of his own choosing.

What the nation has a right to demand of a General is that he shall beat the enemy. But it must also give him time, men and discretion. We shall perceive more and more, as the campaign fairly opens, that this war is very much like other wars, and that to distract a General in the field by newspaper advice or by public impatience, or by official restrictions, is to disable him, and perhaps oblige him to give battle when he would not otherwise—to take the odds of two to one, rather than face the ignorant rage of the newspapers, and to perish as Lyon did, as Baker did, and as Fremont may, rather than, by prudent delays, anger the public and save the cause.

The battle of Bull Run showed most of the journals that they would do well to refrain from criticisms on military affairs, which cannot possibly be understood at a distance from the field of operations, and by writers necessarily ignorant of the means and circumstances of the opposing Commanders. The newspapers have, therefore, very discreetly avoided all criticism on Generals McClellan, Wool, Anderson or Sherman, but, very singularly, Fremont has been made an exception to this most wholesome rule. He who alone has been actively engaged in the field so far, is the butt of every fault-finder, while those Generals who have spent months instead of weeks in preparation, and who have done really nothing but prepare, are treated with that civility and forbearance which surely a General in the field deserves and needs as much as his brother officer who stands on the brink of active operations.—N. Y. Post.

We have been shown a document signed by the Mayors in office of the cities of the United States and Canada, certifying to the superior excellence of Dr. Ayer's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla, and to the value of all his remedies as articles of great public utility. Such evidence from such high sources bears us out triumphantly in the position we have long maintained with regard to Dr. Ayer's preparations, or more particularly our advertisements of them. No publishers need be more exposed than we are to the promulgation of quackery in any shape, but we knew when we began that his remedies were above any suspicion of deception—that they were about the best it is possible to produce for the cure of disease, and that they have the confidence of all communities where they are known. Not alone because the Mayors of the whole country believe them useful to their people, but because we know from experience that they are so to ours, do we believe we are rendering a substantial service to our readers in making their virtues known to them.—Courier, Princeton, Kentucky.

STOMACH OR LIVER,
Such as Indigestion, Acidity of the Stomach, Colic, Pains, Heartburn, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Constipation, Bilious and Bleeding Piles. In all Nervous, Rheumatic, and Neuralgic Affections, it has in numerous instances proved highly beneficial, and in others effected a decided cure. This is a purely vegetable compound, prepared on strictly scientific principles, after the manner of the celebrated Holland Professor, Berhave. Its reputation at home and abroad is attested by the fact that it has been translated into many languages, and is now offered to the American public, knowing that its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be acknowledged.
It is particularly recommended to those persons whose constitutions may have been impaired by the continuous use of ardent spirits, or other forms of dissipation. Generally instantaneous in effect, it finds its way directly to the seat of life, thrilling and quickening every nerve, raising up the drooping spirit, and, in fact, infusing new health and vigor in the system.
NOTICE.—Whoever expects to find this a leverage will be disappointed; but to the sick, weak and low spirited, it will prove a grateful aromatic cordial, possessed of singular remedial properties.

READ CAREFULLY!
The Genuine highly concentrated Berhave's Holland Bitters is put up in half-pint bottles only, and retailed at ONE DOLLAR per bottle, or six bottles for FIVE DOLLARS. The great demand for this truly celebrated Medicine has induced many imitations, which the public should guard against purchasing.
