Gen. Hancock's Only Son.
"E. H." in Cincinnati Commercial.

"All's well that ends well."
Into our boarding-house in Louisville there came one day, about seven or eight years ago a young married couple, the husband blonde, merry and frank; the wife, slender, sweet and sensible; devoted to each other, yet with none of the sickening sentimentality of some very young partners. The boy-husband kept everybody, from the waiter to the care-buried maid, laughing, in a state of laughter, that varied from a smile to an out-and-out roar, all the time he was in the house. He remained there nearly a year. No more sighing, soggy irritable food or feeders. The breakfast table called in exercise a new set of facial muscles, from the time the smiling, smoking jacket and put his guitar in the corner of his room. Always the funniest things, said in the most deprecating way; the brightest retorts flashed out without a change of countenance; none of that bitter, sarcastic wit that scorches while it glitters, but a genial, jovial wit, that brightens and lights up life, gurgles with laughter, and sometimes even overflows with tears. This favorite of our house was Russell Hancock, only son of General Hancock, and a kindlier heart never beat in any bosom.

He had not the commanding stature of his father, nor the beauty of his lovely mother. He may have since developed into a handsome man, but then he was a beardless, round-faced boy, with big light blue eyes, a shaved blonde head and a laughing, but a genial, jovial wit, that brightens and lights up life, gurgles with laughter, and sometimes even overflows with tears. tone of the convention, and of the character of other candidates named?
Governor S.—It is clear that there was an honest purpose to secure the success of the Democratic party. The fact that many names were brought forward was a proof of a disposition to look carefully over the whole ground. Many strong names were presented of men who would have made successful candidates. In disposing of the matter, no one was treated with disrespect, no one defeated in a way that injured his standing, and no party of men triumphed over all others. All their proceedings were in marked contrast with the action of the convention held in Chicago.

R.—What do you think of Mr. English's nomination?
Governor S.—Mr. English is a prominent Democrat of Indiana who has experience in Congress. It was proper to select a candidate for vice president from a Democratic Western state. I feel confident that the ticket will be successful in New York and in the Union.

R.—What part will you be able to take in the canvass?
Governor S.—My health has been so broken during the past three or four years that I have not been able to take an active part as I otherwise should have done, but I shall do all I can with this drawback to uphold the political principles which I believe and to support the party to which I am under so many obligations.

Do not hit a man when he is down. That is right, but if he went down hard a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will put the gentleman under obligations to you for a life time. Beats everything for bruises. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 127 and 129 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa. 29

Orpha M. Hodge, of Battle Creek, Mich., writes May 16, 1878: "I used a teakettle boiling hot water on my hand, inflicting a very severe burn. I applied Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, and take great pleasure in announcing to you that the effect was to allay pain and prevent blistering. I was cured in a few days. We prize it very highly as a family medicine." For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 127 and 129 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa. 29
