Everlasting Flowers.

All lovers of flowers feel regret when the buds and blossoms have passed away .-Hence our efforts to keep them with us during the whole year, by means of conserva-tories and pot plants. In the early winter we miss the boquet from our table, and long for its gay and delicate colors and its delightful fragrance. We have a class of flowers that though destitute of fragrance, retain all the beauty of form and color for years, and therefore are exceedingly useful in the formation of Winter Boquets and Floral Ornaments. We will describe a few of the best.

The Gnaphaliums are most common in Europe, but the better varieties are perenuial, and not hardy in this climate. have several species growing wild on poor soils, but they are of little value.

The Helickrysum is, perhaps, the most interesting and showy family of the everlasting flowers. There are several varieties. all annuals, differing in color and size of flower, some being very double. They are white or cream color, bright yellow, a reddish bronze, and dark, brownish red. For preserving, the flowers should be picked as soon as they open, and they will keep their natural appearance for years. For the sake of variety, it is best to pick a few buds as well as flowers in different stages of matur-

The Globe Amaranth, (Gomphrena glo boso,) is one of the best known of this class of flowers. There are several varieties, differing in color as the red, flesh colored, yellow, etc.

Rodanthe Manglesh is the name of another beautiful annual Everlasting. It is a native of Australia, and was introduced into England some years ago by Capt. Manglef, from Swan River. It is rather tender in its habit, and will require more attention in the earlier stages of growth than some of the others. It is a beantiful rose color, and has a fine effect in beds or masses in bright weather.

Acreclinium is another fine immortelle, resembling the last somewhat in form of flower, but the blossoms are larger, and it is hardier. There are two varieties, alflum and roseum, both desirable.

The Xeranthemums are another interesting family of Everlasting flowers, white and purple in color.

With the above, and a few of the ornamental grasses, boquets can be formed of great beauty, that will endure for years.

To drive away Rats .- Some six or eight years since, my wife, in order, as she said, to sweeten the cellar, sprinkled a solution of copperas over the bottom; since which I have never observed any signs of rats in the cellar. Her custom is to use the solution two or three times during the summer, sprinkled on the celiar floor, and I am fully convinced that rats do not like it .- D. Gates.

Grafting the Tomato on the Potato .- A correspondent of the Horticulturist states that he succeeded, perfectly, in grafting a seion of the tomato upon the potato vine. He cut about one third of the potato shoot off, just above a leaf, taking care not to injure the bud at its base. The scion, being shielded from the sun, was every day sprinkled with a little water, and it took readily. In the fall the tomato was loaded with ripe and unripe fruit, and had grown to a large size. The potato and tomato are closely ailied, botanically Composition to Stop Leakage .- A correspondent of the Lynn (Mass.) News, gives a recipe for a cheap composition, with which leaks in roofs may be effectually stopped. Having a leaky 'L, he says, 'I made a composition of four pounds of resin, one pint of linseed oil, and one ounce of red lead; applied it hot with a brush to the part where the 'L' was joined to the main house. It has never leaked since .-I then recommended the composition to my neighbor, who had a dormer window which leaked badly. He applied it, and the leak stopped. I made my water cask tight by this composition, and have recom mended it for chimneys, windows, etc., and it has always proved a cure for a leak.

Total indebtednes of Relief Board at settlement.

Note .- The Judges, Commissioners, and auditors all coincide in the opinion that it would be injudicious to publish the names of the mothers, wives sisters, or other relatives, whose main support are voluntarily endur-ing the privations and hardships of a soldier's life, and thus relieving those at home from the performance of a stern military du ty at the expense of a trifling tax. For the satisfaction of all, however, who desire to examine the list, a copy is retained in the Commissioners' office.
