The Best Time to Cut Grass,

There has been a diversity of practice among farmers as to the best time to cut grass for hay. At the New York State Fair, last fall, the subject was discussed at a meeting of agriculturists held in the evening. The Genesee Farmer gives the following report of the discussion:

Mr. J. Stanton Gould opened the discussion. He took decided grounds against allowing grass to get dead ripe before it was cut. Professor Way's experiments showed that grass cut just as the plants were going out of flower contained forty per cent. more nutriment than when dead ripe. He was satisfied from his own experience that it was better to cut grass early. Timothy allowed to get ripe was no better than rye straw. The seeds of hay do not digest in the stomach. Cows dry up when fed on ripe hay. In regard to making hay, he remarked that the object was to secure as much of the nutriment of the grass as possible. We could not secure the whole. There was a loss in curing, and from fermentation, etc. The best way was to allow the grass to wilt as rapidly as possible, by exposing it to the air and sunshine. Four hours of good sunshine and it is ready to cock. It should not be exposed to dew while spread out. It washes out the nutri-

Mr. Van Alstine, of Columbia county, cut his grass in the morning till 11 o'clock. After dinner start the rake and cock up the hay. It was necessary, in the Valley of the Hudson, to commence to cock early on account of the dew. Allows the hay to stand in the cock one day. Next day open and draw in. In regard to the time of cutting hay, to be fed out on the farm, there could be but one opinion. It should be cut early. Barley straw is better than over-ripe timothy. But for market it was necessary to let it get riper. It sells bet-

Mr. Brewer, of Tomkins, raised consid erable clover seed, and consequently cut his clover hay early. Thought there was a loss in weight, but a gain in quality.-Draws it in rather green. Has poles on the bottom of his hay, so that there is a circulation; puts the hay in loose and it cures nicely. If it is very green sometimes mixes a little straw with it in stacking. Timothy meadows mowed early and the rowen allowed to rot on the ground will improve greatly.

Mr. Van Alstine, in reply to a question, said he puts four pounds of salt to a ton of hay when cut green. Thought a ton of hay if allowed to get ripe would give only fifteen hundred weight if cut green. If allowed to get over ripe, it would begin to lose weight again. Dr. Gill, of Poughkeepsie, cuts clover very early, and cocks in an hour in small cocks; draws in next day. Hay cocked green is not hurt by a shower as much as hay cocked dry.

Several gentlemen spoke; all in favor of cutting grass early.

Solon Robison, of New York, was asked why it was that ripe hay was preferred in the city. He said that the president of the Third Avenue Railroad Company had studied this subject carefully, and had made experiments with different foods, and had finally concluded that the best and most economical daily ration for the horse was sixteen pounds of corn meal and fourteen pounds of ripe timothy hay The hay was chaffed and moisted with water, and the meal mixed with it. A little salt was added.

In reply to a question, Mr. Robison said that the timothy was so ripe that the seeds would grow. In feeding trotting horses the hay is given them uncut. In the stables where the experiments were made to which he alludes over one thousand horses were kept.

The Cattle Plague.

The United States Consul at Liverpool, under date of December 19, informs the Department of State that the cattle plague is still on the increase, both in England and Scotland. He reports that the week previous to his despatch the number of cases was between seven and eight thousand. He says that the disease is most alarming, and is causing the greatest anxiety and sensation throughout the entire kingdom.

The Consul informs the Department that some writers are contending that the disease is a kind of small-pox, but from his conversation with the people, he ascer-tains that it is not well defined. As yet no certain or fixed remedy has been dis-
