THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 21, 1880.

Boston's Queer Bank.

The Manager and Cashier in the Tombs.

The Boston Advertiser, of yesterday, says: At about ten o'clock on Saturday forenoon, Mrs. Howe, the "manager" of the "Ladies' Deposit," was arrested at the establishment, No. 2 East Brookline street, by Inspectors Skelton and Hanscom, on a warrant issued by the municipal court, at the request of District Attorney Stevens.

On entering the house, the officers were met by two women, who at first denied that Mrs. Howe was in the house, but finally consented to tell where she was, provided the officers would not arrest her. They found the door of her apartment locked, and were compelled to spring a lock to effect an entrance. They found Mrs. Howe in bed and commanded her to come forth, which she did, fully dressed. She was permitted to send for her carriage, in which she rode to the City hall. The officers then returned to the house and took in custody Mrs. J. A. Gould, the agent of the "Deposit." On the way to join Mrs. Howe, the latter claimed that she was merely an employee of the establishment, and that all moneys received by her were paid over to Miss Susan Crandall, the bookkeeper, who in turn passed them over to Mrs. Howe. An unnecessary and was told to get bail, and the two were taken to the Tombs, where they have since been confined. In an interview with a reporter on Saturday evening, Mrs. Howe is said to have made the following new statement, contradicting in many respects her former statements. She declared that she had been the agent of others in the business. About five years ago, she went on to say, she was first employed while living in Garland street. She was instructed to take on deposit all money from women who were desirous of depositing for one year. She (Mrs. Howe) first worked as agent for one Mary A. Rogers, until her death in February last in Florida, when she succeeded her as president. Miss Crandall and Miss Gould were both employed by her, and she had many other depositors there were, or how much money was on deposit at that time, as those who employed her had carried off the books. She had never signed a note for deposits since she ceased to be agent for Mrs. Rogers. The money taken each day was placed in a basket, and every evening some of the men behind the deposit came to the house, counted it and took it away. Then each morning some one of the men, sometimes two, would call at the house and leave her what they thought might be necessary to carry on the business of the day. Sometimes they would take away at night $5,000 and $10,000, and bring for her the next day $500 to get through that day's business. She felt certain that if the risk of the past few days had not come, she would have been so prolonged she could have paid every cent claimed by depositors. The rush was so great that those who employed her told her she must not pay out anything to parties who had received interest for a certain time in advance. In the present crisis she would have paid all the interest for those who she worked had not shut down in supplying her with funds. The crash finally came by their refusing to allow her to pay any of the principal on which interest had been paid up to January first, although she felt sure they could have supplied her with all the funds necessary for the purpose. Last May she went to her house on Brooklyn street, which she declares that she bought and fitted up with her own money, though she says her salary was about a hundred dollars a month, and that upon her death all her property would go to the managers of the "Deposit," who now have possession of $2,400 of her money. Concerning the men whom she declares are behind the bank she will say little. She does say, however, that the Deposit was in the control of twelve men, all of whom are rich and stand high socially. All, from their age, are presumably men of family, and live out of town. Others of them sleep and eat together, and some of them have offices down town and are well known in the business community. A couple of them reside at the West End. Some of them drive fast horses, at least they did when she went out to ride with them. No two of them hardly ever came to the bank together, but generally one or two of the two men who usually came evenings to take the money away, they did not come but very seldom until the present trouble occurred. She threatened that if she was not protected in her present unhappy condition she would be "a weeping and gnashing of teeth that will even surpass any howl ever heard in Rome." The foregoing is the substance of the story this garrulous woman now tells.

Mrs. Gould, it is stated, on Saturday night denied knowing anything about the managers of the bank, and she said that what had become of the money that had been received. She said she received a stipend quarterly for her services, and was also provided with a room and board. Notwithstanding these statements, it is a well-known fact that she has been constantly asserting that she knew the concern to be a substantial affair, and that it was upheld and sustained by persons of character and position and of good financial standing. Within the last ten days, since the run began, she has done much to inspire confidence in the concern, and has by this means induced many to allow their money to remain on deposit at a time when they were contemplating withdrawing it, and would have been saved from loss had it not been for the confidence they had in her honesty.

The application of Augustus Russ, esq., to the supreme court for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of all the goods and effects of the "deposit" was favorably received on Saturday, and an injunction granted against any interference with the property until after a hearing is made to-morrow, when, if the injunction is made permanent, a receiver will be appointed and the property equitably distributed among creditors.

Astonished the Town.

Ellen Tree in New York Years Ago.

A writer in Appleton's Journal gives the following reminiscences of Ellen Tree. The house was crowded; in the pit, all black coats, in the boxes, a brilliant array of fashion. The play was "The Gamester." With great impatience we waited for the moment when the great actress was to appear. Presently the play began; and shortly the scenes parted, and we saw standing by a chair and table a woman of middle height, rather red in the face, not a first sight comely or pleasing, somewhat oddly dressed, and very English in the many little details by which we recognize nationality. Of course, she had a corial greeting; and then she spoke. We came, ere long, to think Mrs. Kean's voice the most charming and musical in the world, but it did not impress us this way at first. There was a peculiarity in the inflections that fell upon our unaccustomed ear somewhat disagreeably, but

LIBRARY OF

Universal Knowledge.

LARGE TYPE Edition. A verbatim reprint of the last (1880) London edition of Chambers's Encyclopaedia, with copious additions (about 15,000 topics) by American editors; the whole under one alphabet, with such illustrations as are necessary to elucidate the text. Printed from new electrotype plates, heavy type, on superior paper, and bound in 15 elegant octavo volumes of about 900 pages each. It will contain, complete, about 10 per cent more than Appleton and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopaedia, and though in all respects important to the general reader, it is far superior to either of them, in that it is a complete encyclopedia of the general reader. Volumes I and II are ready October 1, and other volumes will follow at least two each month, the entire work being completed by April, 1881, and probably sooner. Price per volume, in cloth, $1.50; in half Russia, gilt top, $2.00; postage, per volume, 2 cents. It

OCTOBER has been our custom in previous publications to offer special inducements on this policy, on or before October 31 only, we will receive orders, with cash, for the set of 15 volumes complete for the nominal price of $20 for the edition in cloth, and $25 for the edition in half Russia, gilt top. The price during November will be advanced to $20.50 and $25.50 and a further advance will be made each month till the work is completed. It is not supposed that the mass of those who will in time become purchasers of the Encyclopaedia will make payment in advance as they now have the opportunity to do, though most of them do pay for their papers and magazines a full year in advance—but the old, tried friends of the Literary Revolution, who know that the American Book Exchange always accomplishes what it undertakes, and does what it promises to do, will be glad to save $5 by investing $10 and get the earliest and consequently best printed copies of the largest and best Encyclopaedia ever published in this country, even at ten times its cost. Volumes will be shipped as may be directed, as they are issued, or when the set is complete.

CHAMBERS'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.

As a portion of the Library of Universal Knowledge, we issue Chambers's Encyclopaedia separately, without the American additions, complete in 15 volumes in mo. In this style it is printed from new electrotype plates made from very clear nonpareil type. Price, American edition, cloth, $20; in half Russia, gilt top, postage, per volume, 2 cents. Volume I will be ready in October, and other volumes will follow as rapidly as possible, the whole being completed by April, 1881, and probably sooner. Price for the set of four volumes during October only, net, for the cloth, $4 for the half Russia, gilt top. The four volumes of American Additions will be found well-nigh indispensable to all owners of Chambers's, Appleton's, Johnson's and all other Encyclopaedias except the large type edition of the Library of Universal Knowledge, from which it is compiled.
