AN ELOQUENT SPEECH.

GEN. CHALMERS AT YONKERS.

What a Confederate General Thinks of His Former Enemy as a Candidate for the Presidency.

With the exception of slavery, Hancock was for a restoration of the Union as it was.

More than all, Hancock represents a party which knows no sectional bias.

But again I ask you, "Why is it you dislike the South?"

"It has been said that Southern men hate the old flag and despise the soldiers of the Union army."

"He lifted from between us and the old flag the banner of radicalism, which had obstructed our gaze and embittered our feelings, and once more we could gaze upon which a great diversity of opinions could agree than a more copious one from which some should dissent."

At the meeting of the American Dental Convention on Wednesday last, Dr. Patrick, president of the Southern Dental Association, made a speech on the subject of the business of dentistry, its growth and importance.

cess to be an object less than 24,000,000, requiring, in a full dentition, which scarcely any have, 708,000,000 teeth. Allowing an average of 20 teeth to the head, we have 480,000,000 teeth. The average duration of a false tooth may be put at ten years, so that there must be now in this country not less than 30,000,000 false teeth—one in every sixteen. This is independent of the patched and repaired teeth, and the numerous "gangs" which are not worth looking after. The worst of it is that Dr. Patrick thinks our teeth tend to grow worse instead of better. The rule of the "survival of the fittest" does not work in this case. The perfect set of (false) teeth in this generation will not become the perfect set of natural teeth in the next. On the contrary, Dr. Patrick has no hesitation in saying "that the next generation will witness a greater abnormality in dental development than we have yet seen. It is for this simple reason that there is a greater tendency to nervous and cerebral diseases resulting from fast living and injudicious food. The doctor advises the dentists to rise to a higher plane to meet the coming disease."

Sunday-school Books.

About a year ago, a Christian lady connected with one of the Episcopal parishes in the City of Cambridge, Mass., convinced of the poverty and sterility of the library maintained by the average Sunday-school, took counsel with several of her friends for a remedy. The result was the formation of a "Church Library Association," the object of which was to be a censorship—purely voluntary and without other than moral authority, of course—of the books supplied to the libraries of the various Sunday-schools with which they were connected. A similar organization of Unitarian ladies in Boston was taken as a model in a general way, with modifications of detail adapted to the particular case. About thirty persons, ladies and gentlemen, were found who were willing to undertake, and assume the labor and responsibility involved.

Their first task was a systematic reading of all the books in all the libraries in question. This was done in a systematic plan of a division of labor designed to secure the largest possible variety of judgment. The commission as a whole was broken up into a number of reading committees, consisting of no less than twelve members each, and each of these committees, and read in turn by its several members, it being required that it be approved by a majority of the committee before being further considered. On receiving such approval the book was next taken up in a general meeting of the committee, and finally in a stated meeting of the entire association, a three-fourths vote of all the members present at being placed on the approved list. In this careful and systematic way the contents of five representative books were read by every single member. Some books were thoroughly known and readily approved by common consent, but all have been as good as subjected to a searching and critical examination. Of course, also, in the case of many and so varying tastes, many books which would easily have passed a less severe test were thrown out, and among these doubtless not a few that most persons might account as deserving; but it was deemed better to make up a select list upon which a great diversity of opinions could agree than a more copious one from which some should dissent.

The association has now printed its list No. 1, which represents a year's hard labor, and what labor could be harder than the reading of the contents of five representative Sunday-school libraries of the country to which we belong. That is a great thing to be done, and to have done it is to have performed not only a useful service for a large body of Christian people, but to have set an example which might well be followed in other quarters.

Following are the names of a few books which we are glad to find recommended for the Sunday school: The "Bessie Books" of Joanna H. Matthews, the "Bible Books" by Horace E. Scudder, the "Familiar Stories" and "Role Books" of the late Jacob Abbott, many of Miss Yonge's tales, the noble biography of Gen. Bartlett, Mr. Hale's fine story "In His Name" Mrs. D. P. Sanford's pretty volumes "A Household of Children and the Bible," Mrs. Dodson's "Hans Brinker," several of the late Mrs. Prentiss's stories, various books of travel and biography, F. W. Robertson's "Life and Letters," the Tom Brown books, Mr. Higginson's "Young Folks' History of the United States."

MALT AND HOPS!

DYSPEPSIA—Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. It lies at the bottom of one-half our misery. Where the weak upon which many of our business ventures have split. It clouds the mind, weakens the body, and preys upon the vitality. Where shall we find relief from this morbid, melancholy misery? MALT BITTERS! It is a tonic and a food. It is this wonderful nutrient and invigorant built up embedded digestion, regulates the flow of the gastric juices, dissolves and assimilates every article of diet, and cures Headache, Dizziness, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, and a thousand other morbid forms assumed by Dyspepsia.

MALT BITTERS are prepared without fermentation from Canadian BARLEY MALT and HOPS, and warranted superior to all other forms of malt or medicine, white free from the objections urged against malt liquors.

Ask for MALT BITTERS prepared by the MALT BITTERS COMPANY, and see that every bottle bears the TRADE MARK LABEL, duly signed and sealed in WATSON'S PATENT.

MALT BITTERS are for sale by all Druggists.
