Legislators and their Duties.

The people of this State annually hold an election for members of the House of Representatives and onethird of the Senate, and though for many years efforts have been made to send respectable men to those bodies -and as a general thing we believe a majority have been so-yet somehow when they meet at Harrisburg and come to discuss what ought to be done for the good of the public, we strangely find a hitch here and there, and sundry axes to grind, which seem to prevent a great deal of common sense legislation and favor a vast deal of what is not only detrimental to public interests but often most unjust to taxpayers. In this way the latter have come to the conclusion that there must be a great deal of dishonesty, if not something worse, on foot about the lobbies of the capitol which transforms an honest man into a rogue almost as soon as he sets foot within its halls .-Such undoubtedly has been public sentiment for a number of years; and we would therefore suggest to the present legislature to make an effort to retrieve its character, set to thinking whether there are not many laws that might be improved, and especially to guard against the passage of any new acts creating monopolies unless their need and objects are so evident as to require special privileges.

Among other matters which loom up before us, are-

1st. Temperance. The open violation of the present laws and the difficulties of convicting the guilty, show that there is ample room for salutary amendments. No person ought to be permitted to sell liquor of any kind without a license from the court, which body ought to be given full discretion to refuse any or all licenses, either on the ground of being unnecessary, the character of the applicants, or of those who recommend them. The application of each person for license for tavern, restaurant, or sale of any kind of liquor, ought also to be published, with the names of those recommending such establishment attached; and a remonstrance, signed by one-half or more of the adult population of any ward, district or borough, ought to be made conclusive against any and all parties remonstrated against in such ward, district or borough.

2d. The tax laws are both unequal and unjust in their assessment and collection. It is difficult to say what ought to be done to improve the assessments, but there is no doubt a great many counties pay far above their just proportion of State tax. Our financial condition might also probably justify a reduction of a mill or two on the State tax, or its collection might be suspended for a year. Its total repeal at present we think would be injudicious. It would also be a good move if the stocks taxable for county purposes were to be paid into the county treasury where such companies are located, in the same manner as they are now paid to the State.

3d. Collectors ought to be dispensed with, and the duplicates placed in the hands of county treasurers, who, after due notice, could attend in each district for receiving them, making an allowance of 5 per cent. on both county and State for prompt payment at the times specified -no deduction for three months thereafter-and add 10 per cent. to all remaining unpaid after that time-entering them up in a book to sale the delinquents' property in at and the House adjourned until Monday. Plain and simple. Act lawfully and you least two newspapers.

4th. Assessors ought to be elected for three years, so as to make the trithe lands, &c. in their districts.

An important bill extending the operations of the Freedmen's Bureau has been reported in the Senate and will probably become a law. It will render nugatory all the laws of the late rebel States making a distinction in law between the whites and blacks. The copperhead rebel sympathizers in the District are in much tribulation lest Congress should pass a law extend ing the right of suffrage.

In the Senate, on the 11th, the bill introduced by Mr. Donovan allowing passenger cars to run in Philadelphia, on Sunday, was referred to the Committee on Vice and Immorality. A debate took place on the question of adjourning until the second Tuesday in February, and a resolution to that effeet passed first reading, after which the Senate adjourned until Monday.

House.-Among the bills introduced was one instructing the Judiciary Committee to frame a bill increasing the liability of railroad companies for loss of life or injury to limbs; and one imposing a tax upon joint stock companies organized in this State to operate in other places. Resolutions were offered instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to vote for an amendment to the Constitution so as to apportion members of Congress according to the whole number of voters; to authorize the people to vote directly for President and Vice President, and to secure to all persons the right to testify in the courts. Other resolutions, instruc ting our congressional representatives to take certain action on the question of reconstruction, were also read. In the House, on the 12th, a resolution instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to prepare a revision of the revenue laws of the State, so as to tax all property, was offered and permitted to assemble as you are now as postponed. BOOK NOTICES,

We were shown a copy of a new religious work called "The Inner Life, or the Joys of my Father's House," which for fervency of christian spirit and a display of humble zeal we have not seen surpassed many books of this kind. The author, though not choosing to give his name, (he was formerly a resident of Lewistown) we know to be a devont christian gentleman, and the words of this book are from the heart of one who yearns to do good to his fellow-wayfarers It is printed on beautiful tinted paper, handsomely bound, and with clear type that will suit the dimmed eye of old age as well as "babes in Christ. "On the whole, it is a book for every christian—for father, mother, brother and sister—and therefore a book to lie near the Bible upon the family altar. Its descriptions will stand the test of close reading, and show the author to have resorted to deep research in bringing it complete as a religious work before the public eye. It comes highly sanctioned by the christian press. by bishops and ministers of all denominations, and we do not hesitate in recommending it to all.
