J. K. HARTZLER, Belleville, Mifflin County, Editor.

For the Educational Column. Our friends of the pedagogic persuasion cannot be too well versed in human nature. We therefore, invite them to a study of boy nature as portrayed in the following racy article from the pen of Henry Ward Beecher:

Pleasure Riding.

It is astonishing how much pains people will take to be not happy. Great sums of money are spent on disconsolate hearts, empty heads, restless, nervous indolents, to make them happy. But, unless there is the quality of happiness in them, it is as vain as to beat upon lead in hope of music. How much money is lavished upon horses and splendid equipages; and how many sunny hours are witnesses of the un happy creatures who affect happiness in their ostentatious parade? If the heart be merry, it bubbles up and overflows with enjoyment without an effort. Did you ever take notice that unarranged and unexpected rides, uncouth and even ridiculous, are productive of more real enjoyment than the best that are sought and expected?

'Fix up your boys, and get out your best carriage, and take a regular ride, and ten to one next time you offer the chance they will say no. But when did a boy ever refuse a ride in an oxcart? When did a boy ever refuse a ride to mill on creaking cart, but above all, astride the plump bags of grain on horse-back? Away with your fine turn-outs for sensible boys! A lumber wagon, an old cart, a stone dray, are better than any chariot. If a big brother or a kind 'hired man' will give the boys a turn in the wheel-barrow, that would be superlative. There is an indiscribable relish, too, in a pair of wheels, with two boys hitched on before, and upon the bare axletree, occupied alternately in tumbling off and getting on. But who shall tell or imagine the satisfaction of riding upon a jack or jenny? It is plain that these creatures were created with special reference to boys' wants. They are tough, insensitive to the whip, self-opinionated, and in no danger whatever of being abused; having a way of using their heels and mouth that promotes humanity among boys. If the boys do not enjoy the exercise, every spec-tator does. The jenny on our premises is somewhat larger than a rat, and of the same color. She goes when she has a mind to, stops when she pleases, throws the boys off when she is tired of them, turns around when they forbid, starts when they say 'Whoa! and stops when they say 'Go 'long ! A whip seems agreeable to her hide rather than otherwise. She is so short that a moderate sized boy has to hold up his feet in riding; and of course, in falling off, has not so far to go as on his own feet. It is amusing to see what an amount of work can be got out of a boy, for nothing, which would be considered a great hardship if applied to good uses. All the toil of riding Jenny applied to the garden would almost make a man's work for the day!

'But we have reserved for the last the grand triumphal ride! Where the cart has been stacked with sheaves, or loaded with hay, and towers high in the air, then let the importunate boy be lifted to its top, and come home embosomed in clover and fragrant hay. No king has triumphant entrances into rejoicing cities as boys have into barns, upon the broad backs of haycarts. It makes one quite melancholy to see how much money is spent upon unhappy people to make them discon-tented. Strip off their gentility, send them into the country, give them a plain cart, an ox sled, or a harvest wagon, and they will have sensations of pleasure long strangers to them!'

MISCELLANY.

POISONED BY PAPER COLLARS .--- A Boston paper has a report that a clerk in one of the wholesale stores of that city has lately been afflicted with a painful breaking out on the neck, which he attributed to boils, but the matter getting serious, he applied to a physician, who informed his patient that he was suffering from the poisonous properties of articles used in the preparation of his enamelled paper collars which had been absorbed into his system; and upon inquiry it was found that some half dozen other clerks all of whom wore these collars, were affected in a similar manner.

Controversy .- There is scarcely any subject that does not admit of controversy. There are few if any points of faith, doctrine or principle which concern mankind, that have not had eager, able and apparently sincere assailants. Indeed, so great is the difference in human opinion, and the discrepancy in human judgment, that one might almost be persuaded to embrace the sentiment of Carneades, who maintained that 'there were only resemblances or probabilities of truth in the mind of man; and that of two things directly opposite, either might be chosen indifferently.

Jenkins thus describes the hangings of a New York belle: 'She wore an exquisite hyphalutin on her head, while her train was composed of transparent folderol, and her petticoat of Crambambuli flounced with Brussels three ply of A No. 1.'
