THE GOETHEANS.
LAST NIGHT'S ANNIVERSARY.

LEARNING AND ORATORY, BEAUTY AND FLOWERS.

Franklin and Marshall's Senior Literary Society at Fulton Opera House.

The Goethean literary society of Franklin and Marshall college last evening celebrated its forty fifth anniversary at Fulton opera house, and, as is customary on these occasions, a large and brilliant audience was present. The Goetheans have staunch partisans among the young ladies of Lancaster who never fail to grace with their presence these annually recurring events, and always bring with them an abundance of floral tributes, rich are rare, wherewith to reward the efforts of the young orators in whose calendar this anniversary occasion is regarded as worthy of being marked with a red letter. Handsome bouquets and other emblems noticeable in every quarter of the hall gave added beauty to the scene and made the atmosphere refulgent of sweetest perfume. The stage decoration also was rich and elegant. A heavy festoon of evergreen was hung across the front part of the stage, and at either wing stood large vases filled with geraniums and other living plants and flowers. In the centre of the stage was a superb bed of living and cut flowers, the base of which was fringed with "snowball" and rising majestic from the centre of which were half a dozen of calla lilies. The motto of the society, "Genetho Phos"—Let There be Light—in Greek characters, glowed in the background and completed a very attractive decoration.

Shortly before eight o'clock amid a salvo of applause and to the strains of an overture by Keffler's orchestra, the speakers of the evening, preceded by the committee of arrangements and the faculty of the college, marched down the centre aisle and seated themselves upon the stage.
Mr. Geo. W. Gerhard occupied the presidential chair, and announced the order of exercises in dignified manner. During the evening he made the proud recipient of a number of choice floral tributes.

An impressive prayer was offered by Rev. C. Elvin Houpf, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, after which the salutatory address was delivered by Mr. Frank S. Murphy, of Womelsdorf, Pa., whose subject was "Ireland." His words of greeting were marked by modesty and good sense, disclaiming any purpose of shrinking from honest criticism, and asking only just judgment on the efforts of the participants in the exercises of the evening. Old and young were accorded a hearty welcome in well chosen language, and then the orator proceeded to the discussion of his theme. After referring to the beauty of patriotism and love of country, he launched into an impassioned eulogy of the sweet, lovely, unfortunate island of Erin, the home of the genius of Lalla Rookh, the land of the "Irish Demosthenes" Burke; affording also a brief glimpse of the early history of the Emerald Isle. The present Ireland and the Ireland of the past afford a sad and pathetic contrast. Shakespeare's words, "Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them," are in a measure true of the Irish people, who were born great, achieved greatness, but were robbed of their fruits by a people who did not have the honor to acknowledge that greatness, nor the civilization to make use of it. Irish virtue, Irish patriotism, Irish genius, Irish oratory, Irish wit, Irish humanity, all came in for a portion of the speaker's attention. The political is the saddest side of Irish history, but the orator would leave to the judgment of a fair people whether the present state of suffering and degradation may be charged to the church, to the state, or to the Irish people. The speaker's closing words portrayed the necessity of full and complete emancipation to restore Ireland to her old-time grandeur, and terminated with a pertinent quotation from the song of "The Irish Exile." The oration was marked by the fervid eloquence characteristic of the land of which he spoke in terms of such patriotic laudation, and the young Irishman bowed his acknowledgment of long-continued applause and a liberal contribution of fair flowers.

Keffler's orchestra played a medley of Irish airs.

Oration—"National Reverence"—David B. Schneider, Downmansville, Pa. The relation of man to the nation in the early ages of the world's history constituted a blind slavery that degraded humanity to the lowest stage of fanatical devotion. The Reformation was the signal for the breakup of this abject slavery and sounded the watchword of emancipation of thought to the people. Gradually the tyranny of despotism has been made to give way before the march of freedom, and the boast of the monarch, "I am the state," has been succeeded by the aphorism, "The people rule." The reaction has however, reached a point of positive irreverence, which is exemplified in the corruption that has come to exist in all departments of the government, affecting the governor in executive authority, the lawmaker in the hall of legislation and the judge on the bench itself. There must be a restoration of the spirit of reverence to maintain the pristine glory of the nation.
Religion is the cradle of true national reverence, and the speaker looked for the coming of that good time when statesmen and rulers, not less than the people shall make duty to the nation second only to duty to God. Mr. Schneider spoke in a full and true voice, and his thoughts were concise and forcibly stated. Many fine bouquets were laid at his feet.

The orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner" and a number of other appropriate national airs.

Oration—"Rational Self Control"—Mr.
A. G. Weber, Bethel, Pa. Insubordination to law is one of the distinguishing characteristics of fallen man, and the tendency of human sensibilities is to yield to the suggestions of the physical appetite. The power of self control is not the growth of a day. The speaker boldly and fearlessly expressed his condemnation of many of prevailing methods of education and said that true education finds its highest sense in imparting to the mind the self governing power. Education should mean more than the mere loading of the memory with dates and facts; it should mean the elevation of man intellectually to his proper station. It is a truth applicable to all great intellects that they are self-controlled. Severe self-restraint is indisputably stamped upon the realm of human knowledge where consecutive thought is necessary. Deprive him of self-control and man will rapidly retrograde to the state of barbarism from which the rational exercise of his faculties of intellect has elevated him. The principle of rational self-control is nothing else than the principle of the Christian religion. The full stature of a perfect man is only reached through the exercise of power. This was an able paper, and the speaker's vigorous declamation secured its close attention. Among many handsome floral rewards of which he was the recipient, a large horse-shoe and elegant basket were notable.

Music—"Sweetest Flowers"— by Keffler's orchestra.

Eulogy—"Mrs. Hemans"—Mr. Frank S.
Elliot, York, Pa. The speaker opened with a poetic description of the temple of fame, the mausoleum of man's greatness, in distinction from woman's. For to him justice and a due meed of honor is ever accorded, to woman never. To him is erected the sculptured memorial of enduring remembrance, to woman the simple tablet of forgetfulness. In a succinct sketch the career of the gifted poet whose name formed the title of this paper was portrayed in terms of earnest eulogy. Her poetry is essentially that of woman, in beauty of imagery and sublimity of religious thought reaching the heart. Her flights of fancy, though radiant, are seldom clear, but are surrounded by a halo that is like the mist of the morning. The sweet strains of many of her poems will never die. Her name may not be inscribed in the temple of worldly fame, but is given in enduring characters in the temple of God.
The speaker closed by a fervent eulogy on the character of woman as the priestess of virtue, purity, charity and religion. The applause that greeted the speaker as he retired, together with the many elegant floral tokens that he received, were ample testimony of the favorable impression created by his admirable composition.

Music—"Redowa"—Keffler's orchestra.

Oration—"Ethics of Politics"—Mr. A.
B. Rieser, West Leosport, Pa. Government is the prime lever of civil society. The first efforts of social man are necessarily political. The highest ideal of politics is the actualization of the good. Party politics is right and proper, and, in fact, necessary to popular governments so long as it keeps the good of the state as its prime object, but the moment it degenerates into the effort to secure selfish, personal or partisan ends, its true mission is perverted. The creation of the electoral commission when a crisis threatened this country was the outgrowth of the principle of honor among the best men of the country, however much that principle may have been betrayed by the commission or one member of that tribunal. In vigorous English, Mr. Rieser discussed the politics of to-day and deplored the corruption that has crept into the administration of the government, and which has not spared the ermine of the judiciary itself. He decried the spirit of sectionalism, and rebuked the insincerity of the demand for "strong government," which unscrupulous politicians are at the present time employing as a cloak to cover their designs. Politics in the truest sense of the term must have the weal of the whole people as its only object; partisan and personal feeling must be subordinated to the general good. An aggressive argument in favor of purity in administrative affairs and the maintenance of American institutions. Prolonged applause and many handsome bouquets and other emblems were presented to the speaker.

Music—"Les Lancers"—by the orchestra.

Poem—"Don Hincjosa"—Mr. J. Harrison Geisinger, Huntingdon, Pa. Mr.
Geisinger has on former occasion given public exhibition of his poetical ability, and his muse never sang more sweetly than in the recital of the romantic Castilian legend that formed the theme of these verses. In a stream of limpid purity the tale of ancient story ran, and the young poet gave to his song a graceful rendition that won it close attention and a burst of prolonged applause as he retired. Many magnificent floral emblems were presented to him, and among the numerous testimonials was a souvenir sent from Germany by Mr. Geo.
M. Zacharias, which is interesting for its historic associations. It is a crown of ivy and arbor-vite. On a tablet of ivy is a bust of Goethe, in bas-relief. The ivy he gathered from the historic castle, the Dorn-burg, in which Goethe lived (and a description of which by Mr. Zacharias recently appeared in the columns of the INTELLI-GENCER), and the arbor-vite from a tree overhanging the mausoleum in which Goethe and Schiller lie buried.

Selections from "Fatinizza" by the orchestra.

Goethean Oration—"American Antiquities."
—H. Clay Eschbach, Limestoneville, Pa. Year after year has the antiquary been engaged in endeavoring to unveil the buried past of Egypt, of Rome and of Greece; but the antiquities of America, affording an inexhaustible field of investigation, have been comparatively neglected. The orator directed the attention of the audience to the ancient history of Central America and Yucatan, where once dwelt a powerful, polished and a peculiar race of men, and in fancy peopled the desolated ruins that may there be seen, with the dusky forms of a pre-historic people, of whose lives and habits and of even the period at which they lived, the great multitude of well informed minds are in densest ignorance. The address was graced by poetic diction and delivered in a manner that bespoke the orator's earnest sympathy with the theme he presented in so attractive a garb for his hearers' consideration. He was abundantly rewarded with handsome bouquets and other tributes of varied design, and prolonged applause told of his popularity with the "boys" who comprised the committee that usually takes upon itself the discharge of this important feature of the exercises and performs it so satisfactorily.

Keffler's orchestra played a march, Rev.
Dr. Thomas G. Apple, president of the college, pronounced the benediction, and the large and delighted assemblage was dismissed to the tune of a rattling galop by the orchestra.

The entire affair was a most gratifying success. The speakers handled their subjects in a style that demonstrated careful preparation on their part, the audience was up to the usual standard in quality and numbers, the flowers were many and elegant, Keffler's music cheerful and ear-taking, the ushers good-looking and attentive, and all the details of arrangement complete, reflecting credit upon the committee of arrangements in charge which consisted of Messrs. Albert D. Elliot, chairman; H. G. Appenzeller, W. L. Hoffmann, Lewis Robb, D. A. Souders, W. G. Maybury and Edward Zahm.

Statistics prove that twenty-five per cent. of the deaths in our larger cities are caused by consumption, and when we reflect that this terrible disease in its worst stage will yield to a bottle of Locher's Renowned Cough Syrup, shall we condemn the sufferers for their negligence, or pity them for their ignorance? No Joseph Billings says if I was called upon to mourn over a dead mule I should stand in front of him and do not weeping. That is all very well, but if a live mule was called upon to plant his foot suddenly against your bosom there is nothing like a quick application of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. For sale by
