COURT AND PRESS.

RIGHTS OF LAWYERS AND EDITORS.

THE NEWSPAPERS SPEAKING OUT.

The Sixth Installment of their Opinions.

[As stated before the wide notice given to Judge Patterson's disbarment of the editors of the INTELLIGENCER, and the voluminous comments thereon by the newspapers of the state, render it impossible for us to republish these journalistic opinions in full. The following extracts, however, will convey some idea of the extent and character of the comments of the case.—EDS. INTELLIGENCER.]

Concerns Lawyers More than Editors.

Pittsburgh Post, Dem.

The question concerns lawyers more than it does editors; but for all that, the action seems arbitrary and harsh, and will hardly stand final review in the higher court.

Judge, Jury and Executioner.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.

It is a gross attempt to interfere with the freedom of the press, and any newspaper which supports the judge in his arbitrary and spiteful action deserves whatever in course of time may come to itself from the establishment of such a precedent. If the INTELLIGENCER slandered Judge Patterson he had his right of action, like any other citizen, but to thus attempt to act as judge, jury and executioner, even in a case in which he himself practically a party is disgraceful.

In the Time to Come.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.

When the supreme court shall have reviewed the judicial outrage perpetrated by Judge Patterson the respondents can do no less than arraign Judge Patterson for misbehavior in office, unless he shall take the initiative by an action for libel against some of the many prominent editors who have stamped him with infamy.

Judges and Journalists.

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, Rep.

It won't do to be too hard on Judge Patterson, of Lancaster, for his action on Saturday in disbaring a couple of lawyers, who also happen to be newspaper editors, for certain criticisms on his judicial action in a political case, for just so long as the people of Pennsylvania persist in maintaining an elective judiciary—the judges being elected not to sit for life or good behavior, but for ten-year terms—just so long must they expect their judges to be professional politicians, and to conduct themselves in political cases after the fashion of the average professional politician. There is only one way to make the bench even moderately independent in the matter of political partisanship, and that is to give the judges life terms. It would be better to have an appointed rather than an elective judiciary; but this, after all, is a secondary matter—the main thing is that when a citizen learned in the law is once made a judge he shall be in a position to do his duty fearlessly and honestly without regard to possible consequences to himself; and such a position as this he can only be put in by making him irremovable except for cause under impeachment proceedings. Just so long as the judges are obliged to look forward to a future election day for a continuance in office, they will be under a constant temptation to violate justice and judicial propriety in certain classes of cases. It is very true—as certain recent very bitter experiences have demonstrated—that judges who are appointed, and for life terms, are prone to extreme partisanship; but obviously, the dangers of a partisan bench is very much under the one condition that they are under the other.

Judge Patterson is not by any manner of means the only judge who has held the bench for a long time.

It is not by any manner of means the only judge who has held the bench for a long time. It is not by any manner of means the only judge who has held the bench for a long time. It is not by any manner of means the only judge who has held the bench for a long time.

By a Large Majority.

Lancaster Correspondence Columbia Herald.

The all-shocking topic of conversation for the last few days has been the action of Judge Patterson in disbaring Messrs. Steinman & Hensel. By virtue of our position we are more or less thrown in contact with all classes and shades of society and in such associations we have heard expressed on all sides nothing but universal contempt for the judgment of this "second Daniel." The passing of sentence, almost upon the heels of the adjournment of the supreme court, is also severely commented upon inasmuch as the gentlemen disbarred will of necessity be compelled to rest, under what this "righteous judge" would have this community believe is a disgrace, until that body again convenes in May. Otherwise, we are assured by lawyers high in authority, that the rigorous "one more opinion" would have not met the fate which all but the "best workers" predicted for it. You and your readers have no doubt been so surfeited with "Michael Snyder," "Aftermath," "Crow Eating" and disbarment that we will forbear entering into the details of this dirty work and its finale. With these few comments on what we have heard from the disinterested, as noted above, we drop the curtain and, with the rest will anxiously await the last act in May next, which will ring up on the reinstatement of the lawyer-editors and another victory for the freedom of the press.

Scarcely Possible.

Altoona Tribune, Rep.

The press very generally condemn the action of Judge Patterson, of the Lancaster common pleas court, in disbaring the editors of the Lancaster INTELLIGENCER for certain editorial criticisms of a suit tried in his court. The matter will be carried to the supreme court, and it is scarcely possible that that tribunal will sustain the arbitrary act of Judge Patterson.

Remarkable Unanimity.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.

There is a wonderful unanimity on the part of the newspapers of all shades of political opinion in condemning the action of Judge Patterson of Lancaster, in disbarring the editors of the INTELLIGENCER.

One of that Kind.

Wilkesbarre Record of the Times, Rep.

Patterson appears to be one of that kind of judges whose actions will sometimes fail to bear the test of criticism, and he thereupon "rights" himself in such questionable ways as above indicated.

The Paper Still Running.

Easton Argus, Dem.

Notwithstanding Judge Patterson has disbarred the editors of the Lancaster INTELLIGENCER from practicing in his court these perverse chaps continue to issue their paper. The judge meant to squelch them, but didn't.

hands of an unjust judge, dangerous power of punishment for "contempt." This power while it seems needful in order to give the courts sufficient strength to command respect, is none the less capable of abuse, but lawyers who are most nearly connected with it, and whose custom it too often is to take an exaggerated view of the importance of their profession in comparison with the rights and privileges of common people, should be the most careful to avoid the penalties of judicial condemnation, and the last to complain if they incur them. As to the merits of the question at issue, it is difficult to judge at this distance; whether the article which Messrs. Steinman and Hensel published was justly construed as a contempt, or not, we are unable to say. But those gentlemen knew, of course, when they wrote it, that as attorneys in his court, his control over them was practically absolute, in regard to what he might choose to consider a "contempt." They therefore walked into the trap with their eyes open.

Press, Lawyers and Courts.

Philadelphia Evening News, Rep.

The action of Judge Patterson, striking the names of two attorneys from the roll for criticisms published in the paper of which they were editors, while involving him in public contempt, will do them no ultimate harm. It was on his part arbitrary, and, we think, an illegal use of power. As such it will, of course, be remedied. But the more of more immediate interest to lawyers than to the press. The indignity put upon these gentlemen was in their capacity as lawyers, but because of their doings as editors. It does not appear that they transgressed either their rights or duties as editors in criticizing certain doings of the court after its decisions in a certain case had been rendered. Among reputable journals the rule is to abstain from criticism pending the trial of a case, thus leaving it to be decided on its merits under the evidence; but once it is decided all that pertains to it is regarded as legitimately open to criticism. The editors of the Lancaster INTELLIGENCER observed this rule and yet were punished for what they said. But they were punished as lawyers, and the outrage is more decidedly against that profession than that of the press. It will not look well if the Lancaster press does not make common cause with its persecuted members, and unite to teach Judge Patterson a lesson.

While the press as such is not assailed, it is well known that the spirit of our laws is against the freedom of the press.

When the new constitution was under discussion in the constitutional convention, the effort was made to modify the severity of the libel laws. It was only partially successful. And while the reputable press appreciates the propriety of laws that will hold in check such papers as might be disposed to be malicious and scandalous, yet it is undeniable that our libel laws are severe. But, as a rule, they have been judiciously administered. Where malice is not shown, and the criticisms of a paper were evidently in the interest of public morality, it has been found exceedingly difficult to secure conviction for alleged libel. Thus as a rule the press has had the blow against them as lawyers. No doubt he demeaned himself; but if the bar of Lancaster county have not the sense of self-respect to act in behalf of their brethren, we do not see that the press is so terribly outraged.

A Day That Is Passed.

Lehigh Valley Democrat and Sentinel, Dem.

The day has passed when either the bench or the clergy are exempt from the criticism of the press. When the one abuses his trust to tyrannize, or the other his highest calling to make political merchandise of his occasion, neither can hope to escape criticism, or a measure of odium their acts entail. So long as we are charged with the responsibility of editing a newspaper we shall call things by their right names, even though we may alienate a friend. The responsibility of our calling is as great as theirs, and we will not shrink from it. We have but the judgment of a gracious providence has vouchsafed us, and that cannot be silenced by any kind of clamor. As we see our duty we shall discharge it, and leave consequences to take care of themselves.
