The Heavy Fall on Sunday and To-day-Something About Late Storms in Former Years.

The reputations of Arctomys Monax and Mr. Vennor, the "alleged" weather prophets, which were certainly tarnished somewhat by the appearance of springlike weather when they had predicted storms, are being brightened up a little by the heavy snow storms we are having this Reynolds. The rooms of the association week. The great storm of Sunday extended over an immense area of territory to the west and north of us. Yesterday Heinitsh, one of the executors, and Hon. was uncomfortably cold, and to-day it has snowed continuously up to the present time the fall of snow being several inches deep. The mercury this morning was down to 24, but it is now getting up pretty close to the melting point. To verify the groundhog theory will require a full week of solid winter weather and that we are not very likely to get. However, St. Patrick's day has not yet arrived and it is barely possible that that good old saint, who generally brings us a storm on his anniversary, may come to the rescue of the groundhog and Mr. Vennor.

By referring to an old file of the INTEL-LIGENCER we find that on the 16th of March, 1843, "an old fashioned snow storm "took place. The itemizer of that day recorded it as follows: "St. Patrick's day saw the sun rise on one of the deepest snows we have had for many years. It commenced snowing on the 16th, in the morning, and snowed incessantly, accompanied by a high wind, we believe, all night. Eighteen inches is the depth of the snow. The railway and all the other roads are completely jammed. In some of the deep cuts on the state railway [now the Pennsylvania railway] the snow has drifted twenty feet high. We can imagine what kind of labor and how severe it was, the hands in the employ of the state were obliged to undergo. Public servants don't usually earn money so hard."

The Intelligencer of April 15, 1862, contains a notice of a still later snow storm. "On Tuesday and Wednesday, the 8th and 9th of April, snow fell continuously, and on Thursday morning lay about tifteen inches deep on a level. The railroad cuts were almost literally filled up and the cars from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh were unable to get through until the afternoon. Sleighs were in requisition and a goodly number of our citizens took advantage of this almost unprecedented fall of snow to envoy the pleasures of a ride."

THE PLANT CLUB.

Meeting of Local Botanists Last Evening The audience room of the Young Men's Christian association was filled last evening at the meeting of the Plant club. Half the members present were ladies, and much interest was manifested. The special subect was the leaf, the class having made preparation upon this as treated in Gray's School and Field Book. Mr. Burrowes had placed on the blackboard a number of questions developing the leading points in connection with the leaf, which were answered by the members of the club as called upon.

Mr. Grant Carpenter read a paper on the same subject, illustrating leaf forms and leaf arrangement on the stem, with admirably drawn illustrations, both on the blackboard and in crayon on white paper. Mr. Carpenter is in the draughting-room of the Lancaster watch factory, and is to be congratulated no less on the excellence of his drawing than upon his very satisfacfactory essay.

The Snow-drop, Galanthus nivalus, of the Amaryllis family, was then distributed to the class, and its analysis readily traced through the tables of the text books, each step being placed on the blackboard. This was so simple and easily understood that any member should now be able to go through the analysis of the flower. The work of the class will be made of the same practical character at future meetings, so that everybody may be able to get something of profit from attendance at the Plant club.

It was stated during the evening-by way of encouragement to persons who imagine the study a difficult one-that two members of the club, Messrs. Walter King and Scott Adler, now of the first and second classes in the high school, analyzed last year five hundred plants and trees, and that this year they purpose analyzing one thousand, including native and exotic plants, trees, ferns etc! This "contract" is a large one, but the boys are industrious and have enthusiasm. They have already made a good start on their self-imposed task, and, although they may fall short of their thousand, will at least run the number high up in the hundreds by next November. We shall look with interest for the result of their work.

Obituary. Emanuel Metzger, formerly of this city, died at his residence in Philadelphia, last evening at 8 o'clock. Deceased was a brother and one of the executors of the late John Metzger, the well-known clothier of this city. He learned the trade of saddle and harness making with his uncle, the late Judge Schaeffer, and after following the business for some years in this city, removed to Philadelphia, where he established a lucrative trade. On the breaking out of the late war he secured extensive contracts for furnishing the government with saddles and harness, and by his energy and good judgment accumulated quite a fortune. He was an amiable and strictly conscientious man, and a large circle of friends and relatives in this city will sincerely mourn his his death.

Memorial Service. On Sunday night services were held i the Jewish synagogue, this city, in memory of Isaac, Adolph Cremieux, a famous French Jew. A eulogy was delivered by Rev. Mr. Bloch, after which Jacob Loeb gave a sketch of Cremieux's life. The usual prayer was then delivered, the whole congegation rising in response. Services of this kind were held in every Hebrew congregation in the United States on Sunday evening. This was the first time that services of this kind was held in this city.

GEN. JOHN F. REYNOLDS. Presentation of H1s Portrait to the Historical

As noticed yesterday in the INTELLIGEN-CER the meeting of the Pennsylvania Historical society in Philadelphia last evening was made the occasion of the presentation to the society by the executors of the late Admiral William Reynolds of the portrait of his brother, General John F. were filled with a distinguished company, Lancaster being represented by Charles A. Thos. E. Franklin, counsel for the estate. The throng of spectators was made up largely of the most prominent citizens lawyers, physicians, bankers, merchants, statesmen and scholars of Philadelphia. Three governors of Pennsylvania had seats near the president-Curtin, Hartranft and Hoyt. About fifty members of the military order of the Loyal Legion, including General Latta, General T. Kirby Smith and other well known military men were present in a body, wearing the the president's chair hung the portrait which Admiral Reynolds in his will, made while he was in Japan, bequeathed to the Historical society. It was painted by a Dane, Balling, who intended it for West Point, but that plan having fallen through, it was presented to Admiral Reynolds, who in turn directed it to be placed in such worthy custody. As the orator last evening remarked: "As a tribute of his regard for the Historical society, and as an addition to the other portraits of Pennsylvania worthies now in itshall, this gift has a special interest, and it is gratifying that by accepting it the Historical society sets the seal of its approval on the record of the lives of General and Admiral Reynolds, and thus enrolls their names with those of the gallant sons of this state."

A tattered flag which hung near the portrait was the remnant of the flag of the First army corps which General Reynolds commanded at the time of his death, and the sword which hung below the picture was presented to the gallant general by his comrades in arms.

Mr. John William Wallace, the president, stated the object of the assembly, and Mr. J. G. Rosengarten, on behalf of the executors of Admiral Reynolds, made the presentation. In so doing he gave a brief sketch of the two distinguished brothers whose public and private virtues were comemmorated by the occasion. They were born in Lancaster, the admiral in 1815 and the general in 1820. They were the sons of John Reynolds, well known as the editor and publisher of the Lancaster Journal, and a man of high character and great merit. He was born near Lancaster in 1787. His father, troubled with this dreadful disease that it was William Reynolds, was a Protestant Irishman, who came to this state in 1760.

was Catharine Ferrce Le Fevre, the granddaughter of Mary Ferree, a French Huguenot, who took refuge first in the result was that in a short time the lady could Rhine provinces, and then in Switzerland, and finally came here in 1608, receiving for herself and her companions, a large body of French Huguenots, a great tract of land lying in the Pequea valley-here her daughter married Isaac Le Fevre, who was also a French Huguenot, who had found a refuge in this country. Their son was the first white child born in the Pequea valley, and his daughter was the wife of William Reynolds. John Reynolds married Lydia Moore, the daughter of Samuel Moore, who was also a North of Ireland man, and who had served with distinction in the Pennsylvania line during | Kidney Diseases, Liver Complaint, Constipathe Revolutionary war. John Reynolds learned the art of printing in Philadelphia with Archibald Barham, became his partner, and after his death returned to Larcaster, where he spent his life in active public and private trusts. William Reynolds, the eldest son, was appointed a midshipman in 1831; was tive and Asthmatic Complaints, with Wilkes's expedition; returned in broken health from the exposure and fatigue incidental to that hard service; was put on the reserved list, and assigned to duty at the Sandwich Islands. There he regained his health, and was of great use in establishing a good understanding between the two countries. When the rebellion broke out he at once applied for active duty, was ordered to the command of the naval forces at Port Royal, and on the recommendation of Dupont and Dahlgren, and his own subordinates and juniors was restored to the active list, and was rapidly promoted to commodore and admiral, serving as chief of bureau and as acting secretary of navy, finally taking command of the United States naval forces in the east, and there he broke down again in health, and was forced to return home and go on the retired list, dying at Washington on the 5th of November, 1879. Mr. Rosengarten then gave an elaborate review of the life and services of General Raynolds from his birth at Lancaster in 1820, through his school life at Lititz, near Baltimore, in the Lancasterian schools and at West Point, his services in Mexico, in the Utah expedition and against the Indians in Oregon down to his part in the last war and his achievements and death at Gettysburg. To show his high character and patriotism, Major Rosengarten made large extracts from General Reynolds's correspondence, and fortified his high estimate of his services by numer. ous quotations in praise of Reynolds from many distinguished military men; concluding with a recital of other honors done his memory. His statue at Gettysburg and his portrait at West Point are the grateful tribute of his own corps, and a sword of honor voted him by his own division of Pennsylvania Reserves, was presented, after his death, to his brother, Admiral Reynolds, and is now left to his nephew, Lieutenant John Reynolds Landis, of the First cavalry. General Meade, on receiving a similar mark of honor, advance, the army lost its right arm, their friendship was never interrupted. Highly eulogistic resolutions of the Revnolds brothers were then passed and speeches were made by Col. Chapman Biddle, Gen. Hoffman, Govs. Hoyt and Curtin, the governors praising Gen. Reynolds's military career in glowing terms.

Intimidating Workmen at the Penn Mill. Yesterday Louis Reidenbach, an employee at the Penn iron works, organized little strike on his own hook, and refused to run the iron "buggy" unless his wages were increased. As he would not go to work, he was invited into the office, paid off and discharged. He went off, got drunk, came back to the iron works and swore that no other man should run his 'buggy," and anyone attempting to run it would be forthwith mashed. So violent did he become that some of the workmen were intimidated and the superintendent had to send for a policeman. Louis was arrested and locked up for a hearing before Alderman McConomy on Friday next at 2 o'clock p. m.

KEMBLE'S QUEER PLEA.

His Protest of Innocence Not Permitted go on the Record, but Filed as a "Statement"—Petroff Be-fore a Jury.

HARRISBURG, March 9 .- After cour met to-day, Judge Pearson, in answer to an inquiry from the district attorney, said that Kemble's plea should be stripped of everything except the formal plea of 'guilty"; that his protest would be allowed to go on file as a statement for the benefit of defendant, but it would have no bearing whatever so far as the plea was concerned, and should not be a part of the record.

Counsel for defense said they had cer tainly misunderstood the court when they presented this plea yesterday. They retired for consultation and were out for an hour before they came to a conclusion. They then came into court with a plea of guilty and protest in form as directed by the court. TABLEWARE Petroff's Case. The case of the commonwealth vs. Emile Petroff was then called for trial. After the jury had been impaneled the commonwealth asked that the court stand three of the jury aside. Judge Pearson said he could not do this in a court of quarter sessions; that it was only usual n courts of over and terminer.

F. B. Gowen and J. W. Simonton for the commonwealth took issue with the court on this point; affirming the right of the commonwealth to do so.

F. Carroll Brewster, for the defense, argued against the position of the comnonwealth on this question. The court finally decided in favor of the commonwealth. Twenty-two names were called before a jury was obtained, and after they were sworn the court adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

He is a Methodist, and then, as now, preached at times, and in his discourses often declaimed carnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try presented to the president and that he had promised to investigate them. The communication further set forth that this investigation had not taken place; that $50,000 had been paid by the company to the late President Thomson for his services in securing a lease of the Fort Wayne road; that two directors of the comeany had been paid $1,000 each per year for sixteen years, and that one of the officials of the company had furnished a house at the expense of the

This communication excited some comment, and Vice President Roberts justified the action of the late Mr. Thomson.

After adopting resolutions expressing confidence in the management of the company, the meeting adjourned.

THE ISTHMUS CANAL.

Mr. Evarts's View of the Project, Among the documents accompanying Mr. Hayes's message on the subject of the inter-oceanic canal is an elaborate report from Secretery Evarts, in which he sets forth its entire diplomatic history; the main point of which is that treaty with New Granada guarantees the independence of that republic and the neutrality of any line of communication that may be constructed between the two oceans; and that, as William H. Seward in a note to Minister Adams in July, 1861, said, this treaty was "made not for any special or peculiar interest or advantage of cannot be had from the cough mixtures now the United States, but for the benefit and in use. Sold by all druggists at 25 cents pe. advantage of all nations."

> Secretary Evarts in conclusion describes the character of the weighty responsibilities that devolve upon the United States by reason of the construction of an interoceanic canal through the territory of New Grenada, and remarks: "It may well be assumed that no contract or negotiations could ever be entered into between private projectors and the government of Columbia, except in contemplation of this position of the United States under the treaty, and of the necessity that both the private interests and the public engagements involved in reliance upon the power and faith of this government for their protection must be conformed to its rightful participation and control in any arrangements that may seriously affect the discharge of its stipulated responsibili-
