SKETCHES IN OIL.

Romeo and the Apothecary. "Come hither, Doc," said Romeo Unto the druggist man, " And fix for me a poisoned pill As quickly as you can.

"O give me some swift-speeding drug As will itself dispense Like lightning through a mortal's veins And send that mortal hence !"

"Such deadly drugs I have, my son, Among my stock in trade, But Mantua's law is instant death; Therefore, I am afraid."

"That art so full of wretchedness, Starvation's in thine eye; Upon thy back hangs poverty-

Oh, mix it on the sly !" "My poverty," the druggist said, "But not my will, consents;" And then be mixed the potion,

And took the twenty cents. "Take this in anything thou wilt, And you have met your fate;

Had you the strength of twenty men Ii would di-patch you straight."

" Leave that to me," said Romeo, The speaking demagogue: "I want this deadly pizen To kill a neighbor's dog."

Care of Horses' Hoofs in Winter.

The following advice and comments on this subject, which we find in the Chicago Field, is timely and on more importance than a large majority of persons keeping horses ever dream of. They cannot but know, however, how much depends on the sound condition of the horses' hoofs. They cannot but observe, when a horseman examines an animal, that the hoof is the first object that attracts his attention, and with what care he scrutinizes every part of it. Hence, the remarks which we append will be acknowledged to be well-expressed and the information imparted to be worth the first consideration in the management of the hoof of the horse:

"Lack of moisture in not necessarily a cause of brittleness of the hoof, since the horse has a strong Loof. A continued drought is especially dangerous when it acts on a foot accustomed to abundance of water. Under the action of water the horn cells absorb, increase in size and push each other apart. By this action, too, some of the gelatinous matter that builds up the horn is dissolved out, and when the hoof is again allowed to dry it has lost its power of cohesion. The more frequently the process of soaking and drying is re peated the more hurtful it proves to the hoof, which becomes increasingly brittle and liable to split up. If, farther, this tendency to brittleness has been inbred through generations of horses, where the feet are alternately soaked by drenching rains, and withered by drying suns, the danger is proportionately increased, and the feet of such a race of horses are especially liable to splitting and injury. It is not habitual dryness that injures, it is the alternations of rain and drought. While upon this subject it may be well to note that the evil effects of moisture may be largely warded off by smearing the moistened foot with an impervious oily agent before exposing it to the drying process. In this way the moisture that has been absorbed by the born is retained, the sudden drying and shrinking are obviated, and the horn remains elastic and comparatively tough. As it is often needful to soak the foot in warm or cold water, or in poulties in eases of disease, it is all-important that the above named precaution should be constantly borne in mind, and that the softened foot should be smeared throughout with some hoof ointment before it is allowed to dry and harden. For this purpose nothing is simpler nor better than a mixture in equal parts of tar and whale oil or lard. This may be

"In addition to the changes of the weather, the frequent standing in rotten dung heaps or the pools of decomposed liquid manure, may be named as causes of brittle hoofs. In the dung heap there is not only the moisture and steam soaking and softening the hoof, but there is abundance of ammonia gas, which is especially calculated to soften, dissolve and destroy the horn. Rotten manuve and putrid liquors, therefore, are much more injurious than pure water, muddy pools or wet clay Again the emanations of this kind are far from conducive to general health, so that they prove hurtful in two ways, first, by directly destroying the substance of the hoof, and second, by reducing the animal vigor, the power of digestion and assimilation, and the power of secreting good horn. Standing in such decomposing organic matter is still more injurious however, when the animal is confined to a stall or box, for here the injurious effect of inactivity is added to the above named condismeared on the foot every other day.

"Long exposure to wet and mud also at this time of year freduently produce cracks and other troubles in horses' feet. The prevention is in keeping the feet clean by frequent washing and wiping dry with a coarse stable cloth. A little crude petroleum applied to the feet before the horses are taken from the stable will help greatly in preventing them from becoming cracked. If the feet are already in bad shape they should be bandaged and the horse kept where it is dry. Cleanliness is the most effective prevention of troubles in the feet of horses."

Butter and Cheese Factories.

Germantown Telegraph. Few of the modern contrivances for rendering American farming profitable are deserving of more attention and encouragement on the part of our farmers themselves than the establishments for the manufacture of butter and cheese on a large scale, which now flourish so extensively in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio. This business originated in the state of New York, where it has become quite large, and has been the principal cause of building up the dairy interests of the state to such remarkable proportions. Penn-sylvania is really one of the very best regions of the country for dairy farming, but this particular form of utilizing our dairy products was only introduced here long after it had attained great magnitude in New York, and was making rapid headway in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. This business, besides furnishing staple products for the home market adequate to the largest possible demand, has enabled us to become extensive importers of but ter and cheese to Great Britian and continental Europe, where American cheese has become a preferred article. Altimach late in turning her attention to the establishment of butter and cheese factories, Pennsylvania seems at last to be going ahead in it laboriously, perseveringly, and with great earnestness, zeal and success. Wherever these factories are established they at once furnish good markets for the milk and cream produced by all dairies for miles around. Under such circumstances there is every possible inducement to undertake ses wherever the capital can be raised for the purpose.

Ask your druggist for Prof. Guilmette's French Kidney Pad, and take no other, as this is the only pad guaranteed to cure or money

It Seems Impossible

That a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., should make so many and such marvelous and wonderful cures as Hop Bitters do, but when old and young, rich and poor, Pastor and Loctor, Lawyer and Editor, all testify to saving been cured by them, you must believe and try them yourself, and doubt no longer.
