

IPES.

One pint of flour, one egg, gear, butter as large as the moon, milk to make stiff as a teaspoonful of cream of a teaspoonful of soda.

Lemon Tarts.—Mix well together the juice and grated rinds of two large lemons, half a pound of powdered loaf sugar, two eggs, and the cream of two sponge cakes; beat it thoroughly smooth, and put it into twelve patties lined with a light puff paste; bake them until the crust is done.

Cake.—One cup of butter, four of flour, four eggs, three cups of sugar, one of sweet milk, one of currants, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half teaspoonful of soda, nutmeg, lemon or vanilla. This makes two loaves; two cups of sugar will do.

Jeany Lind Cake.—Half cup of sugar, three cups of flour, two of milk, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one of soda, a little salt; bake twenty minutes.

Soda Cake.—One cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, one cup of sweet milk, one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar.

Fruit cake.—Two cups of butter, three of sugar, one of molasses, two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one pound of citron, two eggs, one tumbler of cream, half tumbler of brandy, one teaspoonful of salaratus, spice all kinds.

Molasses Drop Cakes.—One cup of molasses, half cup of butter, half cup of water, three cups of flour, two teaspoonful of ginger, one of soda. Beat the ingredients well together, and drop with a spoon in a buttered tin. Bake quick.—Godley's Lady's Book for April.

MISCELLANY.

My Newspaper.

Who can estimate the value of the newspaper? No one would like to live until the pleasant periodical visits, like the face of a dear friend, bringing such a fund of wit, news and general intelligence, that he is always greeted with a hearty welcome, are withdrawn. It is in one sense the light of the world, without which the mental universe would be as much in darkness as the terrestrial is without the sun.

There are books, it is true, good, wise, instructive and entertaining; but who do not feel us what we want to know of passing events, or direct us to the best places of trade or business. Neither do they inform us of who our friends are passing away or getting married, or who is doing a driving business, or who is bankrupt, or who has sailed to the eastern continent, or who has returned from a tour thither. I did not think of all this until I had formed the foolish resolve not to take my paper another year. The pressure of the times was severe, business dull, my family expensive, and it really seemed necessary to retrench somewhere, in order to make both ends meet at the end of the year. So I thought, as I sat one evening in dressing gown and slippers, with my feet upon the fender, I had my last paper in my hand, which I perused with a greater degree of interest than ever before. It may be because I resolved to part with it.

I tell you, Katie, said I to my wife, 'it won't do, we must curtail expenses; and I will begin by withdrawing my advertisement from the newspaper, and ordering it discontinued. Taxes will soon be due, which must be paid; wood is enormously high, but we can't do without it—nor groceries, nor lights or clothing, or many other incidental expenses. We have plenty of books and magazines, old, to be sure, still they are readable; and we must do without the paper for a year to come.'

'It is only one dollar and a half a year,' said my wife, quietly.

'I know it,' I replied, 'but every dollar counts now-a-days.'

'But do you not believe that it will have a tendency to render your business still more dull than it is now?' she asked.

'Nonsense! a place so well established needs not so questionable a lever to help it on. I do not suppose that will make any difference, while the cost of advertising amounts to considerable,' I replied, a little impatient.

'But what will you do for the news?' she ventured again.

'Oh, I can gain enough of that by intercourse with others, and can occasionally buy or borrow a copy.'

'John Smythe,' now fully aroused, 'I am ashamed of you. What! too poor to take a paper yourself, and yet willing to glean information from others, whose money has paid for what they learn, and, at the same time, defraud the honest publishers, who are constantly laboring with head and hand for others' good. Talk about retrenchment. You had better stop your bills at the saloons for ale and segars—a needless expenditure for yourself alone, while the newspaper is a perpetual intellectual feast for the whole family, yourself not excepted, and it costs but the merest trifle in comparison to the money you spend every week for tobacco and drink. You have not spoken of the increased price of these articles. Stop the paper, indeed?' And my wife jerked her chair around with not a very graceful movement, and sat with her back toward me, in utter contempt for my penny-wise and pound foolish resolution.

Now, I make it a point never to yield a point to my wife or any of the family, if I can help it, as in case I should become a secondary consideration in my own family—a position I by no means intend to occupy; so I said nothing, but sat and puffed my fragrant Havana, watching the graceful folds of smoke as it wound itself in little wreaths about my head. I resolved that, come what would, I would not yield indulgence in the delicious weed for the sake of a newspaper.

The next day I called upon my publisher, settled accounts, and ordered the paper to be discontinued.

'On what grounds?' he asked, in some surprise.

'Nothing,' I said, 'only I can't afford it,' and I walked away, leaving him to his own reflections.

Time passed on, and on the day when it was due I could not feel quite contented at the non-appearance of my newspaper. I missed the bright cheery face of the carrier and the interesting news he was wont to bring with the return of each week, through fair weather and foul.—There were other papers about, for I bought a copy occasionally; but these were published in eastern cities, and contained no local news of my own home.

At night, when I reached home, my eldest daughter, Myra, met me in the hall.

'Where is the paper, papa?' said she.—'Oh I am in such a hurry to see it. Mattie Trueworth's marriage is in it, and the editor has published such an appropriate verse in connection I am told.'

But I put her hand aside, saying, 'The paper will not come any more, I have ordered it discontinued.'

'Why, father?' she exclaimed, 'how can we do without it?'

'We must learn to do without it,' I replied, as I passed to the upper room.

After supper, instead of reading to my family—sometimes leading their minds away off to other scenes and distant regions, beautiful countries that others have explored at a great expense and some risk of life; sometimes to the fierce fields of battle, blood and carnage, pictured so vividly that they seemed indeed before us while we were comfortable and safe in our little home; or singing over the stray waifs of real poetry which oftentimes finds its way into the newspaper, touching a tender chord in every heart,—as I was wont to do, I stretched myself upon the sofa and tried to sleep.

'Tommy,' whispered Myra, 'run over to Mr. Wilds and see if you cannot borrow his Gazette.'

But Tommy soon returned for answer that Mr. Wilds was reading it himself.

'Then go to Mr. Brown's, and if you cannot get his, to Mr. Gates.'

But Tommy was not more successful at either those places. Mr. Brown had taken his down town, and Mr. Gates 'didn't like to lend his paper. Thought his father took it.' A disappointed sigh was Myra's only answer.

'The particulars of that murder affair are in the Gazette this week,' said my wife, with a slight frown upon her brow, 'and I would really like to see it.'

'And Millie Mitford's new story was to come out in this week's paper. I really wish I could borrow it somewhere,' said Myra.

'Here, Tommy,' said I, taking five cents from my pocket, 'run down to the news office and buy a copy, if it is not too late, or the publishing office.'

Tommy soon returned out of breath.—'I've run enough after that old paper,' said he, with a touch of his father's 'spunk,' 'and I won't go again. The publishing office was closed, and the news office had not a number left. I would like to find out, though, when that excursion is coming off. Nobody knows for sure but the Gazette. Is it in that, father?' he added.

The minds of all as well as myself were on the missing paper, but I was thoroughly out of patience with myself and with them. 'I tell you I don't know anything about it,' I replied, in a not very amiable tone. 'I fear, scemed to me you are all wonderfully interested in that confounded paper since you know it is stopped. I don't want to hear another word about it.'

This put a quietus upon the subject, at least for the time. However, as time passed on, I began to think I had made very little progress towards bettering my condition, and that gathering information of current events by intercourse with others, and from street conversations, was a very unreliable source. Every one gave a coloring peculiarly his own, and every one needs to read for himself to have a correct idea of 'what is going on' around him.

Besides this, my business from dull became duller, and eventually duldest; while my neighbor across the way, with no better qualifications than myself, seemed to do a driving business. Could it be because he advertised largely in all the locals that which nobody took the trouble to read? Doubtful.

One day I met an old friend and customer whom I had not seen for a long time. I had often wondered what had become of him, as well as some others in his neighborhood, who were once all good paying customers of mine.

'How are you?' said he, giving me his hand. 'How do you prosper; going down hill, eh?'

'I hope not,' I replied, with a faint smile.

'Well, I see you have stopped advertising, and I supposed you had closed out or smashed up; and, as I am usually in a hurry when I come to town, I go where they advertise to do work well and promptly. This is why I have not been to see you lately. Good-bye, sir. If you are still in business let us see your card, and know where you are and what you are doing.'

I began to think better of advertising than before, and on my way home I gave the worthy publisher of the Gazette another call.

I began to think, friend, said I, 'that I began in the wrong direction to curtail expenses; that I was indeed penny-wise and pound foolish when I withdrew my patronage. Our interests are more intimately connected than I could have believed until I made the experiment.'

Thereupon I was again enrolled on his list of subscribers, and half a column devoted to business affairs. And I freely confess that I have had no occasion to regret the expenditure. My old customers and many new ones began to make their appearance, business began to revive, and ere long I felt warranted of securing an assistant.

My family were gratified with the appearance of their old friend, the Newspaper; and I am resolved that, sooner than part with it again, I will yield up ale and cigars, which for me would be quite a sacrifice. I prize more highly than ever before my Newspaper.

Murder in Roxbury, Mass.

Mary Ellen Kearney was shot dead on the 19th, in the doorway of her father's house in Roxbury, by John Moran. The parties had been keeping company, but Moran's character being reputed bad, the father of the young woman had forbidden him the house. The alleged murderer surrendered himself to the police next morning. Another cause for shooting the young woman, is the statement that she had accidentally learned the contents of a letter from a man named Mallory in Philadelphia, written to Moran, announcing that the man they garoted had died of his injuries, and cautioning him (Moran) to keep out of the way. It is said Moran was recently in Philadelphia.

Drowned.—A young man named Geo. Grubb, son of Jacob Grubb, of Columbia, was drowned in the Susquehanna river, at Columbia, on Tuesday morning. The deceased and another young man named Paul Strickler were on the river 'ducking,' and the stream being covered with a thick fog, they did not observe that their boat was nearing the dam until it was too late to prevent it from passing over. Both jumped out and endeavored to save themselves, but Grubb went under the water and was drowned. Strickler held on to the sheeting of the dam and was rescued by some persons who came from the Wrightsville side.

GROVER & BAKER'S

NEW AND IMPROVED SHUTTLE MACHINE. No. 1, Price $80

THE GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE CO. invite the attention of Tailors, Manufacturers of Clothing, Boots and Shoes, and Carriage Trimmers, and others requiring a rapid, light-running, and durable Lock Stitch Machine, to their new No. 1 Sewing Machine,

It is of extra size, very strong and powerful, easily operated with little noise; is adapted to every variety of sewing from the thinnest muslin to the heaviest leather, and will work equally well with cotton, linen or silk thread. Letters similar to the following are being constantly received:

'Our machinist and foreman have both thoroughly examined and tested your No. 1 Machines on different material, from the heaviest harness leather and finest broadcloth, and in doing so they found it superior to any other machine in use, and we find it makes a perfect stitch on all materials. I have tried your Singer's and other machines for years, and have no hesitation in pronouncing your No. 1 Shuttle Machine the best by far of any machine we have used.'

Merchant Tailor, 121 Lake Street, Chicago.

'I am the fortunate possessor of one of your new No. 1 Shuttle Machines; I have used the Singer sewing machine for the past few years, and it gives me great pleasure to say that this one is far superior in all points to any that I have ever used or seen. I want no better. This machine can be seen at my shop at any time.'

Merchant Tailor, Lewistown, Pa.

ALL WHO WANT THE LATEST AND BEST should not fail to call and see this new and improved Sewing Machine, as it is destined to supersede all the heretofore popular Machines for manufacturing purposes.

Having the largest variety of machines of any other Company, we can suit all tastes with a machine priced from $25 to $75. All new-lines warranted. Grover & Baker's Cotton, Linen Thread and Machine Twist for sale.

Information and samples of sewing given by P. F. LOOP, Agent, sep21-ly Lewistown, Pa.

Conducted by gentlemen of liberal education and extensive experience in business, and affording the greatest advantages for the thorough theoretical and practical education of young men for the various offices and employments of business life.

THEORY AND PRACTICE COMBINED by a system of ACTUAL BUSINESS TRAINING original and pre-eminently practical, giving the student in the shortest time a complete insight into the general details, customs and forms of business, as conducted in the best regulated commercial and financial establishments.

Theoretical Bookkeeping Upon a new plan, with an original exposition of the science of accounts, arranged and published by the proprietor of this Institution exclusively for his use, saving one-half the ordinary labor of the student, and giving him a complete knowledge of the practice of the best accounts.

The Commercial Course ENBRACES Bookkeeping, Commercial Arithmetic, Penmanship, Business Correspondence, Commercial Law, Letter Writing on Business Affairs, Commercial Customs, Foreign and Actual Business Practices, Special Branches.

Algebra and the Higher Mathematics, Philosophy, Scientific Penmanship, the Art of Teaching, Bookbinding, Telegraphy.

The arrangements for Telegraphing are far in advance of anything of the kind ever offered to the public. A regular Telegraph Line is connected with the Institution with twenty branch offices in various parts of the city, where public business is transacted, and in which the students of this Institution are permitted to practice. No regular office practice can be had in any other school of instruction in the country, with which one can obtain a position as a practical telegrapher. Young men are cautioned against the deceptive representations of those who, without any such facilities, pretend to teach Telegraphing.

Patronage. This Institution is now enjoying the largest patronage ever bestowed upon any commercial school in the State. Over five hundred students were admitted during the first year, and over seven hundred during the year just past. The best class of students may readily be found here, and all its associations are so.

Location and Accommodations. The Institution is located in the most central part of the city, and its accommodations, for extent, elegance and convenience, are unsurpassed. All its rooms have been newly and tastefully furnished. BUSINESS OFFICES OR COUNTING HOUSES, TELEGRAPH OFFICES, STATIONERY STORE, AND A REGULAR

BANK OF DEPOSIT AND ISSUE, supplied with finely-engraved lithographic notes made at a printing medium in the Department of Actual Business.

To Young Men who desire the very best facilities for a

Practical Education for Business, we guarantee a course of instruction no where else equalled, while the reputation and standing of the Institution among business men make its endorsement the best guarantee to success and to advancement. All contemplating entering any Commercial College, are invited to send for an Illustrated Circular and Catalogue, containing complete interior views of the College, and full particulars of the course of instruction, terms, &c.
