LOCAL AFFAIRS.

TRIP TO LICKING .- On Wednesday morning last a party of six started on an expedition to the wilds of Licking Creek. Taking a conveyance to Minehart's run, five miles from Lewistown, the party then shouldered knapsacks, tent, fish baskets. bags, axe, hatchet, &c., and proceeded on foot through the Gap, up and then down a pretty steep mountain, and thence to the creek, where, a new site having been selected for a camp, a fire was built, the tent erected, hemlock branches prepared for bedding, baggage unstrapped, and other preparations made for a night's rest. By this time the appetites of the party being well sharpened by the wholesome exercises of the day, coffee was soon boiling and sundry trout, just caught for the occasion by the editor, transferred to the frying pan, and, as may be conjectured, no one there envied the suppers either at the National, Lewistown, Uncle Dan's, or any other place. The party retired early, and went to sleep with the music of the whippoorwill ringing in their ears. On Thursday morning some fishing was done, with tolerable success, though no one stuck to it very closely. In the afternoon one who had been unable to accompany the party the day before arrived, and as usual soon made himself useful by inventing a bark table as well as sundry other fixtures. With the exception of seeing one of those long, shiny snakes called racers-measuring we should judge about seven feet-which lay before us as we jumped down from a large fallen hemlock, nothing remarkable occurred this day. We debated for some time whether the black scamp was a tory and therefore deserved knocking on the head, but knowing the animal to be almost harmless so far as man is concerned, we finally concluded to let him live and follow his vocation of hunting birds, toads, &c., for after all he is no worse in this respect than most other animals, a majority of which live by destroying some part of the living creation.

On Friday morning five of the party turned to fishing in carnest-two going down and three up. Taking the old path to the forks, the editor and his two companions walked up to the branch, where the two decided to explore new ground through the gap where this stream comes into the main creek. From their report, it rises near the top of the mountain, and is a succession of falls over rocks with numerous small pools, in which trout are abundant, though small. The editor trudged on up the main stream, with his dog for company, and commenced fishing about a mile above. The morning was favorable, and for a few hours the fish bit well, so well that the basket strap over his shoulder began to give an unpleasant sensation, whereupon he concluded that dinner would not come amiss. Turning down towards camp, throwing a line in occasionally in some inviting pool, we got on an island which the floods had swept clear of brush, leaving a covering of fine sand several inches deep; we fished its shores, and when about to leave it, lo, there lay, coiled up, South Carolina's hated emtlem, a rattlesnake. Of all poisonous snakes we fear these least, as they generally lay in open spaces, give notice when you come near, and are so easily killed that a small stick will disable them; but ever since this infernal rebellion commenced, under the patronage of this deadly reptile, we hate them, and when knocking one on the head feel like smashing a southern cutthroat. It had 13 rattles. On arriving at camp, our basket was found to contain 62 trout, a fair proportion of which were from 8 to 111 inches long. The others also were pretty successful. On Saturday morning, after a rather slim breakfast, the provisions having been almost exhausted, the tent was struck, knapsacks packed, and with between two and three hundred trout the mountain was recrossed on foot. Again taking the carriage at the run, a few hours brought us to town, without a single occurrence to mar the trip. The weather was remarkably pleasant, and we dare say the whole party would be ready to make another, did time and opportunity permit.

We hear of a general smashup last night about two miles west of the Narrows crossing, by a freight train breaking down, throwing several cars off the track. The train following ran into the disabled one, crushing a number of cars and scattering their contents, consisting of flour, meat, coal oil, candles, &c., and a with cold water; but we do not care for that, and scattering their contents, consisting of load of 13 inch bombshells received such for we have got a shoemaker in our company a shock as to force out the end of the car, and he can make good use of the bristles .distributing them all along the line. No

On Sunday morning the body of a soldier named Daniel Gilbert, was left at the railroad station without any direction where he belonged or what was to be done with his remains. Mr. Elder, the comtroublesome search, concluded to send on the body, which was rapidly decomposing, to Boalsburg, Centre county, where it was taken by Mr. A. Felix. In this case there seems to have been gross negligence on the part of the officials in the Philadelphia hospital, where he died, in not sending proper directions with his remains.

SHAD-A-LA-CREME. - Boil a shad sufficiently for the table. When partly cooked remove the tail, the fins and the head .-With a sharp knife separate the upper part of the fish from the back bone and divide into pieces about three inches square, being careful to remove all the bones, and treat the rest of the fish in the same way. Put these pieces in a baking dish and season with pepper and salt, a few boiled sliced potatoes. Make a sauce of a pint of cream. a quarter of a pound of butter, well seasoned with salt, pour this over the fish, and bake half an hour. It should be served

The following letter gives the particulars of the death of one of the Logan

CAMP 46TH REGT. PENNA. VOL., NEAR NEW MARKET, May 15, 1862. Mr. Frysinger—On the 9th inst., Tommy Kinkade, of Company A, (Logan Guards) was accidentally shot by a pistol in the hands of one of our number. The ball took effect in his back, passed through the stomach, and lodged just under the skin of the breast. The Surgeon was immediately summoned, who extracted the ball and pronounced the wound fatal. Tommy lingered 36 hours with little pain and less consciousness, when he died. Capt. Eisenbise immediately detailed a squad to dig a grave, another to make a coffin, and at midnight, by moonlight, our fallen brother was lowered in his grave, in a beautiful Lutheran Cemetery in the town of New Market. He has fought his last fight, he has won his last battle, No sound can awake him to glory again."

His coffin was covered with the flag he volunteered to defend, and carried by his companions in arms, followed by the whole company, a portion of the field and line officers and the regimental band. The Methodist burial service was performed by the chaplain, a salute fired over his grave, and the soldier was left sleeping in the beautiful valley of the LOGAN.

It is also reported that David Baker of Captain Taylor's company was wounded by the discharge of a gun barrel which was being heated, and that one of the company had been taken prisoner.

From the Forty fifth Pennsylvania Regiment. Extract from a Letter of a Private Soldier in the Belleville Fencibles May 13, 1862. As I have not much to do this morning, I thought I would take up my pen to send you a few lines, as I suppose that some of the folks would like to hear from us. In this company all are well with the exception of two or three, who are still getting better fast; one of them had the measles, the others bad colds. We have had middling good health ever since we left home last summer. We left Fortress Monroe on the sixth day of last December, and after three days and nights sailing on the ocean we landed at Port Royal. South Caro lina, and since that time we have been here. I will not say anything about the fighting here. My reason is because I do not think we are allowed to write these things. But I may say that our men are driving the secesh off pretty fast. As Jeff. Davis sees them advancing, he takes his chair and sets upon the steeple calling for his people and saving to them, the yankees are fast advancing and I am afraid it will not be long till the Stars and Stripes will wave all over us, and I think they will drive us so far into the Union that it will take about two years for us to come back again, and now I think a better plan is for them to hang me along side of a white oak tree, and Floyd and Beauregard and Johnson on the other side. As we stand on these sandy bottoms looking for a coming mail, and after looking for some time here comes a mail for us, telling of some true love left behind, and in reading it tells us they are all well. I suppose there are some people who wonder what we do with the flies here they are so plenty. But alligators are middling plenty When the sun shines out very hot you will see them lying upon a log sleeping, with their mouth wide open, and then the flies gather in, and when these animals awake they shut their mouths, thus catching from a pint to two quarts at a time. I think that is making way with them fast. Snakes are also very bad on this island, and we must always keep on the lookout for them, for they are dangerous. Mosquitoes and gnats keep us so busy scratching that you might think we had the itch. The weather here is getting very warm. Some days are cleudy with a strong wind blowing, which makes it more pleasant. I will tell you some little about Fort Pulaski. I was an eye witness to the bombardment. Some of our boys were talking to some of the prisoners. They asked them if they did not think they were whipped? They said not. Then they asked them why they did not take our battery, to which they replied that the yankees threw so much rotten iron, or, as we call them, bomb shells and balls, they could not stand it any longer. They said they volun teered, and think the yankees cannot whip them. But some of them looked as if they were nearly out of clothing. Negroes are them are very saucy and if you speak to them they give you some short answer. Some of them wish the yankees on the island were all killed. They are secesh. It is almost dinner time, and I have just asked some one what we have for dinner to-day. They say we have some pork with the bristles on. I think the plenty; more so than I care about.

We have plenty of blackberries here now. I think this company uses from one to two bushels per day. The fields look very hard. There is a great deal of cotton raised here, also sweet potatoes, ground nuts, oranges and flowers. The corn is up about fifteen inches, which beats old Pennsylvania. I suppose some folks would like to know whether there are any white women here; I will say they are not very plenty. For my part I only saw one with his remains. Mr. Elder, the com-pany's attorney, and E. W. Cogley, after a last December. I must bring my letter to a close by telling you that I am well.

JOHN B. PLATT. My address is Company C, 45th Regiment P. V., Port Royal, South Carolina, in care of Col. Welsh.

Correspondence of the Gazette.

YORK, PA. May 15, '62. Mr. Editor-Thinking a little correspondence from this quarter might not prove altogether uninteresting to your readers, I have concluded to jot down a short description of York and its attractions, with whatever else my pen may be pleased to add.

York is situated on the line of the Northern Central Railroad, 28 miles from Harrisburg, and 58 from Baltimore. This ancient borough is now one of the most thriving towns in the State. Its popula-however, it has been "spreading itself"

considerably. The number of its inhabitants now is about 10.000. Its streets cross each other at right angles, and many of them are ornamented with beautiful shade trees. The public and private buildings are mostly put up in modern style, some of them being very costly and hand some. The Alms House and Jail are situated north-east of the town, and just with out its limits. The former cost probably $100,000, and the latter about $60,000 .-Cottage Hill College, on the the north bank of the Codorus creek, overlooks the town. Its fine buildings and ample grounds, planted with beautiful trees and flowers. render it one of the most attractive places in the State. A Classical and Normal Institute has been lately commenced here, by Profs. Heiges & Griffith, who are fast winning for themselves a high reputation .-Among the number of other public buildings which attract the notice of visitors, are the Court House, Washington Hall, Academy, Public School edifices, and the various churches, of which there are 18, divided among the different denominations as follows: 4 Lutheran, 2 Methodist, 2 German Reformed, 2 Catholic, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Moravian, 1 United Brethren, 1 Albright, 1 Quaker, and 1 African. The Presbyterian church lately erected, is one of the finest build ings outside of our large cities. On a gentle rise, north of the town, is Prospect Hill Cemetry, a place peculiarly fitted for the silent repose of the dead, and suggestive of many pure and holy thoughts to the living. Here lie the remains of Philip Livingston, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and near by are the graves of some that have fallen by the hands of traitors who have renounced the principles in support of which he pledged his life, his fortune, and his sacred honor. South of the town is the Reser voir, by means of which it is supplied with excellent water. The people here enjoy the luxury and convenience of a good market, which is abundantly supplied with edibles of every kind in their season, from the rich and fertile country around. On account of the plentiful supply of food and forage to be obtained in this locality. the Government has at different times quartered large bodies of troops in York. A few months ago extensive barracks were erected on the commons, which for som: time were occupied by a body of N. Y. Cavalry, but are vacant now. York is well represented in the present struggle for the | west by lot of D. M. Contner, containing about preservation of the Union. Some of her gallant sons have won for themselves golden honors, among them Gen. Franklin, who is distinguishing himself in Southern Virginia, and Gen. Lauman, who first hoisted the stars and stripes over the enemy's works at Fort Donelson. Others have fallen, and many more, if needed, are willing to fight and fall, and die in the same cause. And yet there are some few even here who sympathize with the rebels and the rebellion. How men professing loyalty to the Government can at the same time express sympathy for the men and measures of the Southern Confederacy is a mystery to me, but such are to be found all along the border, over which the slave power still casts its dark shadow. Speaking of men of the Southern Confederacy reminds me that a highly respectable citizen of this place was, for several years, employed by Jefferson Davis to superintend and keep in repair buildings on his extensive plantation, and is therefore well qualified to testify to his character. He describes him as a man of heated passion—a perfect "fire-eater" having no respect for God or religion, compelling his slaves to work on the Sabbath in the cotton season, and, on the whole, "rather a hard case." No wonder the judgments of heaven are falling on the South for following in the lead of such a man. It looks very much like the fulfilment of the Scripture which says, "Upon the wicked the Lord shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest.'

Book Notices. Godey's Lady's Book for June is a superb specimen, containing a splendid steel engraving entitled "Sitting for a Portrait," a large double colored fashion plate, and other engravings, besides a number of embellishments comprising styles for dresses, coats, cloaks, hats, capes, braiding, embroidery, and children's fashions, which will be relished by the ladies everywhere. Godey is evidently one of the very best we have, and should be in possession of every family, and deck with grace the parlor table of every cottage. Terms -$3 00 a year, or two copies for $5 00, cash in advance. Address, L. A. Godey, 323 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

On Tuesday night, in this place, ANNA, daughter of Robert II. Junkin, aged about three years.

At the residence of his mother, in Lewistown, on Sabbath afternoon, 18th inst., of consumption, JONATHAN M. STONER, aged 23 years. His health never was good, but he struggled to gain an excellent education in view of usefulness-had commenced the study of Law with flattering hopes, but was compelled to discontinue by the progress of the disease mentioned. About a year before his death he became a member of the Presbyterian Church, cherishing the faith of the Christian, and died rejoicing in the assurance of salvation. His family and friends have cause for thankfulness that he was able "it is better for me to depart and be with Christ" than to remain in this world of sin and sorrow.

Died, in this place, on Monday, May 12th, 1862, WILLIAM II., youngest son of Geo. W. Hawker, aged 8 years, 10 months, and 3 days. This death occurred by drowning in the Juniata river. William and three of his sisters went out in a skiff, which proved to be leaky, and water coming in they became alarmed, and William, thinking he could swim to the shore, jumped out in about 15 feet of water and was drowned before help could possibly reach him. The girls in the skiff remaining as still as possible were reached in tion in 1840 was about 4,500. Since then, time to be saved. They were all, however, near being drowned.

JOEL ZOOK, (POTTER,)

Comparisons.

It is useless to deny that the masses of the people have a deep seated and settled confidence in "Sarsaparilla," as an alterative remedy. Notwithstanding this confidence has of late years been abused by many preparations claiming to possess its virtues but really with none at all, still the people believe in its intrinsic value as a remedy, because they have known of its cures. The rage for large bottles at low prices, has called into market many compounds of Sarsaparilla which contain scarcely any of it, or even any medical virtues whatever. Yet everybody knows that Sarsaparilla is the great staple antidote for Scrofula, Eruptions and cutaneous diseases, and for the purification of the blood, when they can get the real article, or an actual extract of it. Such we are now able to inform them they can obtain. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., the celebrated chemists of the East, whose reputation assures us they do well whatever they undertake, are selling a compound extract of Sarsaparilla, which, although the bottles do not contain quarts for a dollar, do contain more of actual curative power than whole gallons of the stuffs which have been in use. It is asserted that one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla contains more than double the amount of medicinal virtue which is afforded by any other. This fact is not only apparent to the taste, but its effects and cures form incontestible proof that it is true. Such a remedy has been long sought for, and is everywhere needed by all classes of our community .-"Age," Cynthiana, Ky.
