TENT AND TABERNACLE.

The Landisville Campmeeting.

Special Correspondence of the INTELLIGENCER.
LANDISVILLE CAMPMEETING GROUNDS, Tuesday evening, July 27, 1880.

The arrivals to-day have been very numerous and now most of the tents and cottages are occupied. A few more tents have been raised, which swells the number to seventy-seven.

A violent storm swept over the grove on Monday afternoon, but fortunately little damage was done.

Mr. George Wanamaker, who has charge of the boarding house on the camp grounds, is now ready to accommodate persons desiring board.

Prof. Sweeney, the great campmeeting singer, arrived this evening. For the last week he has been visiting the campmeeting at Chester Heights and now he has consented to pay Landisville another visit.

The arrivals of ministers have not by any means been numerous, but those who are present this morning are as follows: Rev. Geo. Cummins, P. E.; Rev. W. J. Mills, Rev. Joseph C. Gregg, Rev. J. W. Geiger, Rev. H. Wheeler, Rev. E. Potts, Rev. J. Lindemuth.

This day (Tuesday) was appointed for the opening of religious services on the camp ground, but as usual they did not begin till in the evening, when Rev. Geo. Cummins, presiding elder, took charge of the meeting and is to continue to be the leader until the close of campmeeting, Providence permitting.

After the hymns had been sung and the prayer offered, Mr. Cummins made an address which was very impressive and appropriate to the occasion. He began by saying that in looking over the audience he recognized many familiar faces, then again there were other faces which were not so familiar, but again he missed some faces which he had so often seen in attendance at the campmeeting.

He also reminded them of the cause for which they had convened themselves together, and that was the salvation of souls. He exhorted them to seek the unction from God and then begin the mighty work which is now set before them.

The opening service of the campmeeting was very interesting, and many were apparently profited thereby.

Wednesday Noon.—Rev. Henry Wheeler, of Columbia, conducted the morning prayer meeting.

Professor Sweeny, of Chester, one of the "Sweet Singers of Israel," is on the ground and will lead the singing in connection with Prof Ellenberger, of Harrisburg.

At 10 a. m. Rev. John W. Geiger, of Marietta, preached from Matt. xiii., 44: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hid in a field, when a man hath found he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field," also Prov. xxiii., 23: "Buy the truth and sell it not." In undertakings in life nothing can be gained without investments. That in which we invest must be of known establishment and have appreciable value. Every man seeking temporal competency follows a hereditary longing to command capital. Moral competency is the treasure sought for by those who desire rest from sin. Christianity was considered a valuable treasure, greatly to be desired to enrich us and to be earnestly sought after.

The subject was amplified and fully illustrated in all these points. The speaker held the attention of the audience. He is a fluent speaker, earnest in his manner and never prolix.

The first sermon usually sounds the key note that is to follow. The theme was: "Religion, its value and desirability." This will be the theme that will permeate every sermon during the progress of the camp.

Rev. G. Cummins, P. E., followed the sermon with an exhortation.

A New Band.

On Monday evening fourteen well-known musicians met and organized a new band to be called the Eaterpean cornet band, of Lancaster, with the following officers:

President—Samuel S. Cross.
Vice President—Scott Stanley.
Sec'y.—Richard A. Smith.
Treasurer—J. W. Keller.
Leader—John F. Bruder.
Conductor—Conrad Rheam.

The band is starting under very favorable auspices, having about twenty members, most of whom have their instruments and expect shortly to have a full new uniform. They will meet for practice every Tuesday and Saturday evening at Roberts hall. Their headquarters will be at Alex. McKillips music store No. 320 N. Queen street.

Driving Accident.

Last evening W. H. Roy, of this city, was driving on a road which runs in to the left from the Willow Street pike at Steinman's powder house, when his horse frightened. Mr. Roy got out of the wagon to hold his horse, when the animal stepped aside and fell down a steep embankment which is along the side of the road. The shaft was broken from the wagon, but the damage was not as great as it might have been. The horse was not injured.

An Old Bible.

Charles H. Barr has at his bookstore a Bible which is over one hundred and twenty-five years old. It has parchment backs and the pages are in an excellent state of preservation. It contains the life of Martin Luther and pictures of the old German kings. The bible was purchased at a sale in the county and Mr. Barr has it for sale now.

The Butlers.

Last night William Butler, colored, and his wife Nan, had a row at their home on Middle street. William had been drinking and he struck Nan on the jaw with a stone. Nan then struck William. As soon as the fight was over both went to "get law," and each has sued the other for assault and battery before different aldermen.

Chickens Found.

This morning Officer Holman found a pair of chickens at the corner of Christian and East King streets, which had no doubt been left there by some one who had been attending market. They can be obtained by the owner by calling at the station house and proving property. They are in charge of Turnkey Nagle, who is at the station house from 6 to 10 a. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m.

Held for Court.

James S. Eckman, who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of forging the name of G. W. Harbison, had a hearing before Squire Shaub, of West Willow, yesterday, and was held in bail to answer at court.

STATE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

An Address by the Lancaster County Superintendent.

The twenty-sixth annual session of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' association commenced at the court house in York yesterday afternoon. Mr. B. F. Shaub, of Lancaster, president of the association was in the chair. Nearly every part of the state was represented, and there was a large attendance of the citizens of York. The exercises commenced with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Miller, of that place, and, after the enrollment of members and the transaction of routine business. Hon. John Gibson, a prominent lawyer of York, delivered the address of welcome. At the close of Mr. Gibson's address, which was frequently applauded, Mr. Shaub, of Lancaster, Pa., made his inaugural address to which he said:

I desire to consider a few points in our educational record, compare the record of the past with the present, and to conclude with some well meant and as I think, much needed cautions. Hence the title of this paper, "A Retrospect and Some Cautions."

1. And first as to retrospect. We find many faults in the educational work of today. Some are easily noticed, others are clearly seen only by those who are accustomed to inspecting the work and anxious to improve its quality. Educators are ever on the alert. The public is critical. We are all more competent to criticise than we formerly were, and the disposition to do so seems to have kept pace with the ability. Unsatisfied as we are with the improved present, it is nevertheless true that the past has given us some things in our educational history that the present cannot hope greatly to excel.

Let us glance a moment at the condition of the system in 1853. The report of Hon. A. G. Curtin for the year 1855 gives the condition of the system as it was prior to 1854. I advise every one to read this interesting report. He who does so will be a better friend of our present system than he was before. Says Mr. Curtin: "It is undeniable that the school system of Pennsylvania had lost prestige and hopes, and had disappointed the expectation of its friends. Its failing energies seemed to portend to ultimate decay. In many instances the state appropriation was devoted to the repairing of the township roads, no tax was collected, no teachers employed. The schools were a burden on the cause of popular education, and those who could afford it withheld their children from them, under an honest belief that in them neither the minds nor the morals would be improved. The whole system was becoming a by-word and a reproach within and without the borders of the state."

Such was the deplorable condition of the schools, as set forth in an official report. It seems scarcely credible that twenty years after the establishment of the system it should be so barren in results. By the act of 1854 the schools were revived. The changes soon brought about by this act were astonishing. In his report for 1855, Mr. Curtin says that, by means of the county superintendency, which was the distinguishing feature of the act of 1854, "renewed life and vigor was infused into the system, the schools were greatly improved even in the first year of its operations, and a power and efficiency were secured that were hitherto unattainable." All these results, we must remember, were secured in the face of much opposition to the act of 1854, and especially to the superintendency. Teachers (?) were opposed to it, the penurious were opposed to it; it had to contend against fightings without and treachery within. And yet it stood backed by legislative enactment and courageous friends in the department and throughout the state. Is it not strange that an agency so helpful should have been so bitterly opposed and so persistently misrepresented, even at that day? And is it not stranger yet that, today, in the full blaze of historical and practical vindication of supervision, that there are some who would bitterly resent the charge of ignorance as applicable to themselves, who kick and bite, and chafe and fret at the distinguishing feature of the act of 1854?

This part of our record also shows that free trade in education don't work well. The state must aid, must move briskly and positively right along in the front, or the masses will go without schools worthy of the name. Local option don't work well in educational supervision. Of the 2168 districts in the state but 119 have local supervision, and of this number twenty-five are cities and boroughs. 2049 districts of the state are without this helpful agency. The "great expectations" of Mr. Curtin in his report of 1857, concerning close supervision, are yet far from being realized. This fact refutes many fine-spun arguments as to what the people will do. The people don't generally provide good public schools until after the state has first moved and given judicious aid. This Pennsylvania did in 1854. The authors of the act of 1854 "builded better than they knew." They gave us a system which has in it wonderful potency and promise, and from which has been evolved an immense amount of good. May it, like a pure and unfailing fountain, continue, during all future years, to send forth its refreshing streams into every nook and corner of the state. Be it ours to direct it wisely, to make it more effective, to strengthen it when weak, and to judiciously adapt it to our varied needs as they arise and press themselves upon our attention.

II. And now as to the "cautions." Of several evil tendencies on the increase among us I shall speak of two only. 1. A turning away from mechanical and agricultural pursuits. 2. A giving of culture to the intellect chiefly, and in the earnest desire to do this, forgetting to give culture to the moral nature. Schools are not responsible for all, nor for most of the erroneous ideas as to hand labor. But it may be they are responsible for some of them. How many teachers make their pupils feel as enthsiastic about industrial pursuits as they do about professional? I fear teachers are making a mistake here, and are either consciously or unconsciously sowing the seeds of distaste for any but professional life. Let us all earnestly try to root out that most pernicious idea, that labor which is not professional is menial. Let us instil the soundest of views on the questions of industry and usefulness. Don't repress aspiration, but direct it wisely. This requires superior wisdom. Look to the probabilities as well as the possibilities of your pupils. We shall not teach trades; we have a nobler and more important work to perform. We should strive to fill our pupils with a spirit of usefulness, of helpfulness, a spirit of duty, and of manly and womanly achievement; a spirit of eternal love of doing, and of eternal hatred of not doing; a spirit which shall burn out of the girls the disposition to crotchet all winter and croquet all summer—and out of the boys the disposition to play baseball for six months and to attend baser balls during the remainder—or, it may be, the whole of the year; a spirit which shall prevent girls and boys from growing up into useless women and spendthrift men.

The moral nature should receive more culture in the schools than it generally does; and just in proportion as parents are careless in this particular should the schools be more careful. Is it said to leave moral culture to chance? Would it not be much less dangerous to leave the culture of the intellect to chance. Ignorance of school studies is not the only source of crime. That education materially diminishes crime is yet, I think, to be proved. It changes the nature of crime committed, but I cannot believe that it is ever a cause of crime, as the last reports of our state penitentiaries allege. But inasmuch as character is of more value than scholarship, I believe that more direct attention should be given to the culture of moral nature than is now done. Perhaps the best way to give this culture is to do so informally but persistently and continuously at every suitable opportunity. In every school, from the highest to the lowest, in every association of teachers this subject should receive emphatic recognition, and should be lifted up into that prominence which its supreme importance demands.

In conclusion, allow me to say that I advocate not that pupils shall be taught less of the branches, but that they shall be more fully possessed of the idea of usefulness, and shall be actuated by it; not that technical religion shall be formally taught in the public schools, but that the ideas of God and the Christian religion shall be more distinctly recognized as the foundation upon which rests the exaltation and true prosperity of nations and individuals. Well will it be for the schools and the nation when all connected with their administration shall feel the importance of the ideas of usefulness, of character, of true religion and of God; when no teacher shall sink the God idea, or the Book of Books. Then will the nation and the schools have infused into them that salt which, wanting, they would "thenceforth be good for nothing but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

The address was discussed in a commendatory spirit by Profs. Sheldon, Beard, Heiges, Haldeman, Schaeffer, Hayes, Mrs. M. B. Archer and J. V. Montgomery of the normal school of Millersville.

The evening meeting, devoted to "spelling reform," was addressed by Prof. F. A. March.

Loss by Fire and Water.

There was a serious fire in Eberts building, in the borough of York, yesterday morning about four o'clock. The first and third stories of the building are occupied by Amos Hoffman, clothier, late of this city. Mr. Hoffman, who was formerly a printer at the Inquirer office and who is a brother-in-law of Geo. Brubaker, esq., of this city, started the clothing business in York with S. M. Myers, of Myers & Rathfon, but is now carrying it on alone. He occupied the first story of the Ebert building as a store and the third floor as a work room. The fire originated in the second story in the Republican office and the business and editorial department were seriously damaged. The work rooms of Mr. Hoffman, on the third floor front, were flooded with water and the contents greatly damaged. In his store room on the first floor, the fire did not reach, and the damage is wholly by water. Mr. Hoffman carried an immense stock, the heavier goods being in the rear, which escaped in a measure. The fancy articles and smaller pieces of goods in the front part of the room were soaked completely, but the damage cannot be estimated yet. He is fully insured, however.

Hearing of the Tramps.

This afternoon the tramps who were engaged in the fight at Landis's woods, on Saturday afternoon, had a hearing before Alderman Barr. James Watson, the man who was so badly cut, was present. He and his wife and another witness testified that Jack Ryan did the cutting. It was shown by the evidence that all were drunk, with the exception of Mrs. Watson. Ryan was committed to answer at court the charge of felonious assault and battery. Samuel Craig, Mary Craig, James Gibson, Rose Gibson, Mary Ryan and Jack Ryan were each committed to prison for thirty days for being drunk and disorderly and were held for court to answer the charge of being tramps. Watson and his wife were held as witnesses.

Put Off the Cars.

Mr. Ferdinand Weber, residing on East King street, near Ann, this city, was taken to his home last night badly cut about the head and bruised about the body. He says he had been to Philadelphia and was coming home by the way of Reading; that he and Mr. Gable of Columbia, were sitting together and smoking in the smoking car, or what they supposed to be the smoker; all went well enough until they reached the Junction, where they separated, Mr. Gable taking the cars for Columbia, and Mr. Weber coming on towards Lancaster. Shortly after leaving the Junction, Mr. Weber says, the conductor ordered him to quit smoking, and when Mr. Weber told him that he thought he was in the smoking car the conductor told him he was not, and that if he wanted to smoke he must go forward. Mr. Weber was then taken forward into the baggage car. He remonstrated against this, saying the baggage car was not a fit place for a passenger. After some words on both sides, the conductor stopped the train, called for assistance, and he and a brakeman put Mr. Weber off the cars. Mr. Weber says he did not know where he was, but, in attempting to walk home fell through a bridge, hurting himself badly as above described. After getting out of the creek he met a boy who showed him the way to Kauffman's tavern. Having stated the case to Mrs. Kauffman she procured a horse and vehicle, and had him sent to his home, which he reached at 11:30 last night, Mrs. Kauffman says he was sober when he reached her house.

On the other hand, a reliable gentleman of this city, who saw the whole transaction, informs us that the entire difficulty arose from Mr. Weber's persistence in smoking in the ladies' car, that he was notified not to do it, and upon his refusal to obey the regulations of the company he was put off the train for violating them.

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

Captain Stanley, of Middletown, Dies From Hydrophobia.

HARRISBURG, July 28.—Captain James H. Stanley, a prominent citizen of Middletown, this county, died last night from hydrophobia. When the symptoms first became manifest last Sunday he bade his friends good-bye and submitted himself to the care of keepers. But on Monday night during a violent spasm he escaped and was found subsequently in the suburbs, biting at everything that came within his reach. The deceased was bitten by his own dog about five weeks ago. During the intervals between his spasms he would converse in an intelligent manner with those around him.

The Young Napoleon's Death.

Eighteen Zulus who participated in the killing of Prince Napoleon, give the "first authentic details" of that event. There were forty assailants, twelve of whom followed the prince. His horse broke from him, but he pursued it; closely pressed on foot he turned "like a lion at bay," was [struck by an assegia in the left shoulder. Wounded he rushed at his nearest opponent, who fled. He returned the fire of his rapidly increasing foes and was struck by the another assegai. In struggling previously with his terrified horse his sword had fallen from its scabbard, but he seized an assegai which had been thrown at him and defended himself. The Zulus state that they did not dare close in on him until he sank exhausted on his hips.

"'Sellers' Liver Pills' cured me of liver complaint."—D. H. Coleman, Short Creek, W. Va.

Honored and Blessed.

When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced their discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all benefactors. jy16-2wd&w

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., writes: "I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

Another writes: "I have been troubled with Asthma for years; have used half a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and the benefit I have received from it is so great that I would not take one hundred dollars for the balance if I could get no more." For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa. 42
