On one occasion he broke a rope fastened to the floor, that would sustain twenty hundred weight, and lifted an oak table six feet long with his teeth, though half a hundred weight was attached to it. He also struck a round bar of iron, one inch in diameter, against his naked arm, and at one stroke, bent it like a bow; and his head being placed on one chair and his feet on another, he held upon his body four heavy men whom he heaved at pleasure. None of these modern Sampsons, however, have earned so extended a fame as that giant of the Western Hemisphere, Peter Francisco. Having lived in the stormy days of the Revolution, and performed deeds of extraordinary valor as a soldier, he has been looked upon by many as a hero, and his name used as a synonym for bodily vigor and manly endurance. He was born in Portugal, subsequently taken to Ireland, and while yet a boy brought by a sea captain to this country. On the breaking out of the Revolution, he joined the army and was in active service during the whole contest. Such was his strength and personal bravery that no enemy could resist him .--He wielded a sword, the blade of which was five feet in length as though it had been a feather, and every one who came in contact with him paid the forfeit of his life. At Stony Point he was one of the 'forlorn hope' which was advanced to cut away the abattis, and next to Major Gibbon, was the first man to enter the works. At Brandywine and Monmouth he exhibited the most fearless bravery, and nothing but his inability to write prevented his promotion to a commission. Transferred to the South, he took part in most of the engagements in that section, and more than once exhibited, in a striking manner, his remarkable self-confidence and courage. On one occasion he defended himself successfully, by strategy and prowess, against nine British troopers; and during an attack upon a dwelling near which he was resting, he killed two assailants, a soldier and a mounted dragoon, who came suddenly upon him. Francisco possessed a finely developed frame. He was six feet one inch in height, take her share in the conflict, according brought him off. We also brought off

Arkansas, as submitted to the Secretary of the Navy by Admiral Farragut :

FLAG-SHIP HARTFORD, NEW ORLEANS, August 10. SIR: Since forwarding the reports of Liutenants Fairfax, Ransom, and Roe, we have picked up a number of prisoners from the ram Arkansas, all of whom I have catechized very closely. They agree very vell respecting her exit from the Yazoo and her passing the fleets. They also agree as to the number killed and wounded, on each of these occasions, making in all eighteen killed and a large number wounded. At Vicksburg they plated the deck with iron, and fortified her with cotton inside She then came down in command of Lieut. H. K. Stevens, Brown having taken sick at Vicksburg-with the intention of ma-king a combined attack with General Breckinridge upon Baton Rouge; but her port engine broke down. They repaired her in the course of the day, and went out to meet the Essex. The next morning they saw her coming up, but the starboard engine gave way, and they ran her ashore, she being perfectly unmanageable. They say that when the gunboats were seen coming up and the Essex commenced firing, the captain set the ram on fire, and told the crew to run ashore. They also state that the gunboats Webb and Music. were sent for to tow her up the river, but they did not arrive, and neither of them had been seen.

despatches from Admiral Farragut, among which are the following :

Elag Ship Hartford, BATON ROUGE, August 7, 1862.

SIR: It is the happiest moment of my life that I am enabled to inform the Department of the destruction of the ram Arkansas, not because I held the ironclad in such terror, but because the community did. On the 4th inst. I sent the Tennessee up to Baton Rouge with provisions for Commodore Porter and the gunboats stationed at that place. On the night of the 5th she returned with information that the enemy had made a combined attack on Baton Rouge by the ram and two gunboats-the Webb and Music-and calling for assistance. At daylight the Hartford was under weigh for this place, with orders for the other vesels to follow me as fast as they got ready. I arrived here to-day at 12 M. in company with the Brooklyn, Westfield, Clinton, Jackson, and Sciota.

I had sent the Cayuga up before me, agreeably to a request of General Butler, in consequence of the guerillas firing into some of his transports. On my arrival, I was informed by Commander W. D Porter that yesterday morning, at two o'clock, the enemy's forces, under General Breckinridge attacked General Williams, drove in his pickets, etc. General Williams having had ample warning, all was prepared for him. The fight was continued with great energy on both sides until ten o'clock A. M., by which time the enemy had been driven back two or three miles; but unfortunately the gallant General Williams, while cheering on his men, received a minie ball through the heart.

Gen. Williams had informed Licut. Commanding Ransom the evening before, of his plans, and requested him not to fire a gun until he notified him; and when he did so, our gunboats Kineo and Katahdin opened with fine effect, throwing their shells directly in the midst of the enemy, producing great dismay and confusion among them. Lieut. Ransom had an officer on the State House, which overlooked the adjacent country, and could direct the fire of every shell.

As soon as the enemy was repulsed, Commander Porter went up the stream after the ram Arkansas, which was lying Sandy, who is said to be a captain of guerabout five miles above, apparently afraid to illas. He fired upon our men, but they Partial Destruction of the Town of Donaldsonville, La.

Admiral Farragut, also under date of August 10, thus addresses the Secretary of the Navy:

'SIR: I regret to inform the Department that at the town of Donaldsonville; on the Mississippi, they have pursued a uniform practice of firing upon our steam-ers passing up and down the river. I sent a message to the inhabitants that if they did not discontinue this practice I would destroy their town. The last time I passed up to Baton Rogue, to the support of the army, I anchored about six miles above Donaldsonville, and heard them fire upon the vessels comming up-first upon the Sallie Robinson, and next upon the Brooklyn. In the latter case they made a mistake, and it was so quickly returned that they ran away. The next night they fired again, upon the St. Charles. I therefore ordered them to send their women and children out of the town, as I certainly intended to destroy it on my way down the river, and I fulfilled my promise to a cer-tain extent. I burned down the hotels and wharf buildings; also, the dwelling house and other buildings of a Mr. Philip
