Transplanting in the Night. A friend, in whose powers of observation we have confidence, and who is an exact experimenter, informs us that last spring and summer he made the following experiments :- He transplanted ten cherry trees while in blossom, commencing at four o'clock in the afternoon, and transplanting one each hour, until one in the morning. Those transplanted during daylight shed their blossoms, producing little or no fruit, while those planted during the darker pertions maintained their condition fully. He did the same with ten dwarf pear trees, after the fruit was one third grown. Those transplanted during the day shed their fruit, those transplanted during the night perfeeted their crop, and showed no injury from having been removed. With each of these trees he removed some earth with the roots. We are well aware that when plants are accidentally frozen in green houses, it is customary to render the house dark before applying cold water to thaw them, and that Essence of Coffee. when this is not observed they are injured, while if entire darkness be secured during the operation, many of them are saved .-But the experiment of our friend seems to have but little analogy to this fact, and it is entirely new to us.

We shall be glad to receive information on this subject from our readers, and hope that numerous kindred experiments will be made during the coming season .- N. Y. Working Farmer.

NATURAL HISTORY,

Birds and Insects.

At the late agricultural meeting at St. Gallen in Switzerland, Baron Von Tschudi, the celebrated Swiss naturalist, dwelt on the important services of birds in the destruction of insects. Without birds, said he, no agriculture and vegetation are possible. They accomplish in a few months the profitable work of destruction which millions of human hands could not do half so well in as many; and the sage therefore blamed in very severe terms the foolish practice of destroying birds, which prevails more especially in Italy, recommending, on the contrary, the process of alluring birds into gardens and cornfields. Among the most deserving birds he counts swallows, finches, titmice, redtails, &c. The naturalist then cites numerous for the Winter. instances in support of his assertion. In a flower-garden of one of his neighbors three tall rose trees had suddenly been covered with about 2,000 tree lice. At his recommendation a marsh titmouse was located in the garden, which in a few hours consumed the whole brood, and left the roses perfectly clean. A redtail in a room was observed to catch about 900 flies in an hour. A couple of night swallows have been known to destroy a whole swarm of gnats in fifteen minutes. A pair of golden nestlings upon an average thirty-six times an hour. For the protection of orchards and woods, titmice are of invaluable service. They consume, in particular, the eggs of dexterously fetch from the crevices of treebark, numbers of insects for their nestlings.

In 1848 an immense swarm of caterpil- buy it. lars, of the well known genus Bombax dispar had destroyed all the tree leaves in the orchard of Count Casimus Wadziti, who observed the stems and branches coated as it were with a heavy crust of millions of eggs surrounded by a hairy skin. He employed scores of hands to scrape them off. but to no avail, and the trees were about to decay. Luckily, towards the winter, numerous flights of titmice and wrens frequented that part, and it was soon perceived that the nests of the caterpillars were visibly diminishing. In the spring time about twenty pairs of titmice made their nests in the garden, and in the course of summer they had cleared the trees of all the

M. Tschudi considers sparrows to be very useful birds, as one single pair usually carry to their nest every day about 300 caterpillars, an advantage that amply compensates for the cherries the birds steal in the garden. Owls also consume, morning and evening, vast numbers of wood insects .-Some species of birds, such as starlings, jackdaws, rooks, jays, and speckled magpies, are distinguished for destroying may bugs or cockehafers. White, of Selborne, who devoted some time to the observation of the found, among other things, that they often carried to their nest a mouse every five minutes; while another pair of great owls had carried to their nest in one evening in June no less than eleven mice. Most of the smaller birds feed, either entirely or partially, especially during the hatching season, on insects, worms, snails, spiders, &c.; so do also hedge sparrows, wood peckers, thrushes, fly catchers, (Muscicapus,) wagtails, larks, &c.

Without these useful birds obnoxious insects would increase in such masses as to become a permanent plague in Europe, and destroy all fruit and vegetation, like the locust in the east; and the farmer, in balancing the gain and loss accraing from these useful birds, ought to consider the latter in the light of domestic servants, whose cost of keeping is amply repaid by their services.
