

RECIPES.

Slobbering in Horses.—A correspondent of the Boston Cultivator says that this is a disease in horses. Saltpetre, a tablespoonful for a dose, he has found to cure the worst case he ever had, and has not found it necessary ever to give the fourth dose. He gives a tablespoonful in the morning, and in three days, if he is not free from it, he repeats the dose.

Cure for Self-sucking Cows.—A Steuben county correspondent of the Genesee Farmer says that he cured a three year old heifer of sucking herself by smearing her teats night and morning with soft grease, and then dusting them thoroughly with pulverized cayenne pepper. The applications were continued about a week, and a perfect cure effected.

Sore Bores.—When the disease has proceeded to or approaches ulceration and brought about one of those sluggish, ill-conditioned ulcers, with flabby granulations, and an ichorous discharge, my remedy is lint steeped in warm 'gum elemi ointment,' the ointment to be heated in a spoon over a candle, and the lint, fine and well soaked in this, to be inserted into the sore. I have known more progress effected by this dressing in one week than by three months of other treatment.—Blackwood.

Worth Knowing.—A poison of any conceivable description and degree of potency, which has been swallowed intentionally or by accident, may be rendered almost instantaneously harmless by swallowing two gills of sweet oil. An individual with a very strong constitution should take twice that quantity. This oil will neutralize every form of vegetable or mineral poison with which physicians and chemists are acquainted.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Fence Question.
One kind of work which farmers have been much accustomed to perform in winter time, hitherto, was that of turning the proper timber into rails and stakes for fences. Doubtless many look with a feeling of sorrow and apprehension, at the present time, on their decaying fences, and woodlot devoid of timber for rebuilding them, and wonder what another generation will do when the rails and rail timber are alike among the things of the past.

Well, among other important subjects which the farmer should carefully consider and discuss, in his time of leisure, is this fence question. The rail fence, has had its day; from necessity we must abandon it when the present stock of rails is worn out and decayed. And with it will vanish a slovenly appendage to the farm—one of the chief harboring places of small vermin and foul weeds, and a too convenient receptacle of stone, stumps, or any loose rubbish of the fields. If, then, the state of our farming is such that fences are a necessity, and are likely to go on, we must adopt some thing more readily accessible than timber, and more durable and tasty. On the vast, monotonous prairies, we think is the most appropriate place for hedges; the fields are likely to be made large, and in the absence of hills and groves these lines of living green are needed to break the monotony of view, and supply some shelter from the bleak winds. Hedge rows running north and south should be grown as tall as possible.

In New England, the Middle and Southern States, the sole use of a fence is to turn stock; and it is desirable to occupy as little land with it as possible. Where stone abound other material will be less required. In many places ditches with a sod and stone wall will answer the double requirement of drain and fence, and there will, doubtless, eventually be found hedging plants adapted to the coldest and warmest sections. In this connection it is not amiss to hint to the tile makers that it is just possible burnt clay, in some form may become a substitute for the wooden ends of fence posts that are inserted in the ground.

But we will just hint to the farmers who are anxiously studying how to restore their fences in the cheapest manner, that the first step is to dispense with a large proportion of what you already have. This will give some material to repair the remainder. Make the fields larger—but remember it is not necessary to always plow the whole field, or sow it all to one crop. All the grain land and meadows might be in one field and thus save hundreds of rods of fence on a farm. A string of movable fence may be used when portions of it are required for pasture. In short, look over your farm and calculate how many lines of useless fence you have; next, how many rods of permanent fence can you dispense with by using one hundred rods of movable; third, what material you can best use to make your indispensable fences really permanent.—Rural New Yorker.

GOOD NEWS TO HOUSEKEEPERS!!

The Latest and Most Valuable Discovery of the Age!
WINDOWS CLEANED
Without Soap or Water, Time or Labor, by using

WOODSUM'S Instantaneous Window Polish.

IT DOES away with soap suds or hot water, and avoiding the slops upon the floor or adjoining paint, and the disagreeable sensation of the water running down on the arms, under the sleeves, and wetting them to the shoulders. It leaves no lint upon the glass, and gives it a more transparent and clearer appearance than can be got with ten times the amount of labor and time in washing. For polishing Mirrors, or any kind of Silver, Brass or Tin-ware, it has no equal. The polish is warranted to contain no acid, nor anything of a poisonous or injurious character, but is perfectly harmless in every respect.
