THE "SEASON."

Social and Literary Life in Lancaster. Adapted from F. and M. College Letter to the

We have never known a winter, or season, we will call it, in which the social well off, is anxious to have the child, and life of Lancaster has been so active and will do well by it. Mrs. Dunn is backed stirring in the way of mutual improvement as the present. The Young Men's Christian association has had lectures weekly, the Star club has been studying ths geography of the heavens, and this is followed now by the Plant club for the study of 1 o'clock the court adjourned until botany. Then there is the Thursday club, 4 this afternoon, when counsel will argue that meets for social entertainment in va- the case. The child is a very pretty little rious forms; the Cooking club, not to girl, neatly dressed and looks as if she was mention other associations of various well taken care of by Mr. Garrecht, of sorts ; and last, but not least, the Cliowhom she seems to be very fond. The imsophic club, numbering from thirty to pelling cause of the present suit appears forty members, that meets once every two weeks for literary improveto have been a family quarrel. This may claim to be the Colment. lege club, for it is made up of the professors of Franklin and Marshall college, their wives and daughters, a few students, among the grocers who rent stalls in the and representatives from the different professions, and also from some families in the city. The general subject of study this winter has been the "characteristics of mediaval history as compared with modern history." An essay is read by one of the members on a topic assigned at a previous meeting, and this is followed criticism, discussion, and quizzing, to bring out the subject fully, after which plain refreshments are served, and the remainder of the evening is spent in a social way. The essays thus far have been very carefully prepared, and have been highly instructed. Dr. Dubbs read one on Romance in the Middle Ages, Prof. Nevin, on the Literature of that period, E. K. Martin, esq., on Feudalism, Dr. T. G. Apple, on Scholasticism, and W. U. Hensel, on the Crusades, Prof. Stahr on Mediaval Science, to be followed by O. F. Adams on Florence in the time of Dante and by Miss Alice Nevin on the Mediæval Cuisine. Dr. T. G. Apple is president of the club, and Miss Alice Nevin is secretary. The organization is very free, stalls, to rent stalls in the butchand aims to connect social enjoyment with ers' department. There seems to be literary improvement. The Linnman some force in their statement that association is a society in the city of if they are not allowed to bring groceries a very fine museum, and devotes its studies in the line of natural science. Dr. tail it in the market. There are only about Rathvon, a celebrated entomologist, is one | ten stands in the market occupied by groof the oldest members. Franklin and cers, while there are more than five times and successful comedy of this name will be Marshall college did itself honor as well as him by conferring on him the degree of Ph. D. a year or two ago. From this it will appear that Lancaster does not n-glect literary work and improvement in the whirl of business life and activity. The institutions have had thus far a pleasant and a prosperous year. The present senior class in the college numbers twenty-three members. The next commencement promises to be one of interest. The alumni address will be delivered by Dr. Klopp, of Philadelphia. Gov. Hoyt, we believe, is to be present on the occasion, but of the other speakers and arrangements we can say nothing as yet. vided Gov. Hoyt is a fine classical scholar, and his presence will add to the interest of the commencement. Ex-Governor Hartranft, an old Marshall student, has attended several commencements at Laneas- contains the following : "Yesterday afcaster, and we would be glad to see him present also at the next one. The recent handsome addition to the endowment of the college places Franklin and Marshall on a solid financial foundation, and a fair and prospereus future seems to be opening before her. The new catalogue soon to be issued will present a fair exhibition of the tempted to get on the train, and, losing continued prosperity of seminary, college his hold, fell, the cars passing over one of and academy, The St. Stephen's congregation, which is a marked feature in the institutions at Lancaster, brings the influence and benefits of Christianity into roal, living union with the literary work carried on in these institutions. The worship in the chapel, and the works of beneficence carried on by the congregation, render this a delightful spiritual home. St. Luke's church, the Fifth Reformed church of Lancaster, whose neat chapel was recently dedicated, free of debt, is one of the fruits of the missionary spirit cultivated in the seminary and college. This is at least one tangible hospital." evidence that the missionary spirit is not wanting in these institutions. The Society of Inquiry, and the weekly prayer meeting conducted by the theological students, bear evidence that their education is not confined to the routine of the class-room merely. If a missionary spirit is wanting in the Reformed church, which we think is not the case to the extent sometimes reyear. presented, the whole, or even chief, blame cannot justly be laid, we think, on our colleges and seminaries, either at Lancaster, Tiffin or elsewhere. The weight of years falls gently upon Dr. Nevin. He seems, indeed, to renew his youth. Surely such a placid and serene eventide of life is a rich boon, at the close of a well-spent life. Though living the theory that the ground hog, if it daily more in the atmosphere and spirit of the world beyond that in this present world, we are encouraged to hope that certainly did this year) goes into its hole this good and great man will be spared to yet many happy returns of this pleasant Mrs. Nevin, remembered anniversary. with affection by generations of students, seems to lose none of her vigor and vivacity, alongside her revered husband, by advancing years. Three of their children are in Europe, Wilberforce, Blanche and Robert ; Misses Alice and Patti grace the home circle, and the remaining portion of family live in the home above.

The Custody of a Child in Dispute. To-day before Judges Livingston and Patterson was heard testimony in the case of Mrs. Clara Dunn vs. Wm. H. Garrecht, to secure the custody of a child of Mrs. Dunn's, aged about 7 years, and of which Mr. Garrecht has had possession for about four years. On the part of Mr. Garrecht it was shown that the child was illegitimate and that its mother had been leading a lewd life and was not a fit person to have custody of the child, which was being well taken care of by Mr. Garrecht's family-Mr. Garrecht's wife being the child's aunt. On the part of Mrs. Dunn it was shown that she had done all she possibly could do to support the child ; that her mother, Mrs. Frecht, had almost exclusive care of it until it was three years old when it was taken in charged by Mr. Garrecht, and that since he has had custody of it, its mother and her sister, Mrs. Sarah A. Miller, have assisted to support it. That in 1878 the child's mother married Captain Dunn, who owns a schooner trading between Philadelphia and Rich mond, and also owns a house and 21 acres of ground near Laurel, Del. ; that he is forgotten lore in the shape of an almanac up in her claim for the custody of the child by her mother (who has raised 12 children) and by her sister, Mrs. Miller, who swear she is a fit person to take charge of it.
