Fun on the Cars.

Two Amateur Fiddlers Astonished by Re-The Iowa City Republican tells the fol-lowing: "An amusing scene took place on the train from the West on which Remenyi was a passenger last evening, and was witnessed by the writer hereof. Not far west of Iowa City a great, green, awkward young fellow lumbered into the smoking car bearing in his arms an ancient and badly damaged violin case. He seated himself just in front of a weather-beaten individual fully as unique as himself, but evidently some forty years older. The ancient person surveyed the youth with lively curiosity and then asked what he had "thar." "A fiddle," replied the youth with the red nose and watery eyes. Forthwith the old man besought him to play a few tunes. The youth declined, however, on the theory that it was "agin the rules to fiddle on the keers." Just at this moment Conductor Ackley came through the car, and the old fellow appealed to him to know if the young man could not be permitted to do a little fiddling. There was a twinkle in Ackley's eye as he remembered that he had Remenyi in the rear car, and he at once replied with great cordiality, "Yes, sir; the young man can play all he wants With this warm encouragement the young man at once brought forth from the case a wheezy old violin with an American eagle painted in red on the back. He began to tune up and Conductor Ackley passed on through the train until he came to Remenyi in the palace car. He told the great musician that there was a remarkable violinist in the smoking car -in fact he had never heard such playing in his life—and advised Remenyi to go for-ward and hear hlm. Forthwith Remenyi and one or two of his party rushed forward to the smoking car, where they encountered a remarkable scene. The passengers had gathered around the young man with the fiddle, and shouts of laughter greeted the musician as he scraped through the first bars of the "Arkansaw Traveler," with variations.

The young man accepted this as a mark of encouragement and sawed away with renewed energy. Remenyi, who was an renewed energy. Remenyi, who was entirely unknown to the passengers, took a seat just across the aisle and joined heartily in the general laugh. When the young man had finished the "Arkansaw Traveler," the old man just behind him took the violin, saying, "I haint played any for facts years." I married man are for any fur forty year. I married me a wife and she wouldn't have it, but I reckon I kin scrape a catgut yet." A fresh sally of laughter broke forth as the old man "tuk the fiddle" and began scraping on "Jump Jim Crow.

It was an agonizing piece of metody, and kept the audience in a fever of laughter. When the old man finished Remenyi asked for the violin, and it was passed over to him. The train had just stopped at a GENTLEMEN'S WEAR small station, and the rumble of the ear wheels was stilled into quiet. Remenyi drew the bow, and the grins still on the PANORAMA of faces of the passengers began to melt away with marvelous rapidity. Immediately there fell upon their astonished ears the opening notes of a beautiful fantasia, whose sweet witchery would charm the dullest.

The wheezy old violin seemed to rejoice forth such music as it never did before and never will again. The gaping, astonished crowd listened until Remenyi stopped and then broke in with rapturous applause and besought him to continue. But no-he held up the bow in gleeful derision and exclaimed vehemently: "Can't play with that-only three hairs on it-no, no, no ! He handed the violin back to the youth. who thrust it into the case and left the car at once, vowing that he would never play another tune.

Hop Bitters, which are advertised in our columns, are a sure cure for ague, biliousness and kidney complaints. Those who use them say they cannot be too highly recommended. Those afflicted should give them a fair trial, and will become thereby enthusiastic in the praise of their curative qualities.—Portland Ad.
