QUAKER CITY DEMOCRATS.

THE VAUX MEN TO THE FORE.

Protesting That They Represent a Majority of the Democratic Voters and Demanding the Attended Usurpation of the State Committee—What the Presidents Teach and Right Demands—The Disturbing Element in Pennsylvania Politics.

VISIONS OF THE NIGHT.

The Curious Experience of a North Country English Family—An Apparition or a Nightmare?—A Smart Drug Clerk.

What the "Irregulars" Say for Themselves.

Respecting the quarrels of the contending Democrats in Philadelphia the INTELLIGENCER has often expressed its opinion and it has seen no reason to change it. It makes no discrimination between the factions; it blames them both for their disorganization of the party; it recognizes good Democrats in both wings—and bad ones; it chides both for allowing a few "impracticals" on one side and a few "roosters" on the other to keep the organization divided, and it calls on the better men of the whole party to give each a fair hearing and to try and reconcile their differences. It is willing that each shall have a chance to present its side, and in that spirit, and that spirit only, publishes the following "protest" of the county committee, popularly known as the "Vaux ring," and is ready to do much for the other side :

To Hon. George W. Miller, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee:

The committee of organization of Philadelphia, representing the Democratic committee of Philadelphia, presents the delegates regularly elected under the rules of the committee to represent the Democratic county committee of Philadelphia, polled 44,896 votes, and the Democratic county committee having at a subsequent election, polled 22,875 votes for a distinctive ticket, it will be seen that this organization represents a clear majority of the party.

II. That the Democratic county committee represents more than a majority of the Democratic voters of the city and county of Philadelphia.

At the election on the 17th day of February, for police magistrates, the candidates nominated by this organization received the average of 22,875 votes.

These were straight Democratic votes and in no instance was this number swelled by bargains or trades with the managers of the Republican machine. They are votes which never fail, and may be relied upon to sustain any honest and respectable Democratic ticket.

At the election for sheriff in November, 1879, the ticket supported by all the Democratic organizations in Philadelphia, polled 44,896 votes, and the Democratic county committee, having at a subsequent election, polled 22,875 votes for a distinctive ticket, it will be seen that this organization represents a clear majority of the party.

III. There is in the city and county of Philadelphia, an organization styling itself the Democratic city committee.

At the late election for police magistrates, the city committee named a ticket of fifteen, which was subsequently reduced to eight, and finally the strength of the organization was concentrated upon three, and the rest were practically abandoned. For these three there was polled an average of 32,853 votes against 23,875 for the full county committee ticket. That vote of 32,853 was largely obtained by combinations with the common enemy which were not merely irregular, but politically dishonest and treacherous.

IV. At the meeting of your honorable committee, held at Pittsburgh on the 18th of March last, a resolution was passed directing the chairman to place on the roll of the convention the delegates certified by the so-called Democratic city committee as the delegates from the city and county of Philadelphia. Against this resolution the undersigned do solemnly protest, and for the following reasons :

1. Because the delegates certified by the city committee do not represent a majority of the Democratic voters of Philadelphia.

2. Because the undersigned delegates certified by the county committee do represent a majority of the voters of Philadelphia.

3. Because the state committee has no such power as that which is assumed to exercise in the usage of the resolution.

It is sufficient, by no means, and indeed by no precedent, that the committee is the sole judge of the election and qualification of its own members, and this rule is not only founded in right reason, but consecrated by immemorial usage. It is essential to the preservation of the independence and representative character of the body. A convention whose membership had been subjected to arbitrary revision by a committee appointed the year previous, would represent a majority of that committee, and not a majority of the people. The Pittsburgh resolution is therefore without authority, and extremely dangerous and revolutionary in tendency. It is opposed to all the rules and traditions of the party, and if regarded by you or submitted to by the convention, would necessarily destroy the independence of the representative body, and lead to consequences the most fatal.

4. Because the chairman is not the organ of the committee and is not subject to its direction. The functions of the chairman and of the committee are wholly separate and distinct. He is not appointed by it, nor removable by it, nor responsible to it. He is the organ of the party and accountable only to the convention. The committee did not possess the power in question, but if it had possessed it, it could not have delegated the exercise of it to the chairman anymore than one department of government could delegate its functions to another, and still less could it confer upon him a power which it had not itself.

5. Because the chairman himself has no right to make up a roll for the convention in advance of the assembling of the delegates, and, therefore, the Pittsburgh resolution, although taken as merely advisory, and not directory, is entitled to no consideration or respect. The chairman's duty in the organization of the convention is plain and clear and is defined by a rule and a practice running together through whole generations of the Pennsylvania Democracy. He simply calls the list of districts, hears the responses of delegates claiming to represent them, and enters the names unchallenged, together with the notices of contests given rise to, and
