Telling What She Knows About Convent

The announcement that Miss Edith O'Gorman, claiming to be an "Escaped Nun," by which designation she is commonly known to the public, would appear in this city last night, coupled with the further statement that ladies would be admitted to her lecture gratuitously, "but not to front seats," had the effect of crowding the lower portion of the opera house with an audience the greater portion of which belonged to the gentler sex. Miss O'Gorman has delivered her lecture, which is entitled "Life in a Convent," in this city before, and her narrative last evening did not vary materially from what she has previously told our people, and indeed the people of almost every large city in the country, concerning her alleged experience in convent life. Miss O'Gorman is an ordinarylooking woman of perhaps thirty-odd years with nothing very striking either in her day he is somewhat better, but is still in a personal appearance, mode of dress, manner of speaking, or other characteristics. She was quietly attired in a neatly-fitting tance. The buggy was badly broken. black dress, with little or no ornamentation or display, and with her hair combed carefully back from her forehead. She is a demi-brunette, about the medium height, and a trifle too stout for shapeliness.

According to Miss O'Gorman's narrative, which was delivered with great volubility, she scarcely pausing a moment from the time she began until she had finished, she entered the convent of St. Joseph's, at Jersey City, in January, 1863. At that time she was a young girl, an ardent Catholic, filled with all the pure inclinations and desires after holy living incident to the peried of youth in one who has and a bounteous set-out was provided for been piously trained and carefully nur- the guests. tured in the faith of her church. She entered the convent, she says, with the highest and holiest aspirations, and, in assuming the vows of chastity, holy poverty, etc., required of all candidates for admiswhich all her efforts and energies were to be consecrated to God and a snare; that the goodness and holi- fine bands of music, ness that she, in common with thousands of other pure-minded Catholic girls, had believed to exist within the four walls of the convent were wholly imaginary. To the minutest detail, the who hung himself in a woods near Lex-"Escaped Nun" then proceeded to give ington, was John Auer, and not John an account of life as she claims to have Hower, the latter man at present being WALL PAPER seen and experienced it within St. Joseph's alive and well. The atmosphere of this particular institution, and by implication of all similar institutions, Miss O'Gorman says, reeked with the most disgusting and loathsome impurity. If a sister should be so unfortunate as to fall in love with a priest she is terday under favorable auspices. obliged by her vows to confess it to him, and school has made excellent headway since the poor unhappy girl is then at his mercy, a he took charge of it and promises to becondition of affairs, Miss O'Gorman asserted, that some of the priests were not slow to take advantage of age. She devoted conposed what she designated as the shams, at Fulton opera house to-morrow afternoon hypocrisy, selfishness and impurity of the eraft. Many priests, she says, receive in a Secrets and Mysteries of the Confessional." week pay for more masses than they could say in a year, and while the decent honest that would be the end of it. Miss O'Gorman declared that during her residence at St. Joseph's she had incurred the vindictive cumity of the superior, Sister Mary Joseph, who in consequence subjected her to constant torture, humiliation and indignity, and Miss O'Gorman said that her constant prayer, morning, noon and night was that she might be relieved by death. Evidently Miss O'Garman has not forgot ten the alleged abuse heaped upon her by Sister Mary Joseph, as a considerable portion of her lecture was devoted to that personage, paying back old scores, as it were, and imputing to her the most unworthy character and immoral actions.

After relating the causes that led to her final escape and release from the miseries of convent life as she had portrayed them in the most vigorous English, with occasional slips in her syntax, and in a tone of voice that carried the animus of the speaker with it, Miss O'Gorman wound up in a pyrotechnic display of abuse of the whole system of the Catholic church, from its fountain head through all its ramifications and connections.

A glance over the audience that listened to the discourse thus hastily outlined revealed the entire absence of Catholic hearers. The lecture was simply a diatribe of abuse, and though an occasional "smart" saying would call out some applause the audience was rather an undemonstrative one. There exists no corroborative proof that Miss O'Gorman is what she claims to be, outside of her own declaration, and people who see and hear her are at perfect poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will apostle of revelation or a monumental fraud. You pays your money and you bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief takes your choice.

James Steckman Thrown from a Buggy and Seriously Hurt. Yesterday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock, James Steekman, horse dealers was driving a pair of young horses, hitched to a buggy, along West Walnut street, when they frightened at the noise made by the wagon of a rag peddler. The animals started to run and a boy, who was in the buggy, jumped out, thus escaping without being injured. Mr. Steckman held fast to the reins, which suddenly broke and the horses ran the buggy against the fence in the rear of Hon. Thomas E. Franklin's lot. Mr. Steckman was thrown out and was badly cut about the head. He was picked up and taken to a house near by, from which he was subsequently removed to his residence. No. 444 West Orange street. What Looks Very Much Like an Attempt to Blackmail a Catholic Priest. ed in the garden through the afternoon and in the evening all the available places were uncomfortably jammed at an early hour. Never before has so close a struggle by two men occurred, day after day, as that ne on for nearly bstween Hart and Dobler. Hart passen Blower Brown's great London score for the first time yesterday at 5 p. m. He was 110 yards ahead of B. B. Hart's score standing 377; Dobler's

By 9 o'clock the throng of spectators was by far greater than at any preceding time during the match. The constant tramping of thousands of uneasy feet, the unceasing murmur of many voices, and the continuous applause by the admirers or partisans of one or another of the rival pedestrians,

As the evening wore on, it became ap- ap7-std&stw* parent that the much-talked of "darkhorse" was beyond question, Pegran Maintaining his jogging trot, steadily and rapidly gained upon Hart, and still more swiftly upon Dobler, who was walking slowly and evidently in great pain. His joints are limber, his muscles springy, his eyes wide awake, and there is but one man on the track who looks as fresh as he-This is at the completion of his ninety-third hour of contest. The one who looked as fresh as Pegram was Hart. People who have watched his performance from day to day are filled with wonder at his extraordinary power of endurance. He struts along with a conscious pride of movement that is equalled by nothing in nature except a bantam cock, and his trainers affirm that not a chafe, a blister, or any other physical injury has thus far come to him, except his suffering from want of sleep.

Dobler went off to his tent at 9:10, and it was said by his trainers that it was very doubtful whether he would be allowed to go on again or not. O'Leary said it would be a shame to break down so good a man as he has proved himself to be, merely to save what will come from his making the 450 miles. Unfortunately, the poor fellow did not get better, but, on the contrary, his physical condition manifestly grew worse constantly. He limped very painfully on his left foot, and his face wore a look of pain and weariness that left nothing in it of the determined and hopeful expression it has borne before.

The midnight score was as follows: Hart, 405 miles; Dobler, 391; Pegram, 391; Howard, 275; Williams, 349; Krohne, 352, Allen, 366; Hanwaker, 313.
