DRY GOODS.

WHO IS UNDER?

Do not want you to get the impression that great reductions are being made in the prices of goods elsewhere and not here.

We are, as usual, below the market, and intend to stay there.

The following list embraces enough of our stock to give some clue to the rest of them. We quote articles now in great favor as low-priced goods; but in general they are not reduced. We have been there all the time.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 30, 1880.

THE CAMPAIGN.

NEW YORK, PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO

Their Voices at the New York City

Meeting.

On the occasion of the great Democratic ratification meeting in New York, on Wednesday evening, Hon. Samuel J. Tilden upon taking the chair said:

"I thank you, my fellow citizens, for the cordiality of this greeting. I have come down this evening from my country home to join with you in expressing and declaring the purpose of the Democracy of the city of New York to sustain the nomination of Hancock and English. [Great applause.] I have come under the stipulation with your committee that, in consequence of my hoarseness of voice, I should not be expected to make a speech to this large assembly. What I have said is indeed but briefly to touch two points. The welfare of the people of the United States demands a change of administration of the federal government. [Immense applause.]

Reform is necessary to remove abuses of continuous power, to roll back the principles and bad practices. [Cheering and voices, "Good, good."] The Republican party, stilling its conscience, has made itself responsible for the intrusion, under color of law, into the Chief magistracy of our great country, of a man who was not electorally chosen, and who was not elected by the people. [Thunders of applause, and cries of "That's it," "That's a fact."] Unless condemned by the people, and signally condemned, it will subvert the elective system of government, and in its place the rule of a dynasty of officeholders holding over against the will of the people. [Applause.] The complete overthrow of the Republican party at the election in 1880, will be a national disaster; it will prevent the retributive judgment; it will prevent the reversion of the sovereignty of the people. [Applause.] Congratulating you gentlemen, upon the nomination, I congratulate you also upon the auspicious promise of success which is before you, and congratulate you upon the order of business of the meeting."

Samuel J. Tilden's Speech.

The time approaches when nearly fifty millions of people will be called upon to decide upon whose hands they shall trust the reins of government. It is a moment when every effort should be made to recall administration to sound principles and safe action by honest ways and just equity.

Fellow citizens, we enter upon the campaign of power, the candidates and the platform. Our presidential candidate Winfield Scott Hancock, is "without fear and without reproach." Scandal has sought in vain for the least stain upon his character. His renowned deeds in peace and in war, and his services in the cause of justice, which has discharged every trust confided to him, are the rich heritage of our country's history. He stands upon a platform of principles. His declarations are the accepted principles on which constitutional government is based.

He stands for the rights of the people and for a long-suffering people. The candidates are worthy of the platform, and the platform is worthy of the candidates.

Both afford encouragement and good will to every section. They do not seek to state one section by the neck, but they seek concord and justice to all alike.

No nation can be prosperous and happy where sectional hate and discord are deliberately and wickedly attempted. All stand as peers before the law, and the prosperity of each is the prosperity of the whole. It is the policy of the Democratic party to stand for the rights of the people, and for the rights of the people. The public credit is the very essence of the general welfare. The public debt is a sacred obligation which must be paid to the last dollar.

Can any sane man believe that the hero who shed his life's blood at Gettysburg and elsewhere, in defence of the Union, would for an instant endanger the public faith by impairing the public credit, which is the life blood of our prosperity as a country. The dangers which threaten the stability of our free government come from other sources. Centralization of power, subjugation of state sovereignty, control of the elective franchise, shambled extraneous and needless expenditures, and every other form of misadministration of every description during the long reign of power which has been allowed to the Republican party, are the real dangers which threaten us.

It was the Democratic party, as represented in the House of Representatives, which made the first successful struggle, since the close of the war, in favor of a reimbursement of the public expenses, and against the raising of any revenues except those which were actually required for the needs. It made easy the straight path to a resumption of specie payments. It gave vitality to our credit, and created a system of funding our public debt at a lower rate of interest. It is this reimbursement and public debt, and the remainder of the policy of the Democratic administration, which has brought us to this point. England borrows money at three per cent.

with no purpose over to pay the principal; we have not only the disposition but we have the ability, from our abundant resources to pay both the principal and the current interest. And to-day there is no governmental loan equal in security to our own. In addition, the economy enforced by the Democratic party, through its representatives, has given encouragement and renewed life to our prostrate industries.

There is, in fact, no other path to continued prosperity.

Our opponents pretend to apprehend and endeavor to make the people fear the advent of the Democratic party to power.

There is no occasion for any alarm, and they will know it. Was there ever exhibited more heroic obedience to law, or greater love of peace and order, or stronger devotion to the public welfare, than when the Democratic House of Representatives allowed Mr. Hayes to be proclaimed president. They knew that the electoral commission had, in violation of the spirit of the law, and in utter disregard of the fundamental principles of justice, sanctioned by its acts perjury, forgery and fraud.

The "solid South" could then have been shaken again by the very foundation of
