

The Lancaster Intelligencer.

Volume XVII—No. 4.

LANCASTER, PA., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880.

Price Two Cents.

CLOTHING.

Spring Opening

24 CENTRE SQUARE

We have lot sale for the coming seasons an immense stock of

Ready-Made Clothing, of our own manufacture, which comprise the latest and most

STYLISH DESIGNS.

Come and see our

NEW GOODS

MERCHANT TAILORING, which is larger and composed of the best styles to be found in the city.

D. B. Hostetter & Son,

24 CENTRE SQUARE.

6-13-4 LANCASTER, PA.

SMALING,

THE ARTIST TAILOR.

Closing out our stock of Light Weights at cost to make room for Fall and Winter Stock.

A Large Line of English Novelties.

TROPICAL SUITINGS, SERGES AND REPS,

HANNOCKBURNS AND CELTICS, GAMBRON PAKAMATA AND BATISTE SUITINGS.

SEERSUCKERS, VALENCIAS, PAROLE AND MOHAIR COATINGS.

A Splendid Assortment of Wilson's Padded Ducks in Plain and Fancy Styles. A Full Line of Marsoilles and Duck Vestings.

All the latest novelties. An examination of our stock is respectfully solicited.

I. K. SMALING,

ARTIST TAILOR,

121 NORTH QUEEN STREET.

BOOKS AND STATIONERY.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

SCHOOL BOOKS

—AND—

SCHOOL SUPPLIES

for Lancaster City and County, at

L. M. FLYNN'S

No. 42 WEST KING STREET.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS

—AND—

Fancy Stationary

—AT—

FON DERSMITH'S

No. 32 East King St., Lancaster, Pa. aug24-4d

SCHOOL BOOKS

FOR THE

Schools of Lancaster City,

NEW AND SECOND-HAND.

At the LOWEST PRICES, at the Book Store of

JOHN BAER'S SONS,

15 and 17 NORTH QUEEN STREET,

LANCASTER, PA.

GENTS' GOODS.

FOR LINEN COLLARS

—GO TO— ERISMAN'S.

FOR FANCY STOCKINGS

—GO TO— ERISMAN'S.

FOR SUSPENDERS

—GO TO— ERISMAN'S.

FOR NEW STYLE

LINEN HANDKERCHIEFS, GO TO

E. J. ERISMAN'S,

56 NORTH QUEEN STREET.

WY LOCHER'S RENOWNED COUGH SYRUP

Lancaster Intelligencer.

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 4, 1880.

AN OPENING RALLY.

THE BOYS IN LINE.

A RATTLING MEETING.

AND A FORETASTE OF A LIVELY CAMPAIGN.

Speeches by J. C. McAlarney, of Harrisburg, and Edgar M. Levan, of Reading.

The Democratic meeting advertised to be held at the Central headquarters last evening, came off according to announcement, save that the immensity of the throng which assembled completely precluded the holding of it in any less space than the square.

About 7:45 p. m. the Eighth ward club, more than 150 strong, marched down from the "hill" and were soon joined at the headquarters by representatives from the inside wards who had gathered there. At Schiller hall the Sixth Ward American club, consolidated, held a business meeting and elected Col. Edw. McGovern president and E. H. Brubaker treasurer, and all the former vice presidents, secretaries and other officers of the former two clubs corresponding officers of the consolidated club, Geo. W. Zoehner, R. H. Brubaker and George B. Willson were appointed a committee on finance and equipments. The meeting then adjourned and the members of the Hancock Legion, who were present, donned their white linen hats, badges and canes, and forming in line, accompanied the club to the street, where they were met by the Ninth ward club, headed by Kreider's drum corps, and the whole procession moved to the square.

It was soon found impracticable to hold the meeting in the Mischler court, owing to the large audience, and the speakers' stand was carried out into the square and located at the southeast corner of the monument, when the glee club, composed of about a dozen singers, under the leadership of Geo. Pontz, sang a stirring political ballad, which was greeted with cheers, and Mr. Hensel introduced Jos. C. McAlarney, esq., of Harrisburg, as the first speaker of the evening.

Mr. McAlarney, who is a member of the Dauphin county bar and was one of the counsel for the prosecution of the riot bill bribers, opened with a reference to the prevailing enthusiasm in the party which is a certain augur of victory. The spirit displayed to-night animates Democrats everywhere this year and is certain to be crowned with victory. He entered upon a rigorous and scathing review of Garfield as a public official, analyzing his connection with the Credit Mobilier business, his evasion, his perjury, his condemnation by a committee of his own party and by Republican newspapers throughout the land. His complications in the De Goyler bribery case were quite as bad if not worse than those of the late President. He paid $5,000 fee to secure his influence for a worthless job and that it was only as chairman of the committee on appropriations that he was retained. This was legally established in a suit in which Emory Storts, who was brought to Philadelphia lately to speak for him, was counsel. On protection and the tariff Garfield's course is evasive and one of duplicity. He has two faces, and though at heart a free trader has not the manliness to avow his convictions now and lets his supporters proclaim the recent discovery that he is a tariff man. In short he is a trimmer, though he does not seem to have the sense to even trim successfully and adroitly.

Turning to Hancock the speaker exhibited in glowing colors his civil and military record. Nature had marked him with a handsome face and figure, but his actions did not belie his looks. He was as good as his word looking. His letter to Sherman, his Peace letter, order No. 40, his leniency and pardon of other state papers, mark the ripe publicist, the profound student of our institutions and of fundamental questions. As a soldier he won and was entitled to his country's gratitude, and it will say to him: "Go higher."

The fight of the people to-day is against thieves in entrenched power in Harrisburg and Washington. Our state had been shamed by the legislative bribery attending an attempt in the riot bill. The chief offenders were convicted and sentenced to prison, thanks to the indomitable courage of that gallant young Republican, Charles S. Wolfe, whose name should be a household word in the commonwealth. The jail doors had hardly closed when they were pardoned in violation of all rules and decency by a Republican pardon board. They pardoned Kemble, but they refused to pardon a boy sent to jail for six months for stealing a chicken.

The chief clamor against the Democracy to-day is from renegades like Cessna, who was trying to get the Democratic nomination for governor when Hancock was fighting the battles of his country.

At the conclusion of his exhaustive, comprehensive speech of nearly an hour, Mr. McAlarney predicted a sweeping victory in Indiana, and reaching from one end of the land to the other. He was heartily cheered.

A Boy From Old Berks.

The glee club then sang another song which was rapturously applauded, and Mr. Steinmetz in a few well chosen remarks introduced Edgar M. Levan, esq., a representative of the Jeffersonian Democracy of Berks county.

Mr. Levan, a rising young lawyer of the Reading bar, who was the second highest candidate for district attorney at the late county convention, opened with an eloquent reference to the prevailing popular enthusiasm for the Democratic nominees and predicted that the wave of popular revolution sweeping the country would carry the Republican party forever out of sight. For that party is a party of expediency, temporizing and evanescent. The Democracy is the only truly national party, founded in the necessities of our institutions and continuing amid all vicissitudes against the opposition alike of Federalists, Whigs, Silver Grays, Woolly Heads, Know Nothings and Republicans. The Democratic party went down in 1860, because it probably ought to have gone down; it will come up this year because the needs of the country will raise it to power. The South believed they were right because the government was technically a union, not a nation. The Websterian idea prevailed and no man seeks to reopen or set aside the verdict of the war. The Democratic party has done all it could do to make this plain in the nomination of Hancock, but he and it most with the same about as when the Democracy nominated McClellan, the great soldier in 1864, the spotless statesman Seymour in 1868, their old time opponent Greeley in 1872, or the great ring breaker in 1876.

The Democratic party believes in states rights, but only in such rights as the constitution says were not surrendered by the states to the general government. It does not believe in wiping out state lines and destroying home rule. It does not believe in a paternal government nor in the destruction of local self-government. When either the centrifugal or centrifugal forces assert themselves unduly, disaster ensues. The rebellion was an excess of centrifugal power, the measures of reconstruction tended toward the other extreme. The predominance of the centrifugal will lead to monarchy or oligarchy. The only protection against this is Democracy.

And this idea will win. The Democracy are to be re-intrusted with power. The revolution may reach every New England state save Vermont, and that state an enthusiastic Republican had bet a Millionaire that the Lord would not "carry" when he came in his fullness.

Amid memories of Gettysburg Mr. Levan bade the townspeople of the gallant Allen Reynolds remember the conduct of Hancock on that tragic day when Pickett's forces made their wild charge and yet the day was saved because of Hancock's splendid example before his men. Gettysburg numbered 33 per cent. of all engaged in its casualties, while Gettysburg, Europe's bloodiest battle-field, numbered only 18 per cent. Of the three great heroes of the day Hancock alone survives, and to him the grateful people of eastern Pennsylvania would not deny the new honors which are to be heaped upon him.

The people of our country are for the Democracy because it is the party of one blood, one tongue, one birth and one idea. They want no separation of sentiment nor of interest more than they want a separation of the states, and for that reason they are going to have a reunited country under an honest party with the heroic soldier, the far-sighted statesman, as its head.

Mr. Levan's spirited and eloquent address evoked hearty applause, and at its conclusion he was greeted with rounds of cheers. The glee club sang another song, after which Geo. Pontz gave the boys one of his own, and when he was done there was a very large crowd present eager to hear more. W. U. Hensel, esq., made a short speech, and the meeting adjourned to the club rooms, where another was hastily extemporized. The glee club kept on singing, John A. Coyle, esq., made a speech, and at a late hour amid many demonstrations of enthusiasm the meeting adjourned.

Reminiscences of Wheatland.

The Portrait Painter of Buchanan and Hancock.

In 1856 W. E. McMaster visited this city and painted a portrait of Hon. James Buchanan, then the Democratic candidate for president. Now he is at Governor's Island, New York, painting Hancock's portrait, and in a letter of interesting reminiscences to Colonel Forney, he says:

"Just twenty-four years ago I visited Wheatland, near Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, and spent a month in the household of the last Democratic president, painting the portrait of James Buchanan. Artists who are honored with the companionship of great men are apt to recall those general hours as the halcyon period of their professional lives. But my stay in Wheatland was not confined exclusively to the 'sittings' of Mr. Buchanan. Miss Harriet Lane, his accomplished niece, presided over his household, as she had when her uncle represented this country at the court of St. James.

I now recall with pleasure those golden days of my life, and those which followed through the succeeding four years; when this gifted Queen of American society, dispensed the honors of the presidential mansion at Washington. I can better now than I did then understand the charm of Miss Lane's fascinating manners. She possessed the power to please all equally, and when I once asked her uncle the secret of this rare accomplishment, Mr. Buchanan replied that she had educated and cultivated gentlemen! The portrait progressed, and glass of Madeira went round, and Buchanan was elected.

Another friend of the sage of Wheatland comes vividly to my recollection. I refer to your dear sir, to you—then in the prime of your talents and manhood; the favorite leader of a great party, and chairman of the Democratic state central committee of Pennsylvania in 1856. Your visits to Wheatland were almost daily, and there right under my eye, I saw you, the energetic young war-horse of Democracy, in consultation with our candidate; planning and developing the canvass. Like a heroic chieftain at the head of his column, I saw you all along the line, in the thickest of the fight. Like Hancock at Gettysburg, always at the front when a decisive blow was to be struck, to turn back the invader, which you did in that canvass and saved Pennsylvania from the Abolition and Know-Nothing cohorts who threatened the republic.

Many a time I heard Mr. Buchanan bear testimony, as I have Governor Dickinson and Mr. John Van Buren, that "to Colonel Forney we were indebted for the Democratic electoral vote of Pennsylvania." That fact has not been forgotten with years. We regarded you then in the light of the political son of Mr. Buchanan, who had given him the best years of your life, and now you come to the standard of Hancock.

Through the dim vista of those twenty-four years, in which you and the writer have been at times at political antipodes, I ask myself, now that we again stand together for the election of another distinguished son of Pennsylvania, has the Prodigal returned, or have we gone to the Prodigal?

Again it is my pleasure to enroll myself in the canvass, and become the campaign artist of General Hancock, and to work with my best energies to secure his election.

I was a glorious reunion when I saw you welcomed at Governor's Island, at the time I was engaged upon my portrait of the general, and I bear testimony that your accession to Democratic ranks is highly prized.

I hope I shall be forgiven for alluding to you as the Prodigal. You do not return alone and do not get come back empty. Legions are flocking to your ranks. They come as the winds come—free I and from all classes and conditions of our citizens. You come with a ripe experience and rich in political law, as scholar, editor and orator, to throw your talents into the scale with tremendous and telling force.

Among the welcome visitors at Governor's Island, none were more welcome than the old-time friend of Buchanan, the successful leader of a campaign which made a president.

cock, but he and it most with the same about as when the Democracy nominated McClellan, the great soldier in 1864, the spotless statesman Seymour in 1868, their old time opponent Greeley in 1872, or the great ring breaker in 1876.

The Democratic party believes in states rights, but only in such rights as the constitution says were not surrendered by the states to the general government. It does not believe in wiping out state lines and destroying home rule. It does not believe in a paternal government nor in the destruction of local self-government. When either the centrifugal or centrifugal forces assert themselves unduly, disaster ensues. The rebellion was an excess of centrifugal power, the measures of reconstruction tended toward the other extreme. The predominance of the centrifugal will lead to monarchy or oligarchy. The only protection against this is Democracy.

And this idea will win. The Democracy are to be re-intrusted with power. The revolution may reach every New England state save Vermont, and that state an enthusiastic Republican had bet a Millionaire that the Lord would not "carry" when he came in his fullness.

Amid memories of Gettysburg Mr. Levan bade the townspeople of the gallant Allen Reynolds remember the conduct of Hancock on that tragic day when Pickett's forces made their wild charge and yet the day was saved because of Hancock's splendid example before his men. Gettysburg numbered 33 per cent. of all engaged in its casualties, while Gettysburg, Europe's bloodiest battle-field, numbered only 18 per cent. Of the three great heroes of the day Hancock alone survives, and to him the grateful people of eastern Pennsylvania would not deny the new honors which are to be heaped upon him.

The people of our country are for the Democracy because it is the party of one blood, one tongue, one birth and one idea. They want no separation of sentiment nor of interest more than they want a separation of the states, and for that reason they are going to have a reunited country under an honest party with the heroic soldier, the far-sighted statesman, as its head.

Mr. Levan's spirited and eloquent address evoked hearty applause, and at its conclusion he was greeted with rounds of cheers. The glee club sang another song, after which Geo. Pontz gave the boys one of his own, and when he was done there was a very large crowd present eager to hear more. W. U. Hensel, esq., made a short speech, and the meeting adjourned to the club rooms, where another was hastily extemporized. The glee club kept on singing, John A. Coyle, esq., made a speech, and at a late hour amid many demonstrations of enthusiasm the meeting adjourned.

Reminiscences of Wheatland.

The Portrait Painter of Buchanan and Hancock.

In 1856 W. E. McMaster visited this city and painted a portrait of Hon. James Buchanan, then the Democratic candidate for president. Now he is at Governor's Island, New York, painting Hancock's portrait, and in a letter of interesting reminiscences to Colonel Forney, he says:

"Just twenty-four years ago I visited Wheatland, near Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, and spent a month in the household of the last Democratic president, painting the portrait of James Buchanan. Artists who are honored with the companionship of great men are apt to recall those general hours as the halcyon period of their professional lives. But my stay in Wheatland was not confined exclusively to the 'sittings' of Mr. Buchanan. Miss Harriet Lane, his accomplished niece, presided over his household, as she had when her uncle represented this country at the court of St. James.

I now recall with pleasure those golden days of my life, and those which followed through the succeeding four years; when this gifted Queen of American society, dispensed the honors of the presidential mansion at Washington. I can better now than I did then understand the charm of Miss Lane's fascinating manners. She possessed the power to please all equally, and when I once asked her uncle the secret of this rare accomplishment, Mr. Buchanan replied that she had educated and cultivated gentlemen! The portrait progressed, and glass of Madeira went round, and Buchanan was elected.

Another friend of the sage of Wheatland comes vividly to my recollection. I refer to your dear sir, to you—then in the prime of your talents and manhood; the favorite leader of a great party, and chairman of the Democratic state central committee of Pennsylvania in 1856. Your visits to Wheatland were almost daily, and there right under my eye, I saw you, the energetic young war-horse of Democracy, in consultation with our candidate; planning and developing the canvass. Like a heroic chieftain at the head of his column, I saw you all along the line, in the thickest of the fight. Like Hancock at Gettysburg, always at the front when a decisive blow was to be struck, to turn back the invader, which you did in that canvass and saved Pennsylvania from the Abolition and Know-Nothing cohorts who threatened the republic.

Many a time I heard Mr. Buchanan bear testimony, as I have Governor Dickinson and Mr. John Van Buren, that "to Colonel Forney we were indebted for the Democratic electoral vote of Pennsylvania." That fact has not been forgotten with years. We regarded you then in the light of the political son of Mr. Buchanan, who had given him the best years of your life, and now you come to the standard of Hancock.

Through the dim vista of those twenty-four years, in which you and the writer have been at times at political antipodes, I ask myself, now that we again stand together for the election of another distinguished son of Pennsylvania, has the Prodigal returned, or have we gone to the Prodigal?

Again it is my pleasure to enroll myself in the canvass, and become the campaign artist of General Hancock, and to work with my best energies to secure his election.

I was a glorious reunion when I saw you welcomed at Governor's Island, at the time I was engaged upon my portrait of the general, and I bear testimony that your accession to Democratic ranks is highly prized.

I hope I shall be forgiven for alluding to you as the Prodigal. You do not return alone and do not get come back empty. Legions are flocking to your ranks. They come as the winds come—free I and from all classes and conditions of our citizens. You come with a ripe experience and rich in political law, as scholar, editor and orator, to throw your talents into the scale with tremendous and telling force.

Among the welcome visitors at Governor's Island, none were more welcome than the old-time friend of Buchanan, the successful leader of a campaign which made a president.

Your graceful pen, which gives us in your "Life of General Hancock" those glowing sketches of the wives of our presidents and the ladies who adorned society, adds another jewel to your wealth in your sketch of the gifted and accomplished Mrs. Hancock, the wife of our distinguished general. The Democratic party proudly welcomes all to reunion in its ranks who still cherish the indelible principles of its founders, Washington, Jefferson and Jackson. When principles are sacrificed with men like General Grant to make room for such a Credit Mobilier harlequin as Garfield, we readily conceive why men like yourself naturally gravitate to the ranks of General Hancock. At Governor's Island, as at Wheatland, I find the same union and harmony of principle, and I find the same gathering together again of heroic and conservative men. The nomination of General Hancock is regarded in New York as the very best which could be made. It has already healed all our political dissensions, and we feel as proud of our candidate, over at the sea-girl inn where we can almost shake hands with him, as you, my dear Colonel, do down in Pennsylvania, where you have the proud honor to claim him by birthright.

The cycle of them and now draws to its completion. Buchanan in 1856 and Hancock in 1860—the last, and the next president—Wheatland and Governor's Island—Colonel Forney the friend of and supporter of both, giving his heroic services now as then.

M. Sheehan, of Ocedo, Mich., writes: "I have used Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on horses for different diseases and found it to do just as you recommended. It has done justice for me every time, and is the best oil for horses I ever used." For sale by H. C. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa.

STATISTICS prove that twenty-five per cent of the deaths in our larger cities are caused by consumption, and when we reflect that this terrible disease in its worst stage will yield to a bottle of Locher's Renowned Cough Syrup, shall we condemn the sufferers for their avarice, or pity them for their ignorance? No 9 East King street.

Latent Force.

THAT LATENT FORCE OR FLUID, which permeates all matter, and which bears the conventional name of Electricity, is widely appreciated and recognized as a means of cure in various diseases. Its effects in the form of Thomas' Electric Oil are shown by the relief of pain both Neuralgia and Rheumatism, as well as in the throat and lungs, and in various other healing ways. For sale by H. C. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa.

MEDICAL.

Are the only known remedies that will permanently cure Humors of the Blood and Skin, Affections of the Scalp, Ringworm, Loss of Hair, and Impure Blood. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only ones that will cure all these diseases, and are prepared from the most pure and healthful ingredients. They cleanse the blood, and purify the system, and are sold by all druggists.

CUTICURA SKIN REMEDIES

Are the only known remedies that will permanently cure Humors of the Blood and Skin, Affections of the Scalp, Ringworm, Loss of Hair, and Impure Blood. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only ones that will cure all these diseases, and are prepared from the most pure and healthful ingredients. They cleanse the blood, and purify the system, and are sold by all druggists.

SALT RHEUM.

LAW OFFICE OF CHAS. HOUGHTON, 17 Congress Street, Boston, Feb. 28, 1878.

I feel it a duty to inform you, and through you all who are interested to know the fact, that a most disagreeable and obstinate case of Salt Rheum, or Eczema, which has been under my personal observation from its first appearance to the present time,—about ten (10) years,—covering the greater portion of the patient's body and limbs with its peculiar irritating and itching scales, and to which all the known methods of treating such diseases had been applied, without benefit, has completely disappeared, leaving a clean and healthy skin, by the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES.

CHAS. HOUGHTON.

WONDERFUL CURES.

What cures of Blood and Skin Diseases and Scalp Affections with Loss of Hair can compare with those of the Hon. Wm. Taylor, Boston, State Senator of Massachusetts; Alderman Mackintosh of Chicago; Hon. C. C. Phelps, H. Drake, esq., Detroit, and many other details of which may be had on application to Messrs. Weeks & Potter, Boston, Mass.

CUTICURA REMEDIES

are prepared by WEEKS & POTTER, Chemists and Druggists, 309 Washington street, Boston, and are for sale by all Druggists.

MALT BITTERS.

UNFERMENTED MALT AND HOPS!

THE AGED—Mental and physical debility of the aged begins with loss of appetite and sleep. These two potent causes of premature and rapid decline have their origin in DEBILITY OF THE BLOOD. All other ailments may be warded off if these be restored to a condition of health. To accomplish this beneficent purpose, MALT BITTERS are superior to all other forms of malt and medicine. They are rich in bone and fat-producing material. They vitalize with new life the process of digestion, thereby digesting and assimilating every article of food, thereby enriching and strengthening the blood. They feed the brain, banishing nervousness, melancholy and sleeplessness.

MALT BITTERS are prepared without fermentation from Canadian BARLEY MALT and HOPS, and are free from the objections urged against malt liquors.

Ask for MALT BITTERS prepared by the MALT BITTERS COMPANY, and see that every bottle bears the TRADE MARK, duly SIGNED and enclosed in WAVE LINES.

MALT BITTERS are for sale by all Druggists and W.A.S.W.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

—THE—

Lancaster Organ Manufactory

Without a doubt we furnish the FINEST INSTRUMENTS in the Market. Warerooms 20 North Queen street, Manufactory in the rear. HARRISBURG, Pa. East King Street, 137-139.

Alex. McKillips, Proprietor.

Also Agent for Lancaster County for CHICKERING & SUNS Celebrated

PIANOS.

A Full Line of Sheet and Other Music, Small Instruments, Violins, Banjos, Band Instruments, &c., always on hand.

GEORGIEN.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

LEVAN'S FLOUR

—AT—

No. 237 NORTH PRINCE STREET.

aug27-3d

DRY GOODS.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE FAIR.

A CORDIAL INVITATION

IS EXTENDED BY

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

To their many Lancaster County friends to make their establishment general headquarters during the continuance of the State Fair, opening in this city September 6th.

For the convenience of out-of-town patrons, pleasant Waiting and Toilet Rooms and a Parcel Office, where packages may be left until called for, have been introduced.

While the Fair lasts we shall daily place on exhibition

NEW THINGS IN.....

SILKS,

NEW THINGS IN.....

VELVETS,

NEW THINGS IN.....

SATINS,

NEW THINGS IN.....

DRESS GOODS,

NEW THINGS IN.....

BLACK GOODS,

NEW THINGS IN.....

HOSIERY

—AND—

NEW THINGS IN EVERY DEPARTMENT,

Selected in Europe by our own buyers.

</