Small Fruits.

Germantown Telegraph With the exception of one or two strawberries and grapes, there is quite a diver-sity of opinion as to the varieties generally to cultivate with growers coming from different sections of country, though not distantly separated. They will argue with great earnestness and confidence for their specialties, and with the facts upon their side so far as this or that variety concerns their particular neighborhood; and they are convinced to the contrary only after becoming familiar with the worthlessness of these selfsame varieties at other points where the soil and atmospheric influences are different. Even here in Germantown while in some gardens one strawberry or grape or raspberry will give the highest satisfaction, in another, but a few hundred yards off, it is next to a failure.

It was particularly so with the Delaware grape, which is the best grape, when it can be grown, ever raised in the open air. From its first introduction we condemned it on account of its small size, its tardiness of growth, its meagre crops-and on this account for the extortionate price demanded for it. We were among its first producers, and after waiting for years to get some fruit, we found the berries no larger than a big pea, also that it was a sparse bearer and rather smaller than upon other premises. Taking our cue from this experience, we disapproved of the variety, and had a whole fortress of hot-shot poured in upon us from the West, where the vine did much better and where the sales went on steadily. But where is it now? What has eastern Pensylvania to show for its tifty thousand dollars spent upon it? And how stands the Concord grape, which on its introduction was so roundly condemned by the Delaware champions? Why, it is the grape of the million, as we said from the beginning that it would be, and we think that it will continue to be so for another generation to come.

Cultivation of Tobacco in Cuba.

The tobacco is planted from the seed The soil being pulverized and enriched with manure, the seed is sown broadcast, and the plant having grown to a height of eight inches, it is set out in rows about two feet apart, when it has much the appearance of corn planted in this country. In Cuba great care has to be exercised in guarding the seedlings from the tobacco worm. This is the only insect enemy the plant has, for it is so astringent and bitter that nothing else will touch it. but so destructive is the worm that if not looked after closely it will in a single night destroy an entire plantation. As the worm conceals itself during the day it is customary for the planters' hands to go forth by night with lanterns to destroy the pest. The tobacco having grown until the leaves are fully developed, the first cutting of the leaves takes place; these first cut leaves are the largest and finest. The plant is afterwards allowed to grow until there is a second supply of smaller leaves, which are also cut. The leaves as they are cut are carried to the tobacco houses on the plantations, where they are exposed to dry by the action of the air, which process occupies about six weeks. They are then piled in layers, each layer being sprinkled with a liquid called "betun," which is a strong lye made by soaking tobacco stalks in water. The heap of tobacco, or "pilon," as it is called, is covered with banana leaves and allowed to ferment for a couple of weeks. This curing process being completed, the tobacco is selected and graded according to the size of the leaf, the largest leaves and those finest in color and quality being used for the wrapstrong lye made by soaking tobacco color and quality being used for the wrappers and the smaller for filling cigars.

Brandy as a Medicine. A DRUGGING SUPERSEDED.

Violets at 5c per dozen. Our Long Ostrich Plumes we have marked The following article was voluntarily sent to Mr. II. E. It is commended to the attention of those af-flicted with Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

BRANDY AS A MEDICINE. This now much abused Alcoholic Stimulant was never intended as a beverage, but to be used as a medicine of great potency in the cure of some of the destructive diseases which sweep away their annual thousands of victims.
With a purely philanthropic motive we present to the favorable notice of invalids—especially those afflicted with that miserable disease Dyspepsia, a specific remedy, which is nothing more or less than Brandy.

The aged, with feeble appetite and more or less debility, will find this simple medicine, when used properly, A Sovereign Remedy or all their ills and aches. Be it, however strictly understood that we prescribe and use but one article, and that is REIGART'S OLD BRANDY, Sold by our enterprising young friend, II. E. SLAYMAKER, This Brandy has stood the test for years, and has never failed, as far as our experience extends, and we therefore give it the preference over all other Brandies, no matter with how many jaw-breaking French titles they are branded. One-fourth of the money that is yearly thrown away on various impotent dyspepsia specifics would suffice to buy all the Brandy to cure any such case or cases. In proof of the curative powers of Reigart's Old Brandy,
