Lewistown, Feb 7, 1866.

NOTICE.
THE subscriber has disposed of the patented limekin property at the north end of Valley street to Col. Wm. Willis, but reserves the limekin for a short time to fill a contract made for lime, and has procured the aid of a practical limeburner to perform that part; therefore, I offer myself to the citizens of Lewistown and its vicinity to attend to the art of MASONRY in all its branches, and shall be ready to furnish all materials if required. From my past experience I flatter myself to receive a share of public patronage. Persons wishing to give me a call, would do well to do so soon, as I wish to procure a sufficient force to do the work in due time.—Fresh lime can be had in a few days at the above kiln.
mar7-3t WILLIAM McKEE.

NEW FIRM.
THE undersigned having taken into partnership A. P. Blymyer, the Dry Goods and Grocery Business is now conducted in the name of George Blymyer & Son. All persons having unsettled accounts on my books are earnestly requested to call and make settlement, as I am desirous of closing said books as soon as possible.
GEORGE BLYMYER,
Thankful for the liberal patronage heretofore extended to this establishment, the new firm respectfully solicit a continuance of the same, and will use their utmost endeavors to please all who may favor them with a call.

HORACE GREELEY'S HISTORY OF THE WAR—"The American Conflict," in two Vols. Elegantly illustrated with 144 portraits on steel: numerous maps and Diagrams of battle fields; views, etc. 125,000 copies sold.
Volume I. of this History, published at most two years later than the first part of nearly every other, already includes among its patrons full 25,000 of the purchasers of those early works, and is everywhere recognized as the highest authority, even by the author's political opponents.
Volume II. will be ready in a few months—at the earliest day on which a well prepared history of the war can be obtained. The entire work, inimitable alike in excellence of plan and detail, will be vastly superior to any of those now completed, (most of which were "completed" long before Gen. Grant's report was made,) and by far the most satisfactory History of the late stupendous struggle—altogether unequalled for clearness, fullness, and accuracy of statements, combined with candor and graphic delineation of events.

If completed, as designed, the work will be authority as to the events of the most wonderful era in the history of the Country.—A. G. CURTIS, Governor of Pa.
It would be difficult to place too high an estimate on the service Mr. Greeley has rendered our country by the preparation of this volume. * * * I await the forthcoming of the second volume with eager expectation. W. D. KELLEY, M. C.
It bears the marks of labor, studied candor and accuracy.—Wm. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.
The narrative is simple and clear, with so much of life and spirit in it that it is next to impossible not to read a whole chapter without stopping. * * * It will be, and ought to be read by all our countrymen.—EDGAR COWAN, U. S. Senator.
Its accuracy gives it a value beyond any other history of that period. The great industry and impartiality of Mr. Greeley make this the text of all future histories of the Great Rebellion.—THADDEUS STEVENS, M. C.

Of all the Histories of the Great Rebellion which I have examined, this one seems to me the best in the copiousness of its antecedent and concurrent Congressional Records, as well as of the events of the war itself.—SCHUYLER COLFAX, Speaker U. S. House of Representatives.
Volume II. will be accompanied (without extra charge,) by an elegant copperplate map of the Seat of War, worth $1.00. Sold by traveling agents. Address,
O. D. CASE & CO., Publishers, mar7-t Hartford, Conn.

REDUCED, REDUCED!
P. F. LOOP
HAS greatly reduced the prices of Boots and Shoes. Having a large stock of goods on hand, he proposes to sell at reduced prices. He has a fine assortment of the best selection of men's Boots, from $3.75 and upward; boots from 2.00 to 3.75; youths 1.50; also women's shoes in great variety and of every style, at greatly reduced prices. His stock of children's Shoes is very large and ranges from 65 cents upward. An assortment of gum shoes. We still pay strict attention to manufacturing, buying none but the most experienced workmen. We consider our work second to none in town, and have a good assortment of home made work on hand, which will be sold low. He would invite the public generally to call and examine for themselves, and save at least twenty-five per cent. Work made to order with dispatch. He has also on hand a fine assortment of men's, women's misses and children's woolen and cotton HOSE, lower in price than any in town. Call at the old stand, in the public square.
BARK! BARK!!
A. & W. R. McKEE would respectfully inform the public that, notwithstanding their Tannery was destroyed by fire, they will buy all the Bark they can get for which they are prepared to pay the highest cash price.
They will also keep constantly on hand their usual stock of FINISHED LEATHER, which they will sell cheap for cash. They are not prepared to buy hides just now. may24-4t

POETRY.
To-day and To-morrow.
Don't tell me of to-morrow;
Give me the man who'll say,
That, when a good deed's to be done,
"Let's do the deed to-day."
We may all command the present,
If we act and never wait;
But repentance is the phantom,
Of a past that comes too late.
Don't tell me of to-morrow;
There is much to do to-day,
That can never be accomplished
If we throw the hours away.
Every moment has its duty,
Who the future can foretell?
Then, why put off till to-morrow
What to-day can do as well?
Don't tell me of to-morrow;
If we look upon the past,
How much that we have left to do,
We cannot do at last;
To-day, it is the one time,
For all on this frail earth;
It takes an age to form a life,
A moment gives it birth.

Moral and Religious.
For the Gazette.
The Golden Rule.
(CONCLUDED.)
And if we are honest, I think we will be obliged to say that the Silver rule is the highest maxim we have yet learned to honor. In fact many persons will say, in plain terms, "If I am just that's enough. If I do my neighbor's no harm, what more can be required of me?" My friend, nothing more is required of you by the silver rule of Jewish rabbis and heathen moralists; but if you mean to be a Christian, you must make up your mind, and open your heart for a great deal more. I admit that it is something, yea, that it is much, if a man come up to the standard of the silver rule—if a man carefully abstain from inflicting upon others injury and injustice, which he would not have inflicted on himself. I am afraid that the majority of us have scarcely come up to this point yet; but we must aim at something higher than this; we are not perfect; we are not Christ-like; we are not Christians, unless not only strict justice, but also the most expansive generosity be firmly established in our hearts, and constantly shown forth in our conduct. A just man, who is nothing more than just, does not and cannot fulfil this right royal law; he pays every man his dues, and pays punctually and in full; he is never guilty of slander; he bears in his heart no ill-will to any one; he does to no man what he would not have done to himself; but still he does not obey either the letter or spirit of this command, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." This law can scarcely be misunderstood by any intelligent and conscientious man. Although Christ says, in unqualified terms, that we are to do to others all things that we would wish them to do to us, it is very plain that he can only mean all things that are really right. But this law, as it stands, with the unqualified "all things whatsoever," is liable to abuse on the part of the unconscientious. For instance, there stands a prisoner at the bar; he has been tried for wilful murder, the jury, after careful deliberation, have returned a verdict of guilty, and the judge is putting on the black cap, and about to pronounce the sentence of death. "Stop!" says the prisoner, "your lordship professes to be a Christian, and to take the golden rule for your motto. Now, my lord, if you were in my place in this dock, and I in yours upon that bench, you know very well that you would wish me to spare your life; therefore I ask you to spare mine—to do to others as you would they should do to you. To this his lordship might reply that he was not at liberty to act for himself; that, in fact, he was the representative of the nation in that act of passing sentence, and he might further say, "In hanging you, I am only doing to others as I would they should do to me. I am doing, if not to you, to the people of this country, what I should wish them to do to me; I am ridding them of a dangerous character; I am consulting their safety, as I would wish them to consult mine." If every scoundrel is to plead the golden rule in mitigation of the punishment of his guilt, then there is an end of all public justice. The magistrate has his duties to the people, as well as to the criminal; he must not wrong them, out of pity for him; every person under such circumstances must have justice; they deserve justice; consequently this rule cannot be applied in mitigation of their punishment. Therefore the criminal, the idler and the impostor in vain plead this law, as if it were in their favor. It is not a law that connives at iniquity. Its spirit is essentially this—that I am to do to others all those just and generous things which I would fairly and reasonably expect others to do to me. Men may wish us to do things that are wrong, and plead that if we were in their circumstances, we should wish them to do wrong things for us; but the generosity of the golden rule must of course be restricted within the limits of justice. Having thus noticed the manner in which the golden rule may be misrepresented and misapplied, it is now time to speak of its application, as one of the great principles under the guidance of which man ought to live. I believe there is not much diversity of opinion as to the value of this rule. It meets with almost universal approval. Every one reminds his neighbor of it; almost every one boasts that he always observes it, and from the great admiration with which the golden rule is regarded, and the praise heaped upon it, it might be supposed that this precept governed all and regulated all men's conduct; that all their words and all their works were carefully measured by this rule. But notwithstanding the amount of admiration which this great principle so generally and almost universally commands, there is a general, almost universal complaint that it is not practically honored. The rule most generally recognized is rather this, not, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you," but "Whatsoever ye find that men do to you, do ye even so to them." People are perpetually saying to each other, "Do as you would be done by," but those who expect others to act thus to them, seem never to think that they are also thus to act to others. Now, instead of thus complaining of each other and storming at each other, because this law is not observed, it will be a much more sensible course for every man to see to it that he himself, in all his conduct, acts as the law requires, for it is not given to us by its great author, as an instrument of criticism and a means of detecting our neighbor's faults, but as a rule for the correction of our own. I dare say you can point to many a man, that you are at this very moment thinking of some man, who does not do as he would be done by; but possibly, some one is thinking and saying just the same thing of you, and with quite as good reason. This, then, should be the ruling principle in all business transactions. In all such transactions, each party is, by this law, required to suppose himself in the position of the other, to consider what he would have fair reason to expect were he in the position of the other, and to act accordingly. Therefore, whatever may be our situation or business in life, there is a relationship existing, that is not properly valued by the creature in the sphere in which he is called to act. And as there are great developments made by the ration in all practical operations in machinery, which are still nearing perfection; why are not those proper developments made on this golden rule, for the benefit of practical life? A golden chain, the links of which unite the hearts of men together, and thereby bind the heart of the nation; producing the happy result both of social and pecuniary benefit. But casting our thoughts broadcast upon the world, we discover that those principles are made subservient to avarice and pride, "the sin that is a reproach to any nation." If it were the kind of pride that would elevate and cultivate and make practicable the principles of the royal law, we could rejoice in the prospect of salutary results. But men generally labor as if their wealth, comfort, and happiness, were couched within their own efforts and judgement; but not so, man should answer to man, by adapting his labors to the benefit of others, and thereby fulfill another noble precept, in "Not seeking our own, but another's wealth." Our effort should be to root up the existing evils of society, and not seek who may be most apt in sowing the seeds of evil and discord; in not making these noble principles subordinate, but subservient to the best interest of society; laying aside individual interest, the idea that self is the man; the mighty love of the dollar, which is the root of all evil, and fail to obtain it, from a non-application of the golden rule; and by which many are blind-folded, and have no scruple of guilt, of conscience. Now the result of this is, that we either are ignorant, or wilfully violate this generous and universal command. Oh! Away with such diabolical ignorance. Away with such wilful depreciation of known duty. It will all perish in the grave. Yes, worse, it will be a means of binding our souls to an eternal fate. The adoption of bad principles are worse than none at all; by it we forfeit the true benefits of society, and lose the diadem of life; the boon which our Heavenly Father gratuitously bestowed upon all.

Samuel Poorman, son of Lieut. W. F. Poorman, had his right hand horribly lacerated by some of the machinery in the Harrisburg cotton mill, where he was employed. His injuries are of such a character as to require the amputation of some of the fingers on the wounded hand.
