I would wait till the shadows are falling, Till I see the sun sink in the west. Ere I harken Death's trumpet me calling-Ere forever I lay me to rest. Who would die when the sun is still shining

In the noontide of life, warm and bright? Who would miss all his grandeur declining, For a tear of the shadows of night? I would see all the clouds of the even Shine resplendent with silver and gold, As if God on them smiled from His heaven, With a smile that could never grow cold. I would live all of life from its breaking, Its meridian, widening and high And at sunset would have my leave-taking, In the evening of life let me die.

I would live for the knowledge of living, For the lessons of life I can learn, For the pleasure of longer receiving The sweet incense from wisdom's great u I would live for the duties of fiving,

For the work that my hand may find, For the good that my heart may be giving, For some gift I may leave to my kind. As the apple till ripened is bitter. As the berry is worthless when green,

So our souls for a heaven were fitter. Were they ripened below it, I ween. So, I'd live, that the Master may gather, To his store-house transcendent "on high," All my fruitage well ripened. Oh Father, In the evening of life let me die!

As the life "over there" is immortal, As the longest life here's but a span Ere I knock at Eternity's portal, I would see all of Time that I can. And when Time is behind, and I enter

The Story of Tilden's Love. Leavenworth Times

The story of Tilden's love is the saddest page in all the long history of his eventful life. Let him tell the people how in the first bloom of early manhood he was betrothed to a beautiful lady of one of the old families of New York; how her parents decreed that on account of her youth she should spend two years in Europe before her marriage; how they pledged eternal fidelity to each other and registered their vows at parting that no matter how many years might intervene each heart should beat sacredly for the other till a kindlier fate should reunite them; how the loved one sailed away in the famous but ill-fated steamship "President," from which no tidings have ever yet been brought back; how annually, on that day that the farewells were spoken, he repairs to the seashore, and listening to the sad murmur of the waves renews his vows, and how, through all the temptations that have come with a long life of influence, wealth and power, the pledge of his youth has been faithfully kept and his heart remains sacredly true to his first love while the years glide by.

used as a medicine of great potency in the cure of some of the destructive diseases which sweep away their annual thousands of victims With a purely philanthropic motive we pre-sent to the favorable notice of invalids—espe-cially those afflicted with that miserable disease Dyspepsia, a specific remedy, which is nothing more or less than Brandy.

The aged, with feeble appetite and more or less debility, will find this simple medicine, when used properly, A Sovereign Remedy or all their ills and aches. Be it, however strictly understood that we prescribe and use but one article, and that is REIGART'S OLD BRANDY,

Sold by our enterprising young friend, H. E SLAYMAKER. This Brandy has stood the test for years, and has never failed, as far as our experience extends, and we therefore as our experience extends, and we incretore give it the preference over ail other Brandies, no matter with how many jaw-breaking French titles they are branded. One-fourth of the money that is yearly thrown away on various impotent dyspepsla specifics would suffice to buy all the Brandy to cure any such case or es. In proof of the curative powers of

Reigart's Old Brandy, In cases of Dyspepsia, we can summon num

He is a Methodist, and then, as now, preached at times, and in his discourses often declaimed earnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try

Reigart's Old Brandy,

In his case, he looked up with astonishment, but after hearing of its wonderful effects in the cases of some of his near acquaintances, he at last consented to follow our advice. He used the Brandy faithfully and steadily; the first bottle giving him an appetite, and before the second was taken he was a sound man, with a stomach capable of digesting anything which he chose to cat. He still keeps it and uses a lit-tle occasionally; and since he has this medi-cine he has been of very little pecuniary bene-fit to the doctor.—A Practising Physician.
