DEATH ON THE RAIL.

TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE BY A RAILROAD COLLISION.

An Excursion Train Retreating from a Democratic Demonstration Runs into the Rear of Another in Pittsburgh—Twenty-Five Persons Killed and Many Wounded.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CENSUS.

Superintendent Walker Accounts for the Increase of Population by Proving Republican Incompetence in the Enumeration of 1870—The Tariff and the Business Interest.

A Dreadful Disaster.

The frightful collision which occurred Saturday night at midnight, on the Pennsylvania railroad near Twenty-eighth street crossing, Pittsburgh, was more disastrous than is first reported. Ninety people were killed outright and eleven more have died since, making in all twenty deaths, while as many more are dangerously hurt and physicians say they cannot recover. In addition to these there is a large number who are slightly injured.

The first section of the Wall's accommodation train east left the Union depot at 11:31 p. m., having a large number of passengers who had come to the city to participate in the closing exercises of the exposition and witness the Democratic demonstration. The back platform was so crowded that the headlight on the second section, which was following, could not be seen. The first section stopped at the regular station at Twenty-eighth street, where it was delayed on account of another train which was in the next block. The second section came along at good speed but owing to the crowd on the platform the first section the signal lights were hidden from view and consequently the engine of the second section did not see the train ahead of him until he was so near that his train could not be checked in time to prevent a collision and the engine went crashing into the rear coach of the first section, packed as it was with human beings. The engine burst itself in the front windows among screaming, suffering men, women and children, mangling all who were in its course. The boiler head of the colliding engine was burst off by the shock and scalding water and steam poured over the occupants of the cars as if from a volcano, producing the terrible work that had gone before.

It is impossible to describe the fearful scenes that followed. The groans of the dying and shrieks of those who had lost their friends were frightful. Word was immediately telegraphed to the mayor's office for assistance and twenty-five policemen, with a corps of physicians and wagons were dispatched at once to the scene of the disaster, where they were soon busily employed in alleviating the sufferings of the victims and clearing away the wreck. The wounded who were unable to care for themselves were carried to the soldiers' hospital but a short distance from the accident.

The name of the engineer of the second locomotive is Julius Huey and that of the fireman Rambo. Both are residents of Pittsburgh and escaped uninjured, notwithstanding they stuck to the engine when it plowed through the rear car of the other train.

Twenty-five deaths have occurred as follows: Edward Prenter, of Pittsburgh, aged 27, scalded and died this morning; Homer Kepple, aged 20, lives at East End, scalded; Mrs. Margaret Jacobs, of Pittsburgh, aged 30, scalded and scalded; John J. Forley, of Pittsburgh, aged 45, scalded and burned; Katie Forley, daughter of John J. Forley, aged 16, scalded; Miss Jessie Simco, of West End, aged 16, inhalation of steam; Andrew Schaefer, of Cherry Camp, West End, aged 22, inhalation of steam; Milton H. Edwards, son of Matthew Edwards, aged 25, scalded and inhalation; Miss Sarah Taylor, of Pittsburgh, aged 22, inhalation; James O'Neill, of California, Pa., aged 30, died this morning from scalds; Charles Hetzel, of West Virginia; George Cummings and James Lawrence, East End, and Hugh Muldoon, James Dempsey and William J. Smith, Spring Hill, Pennsylvania; Annie Quinn, Shady Side; Mollie Stinebaugh, East End; Katie Edgewood, Edgewood; Mary Davidson, East End; Mrs. J. P. Riernand, Edgewood; Rose McCabe and Kate Leslie, East End. Those injured painfully but not seriously are Nancy Manley (colored), Catharine Manley, William Manley, all of Westmoreland, and Miss Bessie Riernand, of Pittsburgh.

tion at the South in 1870. The disturbed state of society and the supposed necessity of appointing the assistant marshals wholly from the dominant political party, the members of which, in some sections, were drawn almost exclusively from the race lately emancipated by the effect of war combined to reduce to a very low point the assurance which the country could have of a good census being taken under such a thoroughly bad organization as that provided by the act of 1850.

That the method chosen for dealing with the question of the accuracy of the recent enumeration was a direct test of the count in certain districts in which the apparent gain from the ninth to the tenth census was the most extraordinary. In testing the count the assistance of officials and citizens of undoubted probity were admitted in the selection of the districts to be so canvassed. Mr. Gannett visited six counties of South Carolina which showed extraordinary gains since 1870 and visited in all eighteen enumeration districts. In each of these districts the lists of inhabitants returned to this office were subjected to examination by United States officials or by citizens. In general these citizens were introduced and vouched for by the United States marshal of the judicial district or by the United States collector of internal revenue as not only men of reputation, but, with two exceptions only as also recognized members of the Republican party. In each of the eighteen districts in succession the names of inhabitants were so far identified as to put it beyond a doubt—that the census of 1870 in each of these districts was grossly defective, and, secondly, that the census of 1880 was substantially well taken. In no instance did anything appear in the returns made by the enumerators of 1880. In some districts nearly every family was identified as resident in the township notwithstanding the great extent of the South Carolina townships, some of which embrace one hundred and even two hundred square miles. In all cases the identification was carried far enough as to put it beyond a doubt that the fault of the impossible gains reported over the census of 1870, with the present enumeration, is attributable to the report of Mr. Gannett satisfactorily settles the question as to the fairness of the tenth census in South Carolina. It must be remembered that no reason exists for suspecting that enumeration beyond the fact of extraordinary gain over the reported population of 1870. I know of no reason therefore why any other charge should be made against the enumeration in South Carolina. The presumption which existed against the work has been completely removed by a strong counter presumption has been created by the verification upon the ground of the schedules of inhabitants in the case of eighteen enumeration districts successively taken for special investigation, on account of their exceptionally questionable character.

With reference to emigration from the state between 1860 and 1880 the report concludes as follows: "We do not know fully what effects the destruction of slavery and the vast change resulting in the condition of labor have produced upon the emigrating propensities of the people of South Carolina. We do know that negroes are no longer sold South to cultivate the lands of the Yazoo, the Red river and the Brazos. It is reasonable to suppose that emigration may have been checked, in an equal degree, the outward movement of the white population. A comparison of the 'free' natives of South Carolina living in other states in 1880 with the white natives of South Carolina living in other states in 1870, shows the number to have been respectively 193,389 and 148,574, a reduction of 45,000 in the ten years between 1860 and 1870."

The Tariff Question Settled.

The Democrats, who now control both houses of Congress, have resolved that the tariff question shall no longer be a foot-ball in politics. In December last Eaton, of Connecticut, introduced a bill in the Senate providing for the formation of a committee of nine experts, by whom all matters relating to the tariff on all articles shall be decided, and every member of the United States Senate voted in its favor. The bill is now on the table of the speaker of the House, and will be the first one to be taken up by the House. The speaker (Samuel J. Randall, of Pennsylvania) and all the Democratic members are in favor of its passage. Read the remarks of the author of the bill, made a few days ago, in a public speech: "There is not a member of the House from General Hawley up or down, not one from New England, that would vote for that bill when it comes up in the House, nor one. They dare not do any other way. I want to tell you why they dare not do it. Because all the manufacturing interests of Connecticut have decided themselves in favor of that bill; that is the reason. Because I hold in my hand, as the author of the bill, the petition of all the iron interests of the United States, the whole of it; the petition of all the cotton spinners of the United States, the whole of them, asking for the passage of the bill. There came into my hands, one petition signed by men all over New England, representing a body of men who consume 1,500,000 bales of cotton; representing men who employ 300,000,000 capital; who employed 500,000 hands and gave bread and meat to 2,000,000 people. It is simply knavish to say that the Democratic party is against the interests of New England and the country. When a man makes a charge of this character against the party to which I am attached, when all the industrial interests have begged me to assist in the passage of this bill, I say it is knavish to charge that the Democratic party is opposed to the manufacturing interests of the country."
