

The Lancaster Intelligencer.

Volume XVI—No. 279.

LANCASTER, PA., MONDAY, JULY 26, 1880

Price Two Cents.

Spring Opening

24 CENTRE SQUARE.

We have for sale for the coming seasons an immense stock of

Ready-Made Clothing,

of our own manufacture, which comprises the latest and most

STYLISH DESIGNS.

Come and see our

NEW GOODS

MERCHANT TAILORING,

which is larger and composed of the best styles to be found in the city.

D. B. Hostetter & Son,

24 CENTRE SQUARE.

LANCASTER, PA.

SPRING OPENING

H. GERHART'S

Tailoring Establishment,

MONDAY, APRIL 5.

Having just returned from the New York Fashion Market, I am now prepared to exhibit one of the best selected stocks of

WOOLENS

FOR THE

Spring and Winter Trade,

ever brought to this city. None but the very best

ENGLISH, FRENCH

AND

AMERICAN FABRICS,

all the leading styles. Prices as low as the cost, and all goods warranted as represented.

H. GERHART'S,

No. 51 North Queen Street.

SMALING,

THE ARTIST TAILOR.

Closing out our stock of Light Weights at cost to make room for

Fall and Winter Stock.

A Large Line of

English Novelties.

TROPICAL SUITINGS,

SERGES AND REPS,

HANNOCKBURNS AND CELTICS,

GAMBROOY, FRAMATA,

AND BATISTE SUITINGS,

SKERSUCKERS, VALENCIA, PAROLE

AND MOHAR COATINGS.

A Splendid Assortment of Wilford's Padded

Trunks in Plain and Fancy Styles. A Full Line of ## Marseilles and Duck Vestings.

All the latest novelties. An examination of our stock is respectfully solicited.

I. K. SMALING,

ARTIST TAILOR,

121 NORTH QUEEN STREET.

FAST FREIGHT.

The Old Bitner Line, Established 1846.

J. R. BITNER'S

FAST FREIGHT LINE

—BETWEEN—

Lancaster and Philadelphia,

VIA PENN'A R. R.

All Freight sent to Front and Prime streets, Philadelphia, up to 6 o'clock and to No. 5 Dock street, to 6 o'clock p. m., will arrive same night at Lancaster.

The Drayage to these Central Depots is lower than to any other. No Drayage charge for delivery in Lancaster.

All Freight loaded in Lancaster, up to 6 o'clock p. m., will reach Front and Prime streets, Philadelphia, early next morning.

July 22, 1880.

WY LOCHER'S RENOWNED COUGH

SYRUP

DEY GOODS.

WHO IS UNDER?

We do not want you to get the impression that great reductions are being made in the prices of goods elsewhere and not here. We are, as usual, below the market, and intend to stay there. The following list embraces enough of our stock to give some clue to the rest of them. We quote articles now in great favor as low-priced goods; but in general they are not reduced. We have been there all the time.

JOHN WANAMAKER.

SILKS.
SUMMER SILKS..... $5
Stripes, modest, medium and bold..... $5
Checks on solid ground..... $5
Chene stripes, shaded..... $5
"Hills" extra quality..... $5
Best imported, 30 inches, great variety..... $5

BLACK SILKS.
Gross-grain Persian and tafetas..... $5
Fine or heavy cord gross-grain and Persian..... $5
Six makes, foreign and American, jet or raven black, heavy and light..... $5
Cachemire finish, 24 inches, Bellon, Alexandre and American..... $5
Kichentre finish, "extra quality," 24 inches, foreign..... $5
Bonnet, 24 inches..... $5

COLOR SILKS.
Good quality, all colors..... $5
Lyons, extra lustre, heavy cord, 20 inches, 1 00
Best, for walking suits, 22 inches..... $5
Rich and elegant finish, 22 inches..... $5
Kichy..... $5
Shaw..... $5
Brilliant and rich..... $5

BROCADES.
Black, polka dots, etc..... $5
Colors, new designs..... $5
Colored, new designs..... $5
Novelties..... $5

A large quantity just bought to clear an importer's stock, recently sold by us at $2.50, we are now selling at..... $1.50
SILKS are in next order circle east from the Chestnut street entrance.

BLACK GOODS.
GRENADES..... $5, 65, 75, 85
Mexican, silk and wool..... $5, 65, 75, 85
Paris, silk and wool..... $5, 65, 75, 85
Lyons, all silk damasks..... $5, 65, 75, 85, $2, $2 40, $3.

PLAIN HUNTINGS.
American, 24, 26, 28, 31, 37..... $5
American, 24, 26, 28, 31, 37..... $5
French, 22 inches, 30, 31, 37..... $5
French, 22 inches, 30, 31, 37..... $5
French, 46 inches, 30, 31, 41, 46..... $5

LACE BUNTINGS.
We have nearly everything to be found in the markets of the world.
22 inches, 30, 31, 37, 50..... $5
44 inches, 41, 42..... $5
Lapin's Paris, original color, and we believe almost the last in Philadelphia..... $5
24 inches..... $5
40 inches..... $5
NUM'S VEILING (for dresses),
15 inches..... $5, 41, 46
64..... $5, 41, 46
BLACK GOODS are in the next order circle west from the Chestnut street entrance.

ALL WOOL.
Lace Buntings, all colors and black..... $5
Debelges, twilled..... $5
Mohair, plain..... $5
Mohair, twilled..... $5
Mohair, silk-checked..... $5
Mohair, silk-striped..... $5
Mohair, English, clouded..... $5
Mohair, English, plain..... $5
Cashmeres, cashmeres' colors..... $5
Suttings, English, fancy..... $5

SIX SPECIMEN PRICES.
These are fair samples of the bargains we have been giving for weeks in Linens:
Huck Towel, German, knotted..... $5
Huck Towel, German, knotted..... $5
Glass Toweling, per yard..... $5
German blue, fancy Linen..... $5
German Napkins, 3 per dozen..... $5
Star Linen, 30 inches, per yard..... $5

But one thing we ought to remind you of: We may appear to be at a disadvantage when we are not, because of certain tactics sometimes employed, which we do not care to use, viz., the pretending to make reductions when none are made. We use reductions to clear stocks. That is perfectly honorable, and it is necessary in a large business. The losses thereby incurred, though sometimes considerable, are trifling in comparison with the benefit to remaining stocks.

Now then, anyone who will take measures to find out where the lowest prices are, compare sample with sample, price with price, will find we are not a whit behind ANYBODY, not even in a single item, so far as we know; and that we are better EVERYBODY on almost everything.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Chestnut, Thirteenth, Market and Juniper, Philadelphia.

July 26-1880

NEW EMBROIDERIES.

Watt, Shand & Company

HAVE OPENED A CHOICE LINE OF

Hamburg Edgings and Insertings at Very Low Prices.

Just Opened another Invoice of VICTORIA LAWNS, INDIA LINENS, WHITE PIQUES, &c., at Bottom Prices.

NEW YORK STORE,

8 AND 10 EAST KING STREET.

N. B.—During July and August will close at 7:30 p. m., Saturdays excepted.

SALE OF ## DAMAGED GOODS.

HAGER & BROTHER will continue the sale of Goods damaged only by water during the recent fire on their premises.

WALL PAPER CARPETS,

Mattings and Oil Cloths, Muslins and Sheetings,

Linens and Quilts, Woollens for Men's Wear, and Ready-Made Clothing, &c.,

All of the above have been marked at a very low price, as we are determined to close out the entire lot.

The sale is going on daily from 6 a. m. until 7 p. m. Saturday evenings until 9 o'clock in store rooms in rear of main store.

As there was no damage to stock in main store room business there goes on as usual.

HAGER & BROTHER,

NO. 25 WEST KING STREET.

Lancaster Intelligencer.

MONDAY EVENING, JULY 26, 1880.

WOMAN'S SPHERE.

A CHAPTER CONCERNING THE SEX IN GENERAL.

But Dealing With Ill-favored Members Thereof in Particular—What Shall Be Done With Them?—The Standard Lot to Which They Have Been Released by Social Custom—Vociferous and Incessant—Doctors, Teachers and the Most Professions.

THE FATHERLAND.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM OVER THE SEA.

Mr. Zacharias in Thuringia—The "Monotonous Order of Life Among the German People"—The "Bride of Goethe," at the Cloister of Bonifacio, in a Chapel Where in Luther Franchised.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round, bowing, and remarked: "Thank you for an agreeable journey and a good lesson, young ladies." "Try and remember it," answered one with good humor, "and be sure you are never again found a husband since, and I trust for his sake, poor fellow, that he has contrived to behave herself.

Ugly Girls are a Minority in England, not because the average runs toward plainness. A plain girl, so long as she is young, healthy and nice, does not attract much ugly. There are some who, though plain-featured, have what the French call "la beauté du diable." These are very spry ones, who love a laugh, are not afraid of a man, and know so well how to make the most of such advantages as they possess, that they are acknowledged by all to be winsome. Some of the pleasantest girls out belong to this category, for they make it their endeavor to please, which is not always the case with our regular beauty, who is apt to grow conceited from being too much courted. Beauties are often silly; the girl with the devil's beauty never is; for indeed her attractiveness comes from the sparkle of intelligence in her eyes and from her happy self-possession. She is pretty sure to be a good dresser, dancer and talker. She will have the tact not to show off her accomplishments unless she is quite certain to shine; and she will allow a man to discover her perfections one after another, rather than try to force them upon his notice all at once. They are a precious class against clever girls; I confess to liking them as much as I do clever men, though their penetration into foibles of our sex does occasionally inspire one with a desire to go off and hide somewhere. I was once traveling on the Great Western railway in one of those first class carriages which are divided into two compartments. I was alone in mine, but there were three young ladies in the other, and as the partition door was closed, they either did not notice my presence, or else were so unconcerned about it that they began to discuss the ways of men as if I were not there to hear. The things they said, the merry way in which they said them, the extraordinarily vivacious intuition which they evinced as to the weak points of man's character, were all as amusing as they were humiliating to listen to. When the train reached Slough I had to get out, and passed through the compartment where the fair critics were. I say "fair" by courtesy, for they were none of them as if abashed, but then tittered behind their muffs, and only reddened slightly when I turned round