And make you mindful that a quarter stamp,

Will compensate him for his weekly tramp.

Who would, with all that's dear, sink to the grave,

Whose sympathies are with their country's foes;

How glib they blabbed, and rolled the trait'rous Age,
Around their tongues—pleased that its every page—

How pregnant has the year of sixty-three,

Been with events of interest to the free,

How jubilant six months ago, were those,

Was prophetic of victory to Secesh-

But to the Union, sorrow and distress-

Assuring its sweet readers, in the fall, That at the sweet old Democratic call,

To follow in Delusion's winning train!

The States would hearken, hasten once again,

'Tis past when the free people were the tools

Slavery must die! the fiat has gone forth,

And the trait'rous loco-party, with it dies:

The Heavens yet are echoing its last cries!

To where Eternity bestows them all: Each pregnant with its spirits 'rapt from life

Delivered free from earthly toil and strife,

I watched the glorious year just toppl'd o'er: Fair Liberty ne'er smiled as bright before;

Her banner blazing in the rubied light,

Waking the silent valleys of our State.

Threatened then to be laid desolate,

She sat upon her lum'nous "mountain height;"

While round her thronged the legions of the brave

There Reynolds loomed, the brave, the gallant, true,

Go roaring, plunging through their ranks! The vell

Who gave their lives their country dear to save!

Who hurled his columns on the rebel crew,

Heaven! how his shrieking canister and shell-

Around him groups of noble youth, who sighed

Not blacking their spirit-track with curses deep,

Flashed on the altar—a pricious, priceless flood, Of sacrifices offered unto God!

From where the Mississippi's current laves, Vicksburg's steeps and Hudson's marshy plains;

With what unflinching zeal they laid their trains,

And then like Achilles, at Troy's huge gates!— They rushed upon the battlements,—and fates!—

"The river is ours! Rebellion is played out!"
While from the far gulf-coast burst forth the cries:

Was gaily overthrown!—and lies stone dead; And many a triumph crowned the Union's Blues,

THE UNION'S BLUES.

Your swords in defence of the life of the Union,

Let your souls all be joined in the sweetest com-

Who fought and who bled with a brave resolution,

Make your glory as bright as the sun's at the dawn!

And victory, laurel-crowned, with rosy hand,

Their comrades, brave, exultingly still shout,

Wafted them, joyous, to the spirit land.

"Texas is ours, the Union men will rise!"

Impressed with many a glorious victory: The slimy army yelept the copperhead,

In whose behalf I now invoke the Muse

Ye Union Blues who have gallantly drawn

With truth at her side.

May valor and wisdom united preside;

And furnish for ages a theme for the Muse, Be worthy the name of the Union's Blues.

Remember the heroes in Liberty's cause,

Like them O! be brave.

Independence to save,

Their patroit names with deserved applause,

Will be greatly honored till time's dissolution.

And swear that no traitor this soil shall enslave.

The tyrants of Europe, e'en should they combine,

Can ne'er conquer freemen whose bosoms are glowing
With Liberty's flame, and whose hands ever join,

In supporting their cause with a zeal overflowing:
Then let England or France,

They will fall 'neath the stroke of the Union's lance:

And furnish for ages a theme for the Muse,-

Deserving the name of the Union's Blues.

Or both now advance,

And furnish for ages a theme for the Muse,

And prove that the patriots all are true Blues.

How blest when enjoying the noble reward,

All covered with sears,
The Union's Blues will return from the wars,

And furnish for ages a theme for the Muse,

Deserving the name of the Union's Blues.

munion;

Mined the vast ridge, and dug the traitors' graves!

And yonder stand the noble throng of braves,

But blessing their loved country! sweet they sleep!

A nation's heart bled, when their young heart's blood

Their souls away on that same field and died;

They utter, devilish, strikes the lurid sky, As death's black shadows settle in each eye;

Of northern demagogues and southern ghouls!

From thirty millions freemen south and north:

"Time rolls his ceaseless course," and well he may;

Since nought else does he, whether night or day;

The bulky years he rolls back o'er his shoulders,

As did the Pole's massed ice the ponderous bolders: Crashing and heaving down the abyss they fall,

A S the action of the Relief Board does not seem to be fully comprehended, frequent applications for relief being made in person or by letter to the undersigned, he deems it proper to state that payments will be temporarily renewed to those formerly on the list on presentation of certificate signed by not less than three known taxpayers, stating that the applicant has not received sufficient from her husband or other support, to enable her, together with her own industry, to make a living for herself and family, and giving reasons for such inability. This is intended for the benefit of all really in need, and for no others.

The following form for applications for relief on the part of families of drafted men, is published for public information:

The undersigned respectfully represents that her [here insert husband, son, or broth er, as the case may be] who was her support, has been drafted, and is now in the service of the U. States as a soldier ;-that she has child—, aged ———years;—that neither he nor she owns real property nor personal estate sufficient for her maintenance; -that she is - years of age
